Feb. 16: "Turning defeat into victory." "The victory that overcomes the world is faith in God and His righteousness."

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, D. D.

Passages for reference—Matt. xxvi, 36-46; Ps. lxxxvi.

The conflict between good and evil is one of the plainest things set forth in the Bible. The Psalms especially have many references to this. The problem of evil is an ever present tragic element in human life. Every one has to face it in some form. No one lives long in this world without coming to the consciousness that some things are right and some things are wrong. With the knowledge of this distinction comes the equally clear conviction of obligation to choose and do the right. And after every action in which these elements are involved comes an unmistakable consciousness of approval or disapproval according as the course pursued has been the right or wrong.

But there is more than this involved. If the wrong is chosen, there is a conscious dislike of the right, which grows even stronger as the wrong is persisted in. This gradually comes to be antagonism and enmity toward those who choose the right course. Its strongest expression is hatred of right and of the righteous.

Choice of the right implies opposition to all wrong and also of necessity to all wrongdoers. There can be no possible harmony between the two. One or the other must succeed. There can be no compromise, no middle ground. Each must and will use its own weapons.

The words of the Bible are plain as to the course to be pursued. The evil is not to be harbored, but is to be withstood. "Be not overcome of evil." On the other hand, it is to be actively resisted and overcome, but the mistake must not be made of trying to overcome one evil by another. "Overcome evil with good." There is no other way to permanent victory and lasting peace.

The imprecations in the Psalms and other Scriptures are to be understood in this light. The good must ever long for the removal of the evil. It is not vindictive to desire the destruction of all wickedness. Much of very poor sentimentality has been wasted on explanations of some of the Psalms which pray for the destruction of enemies and the rooting out of the wicked from the earth. A good, healthy abhorrence of vice and the vicious will do more to clean up this old earth and bring in purity and love than all the weak coddling of crime and criminals.

The victory that overcomes the world is faith in God and His righteousness. It is audacious sometimes in its daring. Joseph tried it and turned defeat into victory. The good triumphed in his case, and the evil has ever since been pilloried and shamed before the world. Daniel overcame his enemies and turned defeat into victory. David was hated and hunted because he was righteous. He waited for God, and defeat was for him turned into victory. He gives an example to men for all time of patience under persecution and refusal to force God's time and plans.

Jesus shows the supreme example of victory over all powers of evil. He endured all power of enmity of evil against the good, waited the will and time of the Father and overcame by the power of the eternal spirit of holiness. In death itself He was victorious and brought life and immortality to light.

Unto him that overcometh are all the promises of the future made.

Laughter as a Christian Duty.

There is a place in this world and a mission for humor. The man who can make others laugh may be a great blessing to his fellows. There are times in one's experience when a bit of fun is better, more a means of grace, than a serious sermon would be. There are times when the best help we can give to a friend is to make him laugh. The wise man says, "A merry heart is a good medicine."

A hearty laugh would cure many a sickly feeling, driving away the blues and changing the whole aspect of life for a man. The gift of bright, cheerful humor is one to be envied. The man who can keep people laughing at the table is both a promoter of health and a dispenser of happiness. We may set laughter down, therefore, among Christian duties.—Forward.

The Best In the Heart.

"The best in the heart?" said a mortal.
"The best in the heart is joy.
Pleasure and gladness unsullied,
A buoyancy naught can destroy.
The fairest of graces is gladness—
The best in the heart is joy."

"The best in the heart?" said another.
"The best in the heart is hope—
Hope to hear songs in the silence,
To run where we now only grope,
To follow sweet visions that vanish—
The best in the heart is hope."

"The best in the heart?" one made answer.
"The best in the heart is faith,
To feel, though the Father may slay us,
His mercy and love are no myth,
To believe in the goodness of mankind—
The best in the heart is faith."

"The best in the heart?" said another.
"The best in the heart is peace,
Peace that abides with us ever,
Though storm clouds their waters release
And pitiless rains beat upon us,
The best in the heart is peace."

"The best in the heart?" said a mortal.
"The best in the heart is love,
Love for the creatures about us,
And love for the Maker above,
Love for the high and the lowly—
The best in the heart is love."

"The best in the heart?" said the Christian.
"The best in the heart is God,
God who is love, faith and gladness,
The fountain from which flows abroad
All worthy of having or being—
The best in the heart is God!"
—Margaret A. Richard in Forward.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Feb. 16, 1908.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Ministering to prisoners and the poor.—Matt. xxv, 31-36.

In this wonderful description that Christ has given us of the day when God shall judge the world and the practical basis upon which judgment shall be based He gives us a list of the classes of people toward whom Christian sympathy and benevolence should be exercised. In this list we find not only the "strangers and the sick," but also "prisoners and the poor." "I was in prison, and ye came unto me." "I was hungry, and ye fed Me; thirsty, and ye gave me drink." The prisoners behind the bars and the starving and thirsty poor are to be objects of our interest and consideration. That the poor should be is a most natural thing, but the Master took an advanced step in philanthropy when He declared that a visit to an imprisoned criminal was a visit to Him. But this is only another illustration of the broad mission of Christ into the world.

Paganism took no benevolent interest in those whom the state had debarred of their liberty for crimes against an individual or society, but Christ had sympathy for all men. He Himself was once a prisoner, though falsely accused. He was even condemned and executed. He died between two malefactors and saved the soul of one of them. His apostles and many of His saints have known what it was to endure the weariness and hardships of prison life. Remembering His words and these things, our sympathy and aid are to be extended toward prisoners as well as the poor.

What young people can do for prisoners is a most perplexing problem. There is one comfort in the fact that prison life today is not what it has been in days gone by. Philanthropic societies, either Christian or inspired by a Christian spirit, have done much to alleviate the sufferings and barbarous treatment that characterized a prisoner's life in the centuries gone by. This work is still progressing. The state itself is realizing more and more that imprisonment should be exercised with mercy as well as justice. Society must protect itself against lawbreakers, but in doing so it is being recognized that reformation as well as punishment must be kept in mind. If not the man who leaves the prison door has become only a more dangerous foe to society and the state. In most of our prisons there are first class libraries, and daily papers are admitted. Religious services are conducted regularly, and some have chaplains. In a number of our prisons Christian Endeavor societies have been organized, and the hearts of many of these unfortunates in prisons and in jails have been cheered by Christian Endeavor services. The average Christian Endeavorer has little opportunity for this work, but there is one thing all can do, and that is to pray for the salvation of those imprisoned. Christ heard the prayer of the dying thief for himself, and He can and will hear our prayers in behalf of modern malefactors.

Christian benevolence toward the poor is unlimited for want of opportunity. "The poor we have always with us." There is possibly no Christian Endeavor society that has not some opportunity to care for the poor. Sometimes they are God's poor, and sometimes they consist of those who through their own faults have brought poverty upon them. But these questions should not concern us. We serve in Christ's name and for His sake. Is any one in need? Can I help him? If so the duty rests upon us to do it. Let us remember also that our benevolences will not save us. We work for Christ because we are saved and not to be saved. On this foundation only rests true Christian charity, such as will bring His welcome plaudit, "Well done."

BIBLE READINGS.

Deut. xv, 11; Job xxix, 15, 16; Ps. xxxiv, 1-6; Matt. x, 40-42; xxvi, 11; Luke xxiii, 33-43; Acts iv, 1-4; II Cor. viii, 9; II Tim. i, 16-18; Jas. ii, 14-26.

Moral Mountain Climbing.

The other day in a Christian Endeavor meeting in Paris the testimony that touched my heart the most was that of a young lady, who told us how when she first spoke for her Master in an Endeavor meeting, hesitating and trembling and afraid of her own voice, as she sat down a little girl by her side, who knew of her bashfulness, reached over and took her hand with a comforting squeeze. She said no word, but that gesture told of the little girl's love and sympathy. It was one of the steps that unconsciously led two souls up the tablelands and into the sunlight of God's presence.

But what is our whole system of Christian Endeavor if it is not a series of unconscious steps up invisible mountains? The prayer meetings, in a sense, are routine affairs. Fulfilling the pledge, in our discouraged moments, may seem like a perfunctory obligation, the committees like the lifeless parts of a machine, but one great object of the society is to form habits of well doing, habits of confession, of devotion, of service.—Rev. Francis E. Clark, D. D., in Irish Endeavorer.

With Foreign Flavor.

The Endeavorers in Adelaide, South Australia, have formed a cycle corps that travels on moonlight nights to the outlying weaker societies and helps in their meetings.

There are in Leeds, England, 3,000 senior Endeavorers, and of these nearly one-quarter are Sunday school teachers.

The Isle of Man Christian Endeavor union has added nine new societies during the past year, and its membership has increased from 850 to 1,517.

The open hours of our Safe Deposit Department have been so arranged that the commuter may have access as early as 8:15 a. m.
This and other features should commend it to the New York business man.

NASH AND SKELLY WIN

Local Team Lands First Money in the Twelve Hour Bowling Contest.

ROLLED A TOTAL OF 3424 PINS.

Willett and Britton Finish a Close Second and Newarkers Crowd Another Local Man, Is Released In $200 Bail.

Taking the lead at the outset and holding it the greater part of the time, V. W. Nash, Jr., and Louis Skelly, of this city, won the twelve hour bowling contest at Campbell's alleys yesterday. They rolled a total of 3,424, besting eight other teams in the struggle, four of them coming from Newark where they had landed first money in similar matches. Another Plainfield team, Frank Willet and Ed Britton, finished second and Kearny and Rue, of Newark, got third money. Smith, of New Brunswick, and E. A. Laing, of Plainfield, finished fourth.

The contest started at 11 o'clock yesterday morning and ended at 11 last night. A total of eighteen games was rolled and of these Nash shot fourteen for his team. He was in good form but was crowded hard by Ed Britton, who went by him several times and who had been picked as the winner. At the end of the sixteenth game, Willettt and Britton stood at 2992, while Nash and Skelly were only two pins behind. Despite the long grind, Nash was in good trim for the finish and put up two big scores, 212 and 222, shoving the combination well to the front. Willett and Britton's total was 3361, Kearny and Rue's 3181 and Smith and Laing's 3172.

The rolling was watched by a big crowd all through and interest in the figures being piled up was divided by the struggle between Nash and Britton for the best individual average. It was nip and tuck from start to finish and Britton finally won out by a point and a fraction. His average for eleven games was 192.3, while Nash had 191.8. Smith chalked up 180.13 and Bank, of Newark, went on the board for 179.2. High score for the eighteen games was a 236 made by Britton.

In the last round, Smith missed a spare in the tenth frame and Kearny doubled, a lucky grab that gave his team third money by nine pins. Banks, of Newark, had a chance for fourth prize but failed to make a much needed double. Mack and Weiss, of Newark, of whom much was expected, were a disappointment.

The match was in every way one of the most interesting that has ever been conducted in the city and will serve as an impetus for the sport. It was arranged and conducted by John Campbell, proprietor of the alleys, and he remained in personal charge during the twelve hours. His rules gave every satisfaction and the treatment he accorded the bowlers on all points served to increase his popularity. The prize money aggregated $100, of which $30 goes to the winning team, $20 to the second team; $15 to the third team, and $10 to the fourth. The prizes for average were $10 first, $7 second, $5 third and $3 fourth.

The scores:

HOPE Y.M.C. FIVE LOST TO ORIENTAL A.C.

Out-classed and out-played by the basketball team from the Oriental A. C., of Red Bank, the Hope Y. M. C. five was defeated by a score of 56-36 in a one-sided game played at the Hope chapel gymnasium yesterday afternoon. The visitors took the lead early in the game and the Hope five were never ahead, the first half ending with the score 31-19 in favor of the Orientals.

While all the members of the visitors' five scored at least three baskets apiece in the course of the game, the Hope boys relied principally on the work of Mortimer, Snyder and Hunter. Mortimer found the iron hoop nine times, scoring the most baskets made in the game by star individual playing. The fives were evenly matched in team work, but the visitors had the advantage in individual work, scoring on some sensational shots. The lineups and summaries:

Oriental A. C.	Hope Y. M. C.
Buryns	Hunter
	left forward.
	right forward.
Holmes	Rimmer

GEO. J. WHELAN PLANS TO INSURE EMPLOYES

George J. Whelan, of East Front street, president of the United Cigar Stores Company, with Mrs. Whelan, was among the arrivals at the Marlboro-Blenheim at Atlantic City yesterday. Mr. Whelan returned from Cuba a few days ago, where he had been studying the probable yield of tobacco for the coming year and arranging for purchases. He has under consideration at the present time two plans for insuring the lives of members of the selling force of his company, which employs about three thousand men.

One plan would provide for an immediate payment of $1,000 to any beneficiary named by the clerk, in the event of the clerk's death, provided the clerk had been in the service of the United Cigar Stores Company continuously for a year or longer. Another plan would provide for a monthly payment of $25 to the beneficiary for five years. This, as Mr. Whelan figures it out, would amount to an annuity or yearly payment of $300, or for the period of five years a payment of $1,500. Mr. Whelan has asked an expression of opionion from every man connected with the company as to what his preference would be as to the two plans.

The Nonpareil Social Club gave a largely attended minstrel show and dance in Saengerbund Hall last night. The affair was arranged as a means to secure funds for erecting a club house and was decidedly successful.

In the show, Henry Karney acted as end man; William Jones, George Hewlin, Howard Cobbs, Seymour Van Blake were the bones, and Robert Stevens and William Mayse, Lew Peterson and Jack Hegeman were the tambos. John Taylor and William Wilson contributed a specialty that made a big hit. Alfred White was in charge of the music and Richard Norwood acted as coach. Lewis Peterson was in charge of the dancing.

Burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery. Mr. FitzGerald was at one time a resident of Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., where he held the office of street commissioner and was afterward a resident of New York city for a long time, conducting a masonry business. He moved from there to the borough several years ago. Mr. FitzGerald was a member of St. Joseph's church and took an active interest in all matters of the parish. He leaves two daughters, Mrs. Andrew L. Carney and Miss Agnes FitzGerald and one son, James FitzGerald.

—Plans are about complete for the annual fair of Co. K to be held February 22-29 in the armory on West Front street. Captain H. B. Kitchell is the head of the general committee and a number of fine attractions are promised. There will be dancing every night.

EPISCOPALIANS PLAN ANGLO-ROMAN UNION

The Anglo-Roman union, an organization whose purpose is to promote the reunion of the Protestant Episcopal Church with the Apostolic See at Rome, was formed in New York city Tuesday night, at a meeting of a score of members of the Protestant Episcopal faith. All of the score of persons in attendance are affiliated with the High church branch of the Anglican faith, by which name te Protestant Episcopal church is frequently called.

The conference, which was presided over by Rev. Father Paul James Francis, of Garrisons, N. J., general of the Society of Atonement, numbered delegates from New York, Jersey City and Philadelphia, with the laymen, however, in the majority. These officers were elected: President, W. M. Cammack, of Philadelphia; vice presidents, Rev. Dr. Theodore M. Riley, rector of Christ church, Hudson, N. Y., and W. A. Buchanan, of Philadelphia; council, Rev. Father C. P. A. Burnett, Rev. Father B. J. Fitz, Very Rev. Father F. E. Aitkens, Michigan City, Ind., for the clergy, with George Hazlehurst, of Philadelphia; Dr. H. M. King, of Liberty, N. Y., and E. L. Prior, of Jersey City, as lay members. The secretary is Rev. Augustus Elmendorf, of Jersey City, and the treasurer is J. W. Barney, of Jersey City.

The organization is intended to be an association particularly of laymen and organized on lines similar to those of the English Church union. Its objects as stated in the constitution are: "The maintenance and defense of Catholic principles and the forwarding of a corporate reunion of the Anglicans with the Apostolic See, the basis being the belief in the Roman primacy."

The union will also fight against the canon of the open pulpit, which was adopted at the general convention held in Richmond last October.

THE THEATRE CAT.

One Time When It Saved a Show and Another When It Disrupted It.

"There was a play on in a house where I worked; it had a pretty good cast, but everybody was nervous because it didn't measure up strong in lines and situations. On the opening night there's a crowded house, but the first act is a sad sketch. We know the second will be worse, because, barring a lot of quiet talk-talk, there's nothing in it but a swell setting with a fine open fireplace and real gas logs down left.

"It's a cold, sleety night, and Pete, our house cat, has been out visiting. He comes in while the act is on and walks down off side. He looks across and sees the logs burning, and naturally they appeal to him. First thing you know he starts over the stage with a dignified actor walk,and proceeds to make his toilet right down in front of the blaze.

"Say, the homelike effect is great! The two stars don't notice and go right on. I'm looking for the house to throw a laugh, but insted of that, a few moments later, there's a burst of applause that almost knocks us silly.

"Next day the papers were enthusiastic about 'the wonderful piece of realism,' and said the cat is the best actor in the cast and has made a success of what would have been a sure frost.

"Of course you kept Pete in the play," said the student.

"We did," said the veteran reminiscently. "Luckily next day was Sunday, so an early rehearsal is called to break Pete in on that scene. The log-fire is set going, and Pete is carried down and his head pointed from the opposite entrance. But it's no go. He just turns and sneaks for the prop room. The boss thinks of a plan to open everything up and chill off the stage so that the heat will attract Pete. But it don't work; and anyway, the ladies say they'll quit if they have to take chances on getting pneumonia.

"It's about 10 o'clock at night with everybody exhausted and sore, when the property-boy dopes out the way. He's a bright kid, and knew a thing or two about cat nature. Says he:

"'No cat ain't damn fool enough to let itself be trained to do extra work. Lookin' after rats and mice is Pete's job, and we got to make him do the stunt along them lines.'

"The manager is down and out; he says go ahead and try something. So the kid produces a trap with two mice in it he had set for his and Pete's amusement. Pete is immediately very much lit up, and if we hold him off side and set the cage by the fireplace, he makes a beeline across. Then the kid cuts a little hole in one corner of the fireplace and sticks one of the mice's heads out from behind just far enough for Pete to see, but not reach. After he gets on to the game, he'll sneak across the stage and camp in front of the fire and just sit there quiet, watchin' and wavin' his tail, same as any cat on the trail. After that by keeping him hungry and always pushin' out a mouse when the curtain drops, we manage to pull through a season of ten weeks with only one fall-down."

"What was that?" asked the student.

"Well," said the veteran, "one night the boy who is holding the mouse lets it slip. It jumps by Pete and reaches where the leading lady is sobbing out some tender lines.Pete is right behind and makes a beautiful merry-go-round chase circling her skirts. The audience thinks it's great; and, by gum, the manager was fool enough to figure if we could repeat it."

"Did you try?" asked the student.

"Not on your life," said the veteran. "The leading lady said she'd quit on the spot if they ever pulled a rehearsal."—John S. Lopez, in Harper's weekly.

The reception was tendered by the directors of the association, assisted by a committee of the women's auxiliary. Both Mrs. Robbie and Mrs. Parker were present, as well as Physical Director George L. Listman and wife, and Boys' Secretary L. A. Soule.

It has been through the efforts of Mr. Robbie, who has been at the local association since July, 1902, that the boys' department of the association has been formed and has grown to its present state of efficiency, with a membership of nearly 200 boys. Previous to taking up the work in this city, Mr. Robbie had been boys' secretary at the associations in New Haven, Conn., and Holyoke, Mass. When he came to the local association, there were about fifty boy members, and his first work was the organization of the boys' department, effected October 1, 1902. He served as boys' secretary until 1906, when, upon the resignation of J. H. Manning, he was appointed general secretary of the association.

In the course of his informal remarks of farewell at the reception, last night, the retiring general secretary spoke of the many pleasant memories in the work with the boys here. He thanked the association officers and members for their support of the work he was doing and urged that his successor be given the same whole-hearted support. Speaking in lighter vein in conclusion, Mr. Robbie said that Plainfield and especially the Plainfield public schools, would always be remembered by him. He was married in 1904, his wife having been a teacher in the Irving School.

Herbert E. Parker, who assumes his duties as general secretary within a few days, also made informal remarks. He comes to the work from Trenton, where he has been acting as assistant secretary of the association there since August, 1906. Previous to that he was assistant secretary of the Scranton, Pa., association for a year. He spoke simply in acknowledgement of his reception, emphasizing the importance of the work of the association to the boys, the young men, the city, and finally, the nation. He said that the association has a broader field of work than the churches, and that all denominations should co-operate with it in the three-fold development of body, mind and spirit.

Rev. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, referred to the Y. M. C. A. as the executive right arm of the church. He said that while association work could never take the place of the work of the church, the fundamental aims were the same, and should be earnestly supported. He spoke of the loss of Mr. and Mrs. Robbie, who have been members of his church during their residence here, as the loss of his personal friends, and tendered to them his best wishes, in the name of the association and the church.

President J. W. Gavett, of the association, presided during the speeches. Refreshments were served by a committee of members of the women's auxiliary. During the evening there were vocal solos by Miss Grace Carroll and Martin A. Korff rendered several violin selections. The auditorium was tastefully decorated for the occasion. The association committee in charge of the affair consisted of A. B. Beers, Morris C. Van Arsdale and W. D. Murray.

Dustin Farnum Coming.

Manager Counihan today concluded arrangements for the appearance in this city of Dustin Farnum in his new play, "The Rector's Garden." He will be at the New Plainfield theatre on Monday night, February 24. Mr. Farnum was the star for three years in "The Virginian" but for the past season has been presenting Augustus Thomas' play, "The Ranger."

Wise Women.

A resident of Ravine road found a muff near her home yesterday and appreciating the value of The Daily Press as an advertising medium, sought an owner for the lost article through its columns. Within a few hours the owner saw the advertisement, and after obtaining it, called at this office to express her thanks.

CONTRACTOR KIRCH IS NOW IN BANKRUPTCY

Through Counsellor Francis J. Blatz, William H. Kirch, a contractor of North Plainfield, filed a petition in bankruptcy yesterday in the United States District Court at Trenton. The petition shows the liabilities to be $4,900 and the assets $3,150. The settlements will be in charge of W. V. Steele, of Somerville, referee in bankruptcy proceedings.

Mr. Kirch has been one of the leading contractors of the city for many years and has enjoyed a good reputation for business integrity. His action is entirely due to the fact that he has been unable to collect money due him from contracts already executed. If he were able to make proper collections, it is said, he would have sufficient to meet all claims against him.

About twenty creditors are listed in the petition.

SOMERSET SCHOOL PUPILS' QUICK TIME IN FIRE DRILL

Leaving the school building in exactly fifty seconds, the pupils of the Somerset street school demonstrated the efficiency of the school fire drill to Supervising Principal Sage, of Warren Township this morning. The general alarm was sounded at 11:20 without any previous warning and the pupils filed rapidly and quietly from the building by its three entrances. Mr. Sage, who was Mr. Krebs' guest at the school this morning, was enthusiastic over the rapid and orderly system in use at the school.

The test was of especial value in that it was the first fire drill since Miss Brundage and Mr. Scarborough have been at the school. Scarborough is at the school temporarily, being a member of the senior class of the State Normal School, who, with two other members of his class is getting practical teaching experience at the school. As soon as the building was emptied, the pupils began to file back, and were at work in their various class rooms again in four minutes after the alarm was sounded.

ARCANUMITES MOURN FOR DEPARTED BROTHER.

Regent William R. Townsend, of Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, at a regular meeting, last night, issued a call for a special session to be held Monday night to act on the papers in the case of Leonard S. Smith, who was a member of the Council, and whose death occurred Wednesday afternoon. Plainfield Council has the reputation for prompt action following the death of a member and no time will be lost in adjusting the claim. Mr. Townsend has appointed A. L. Force, D. W. Littell and Edward Grannatt a committee to examine and report on the claim.

The Council was visited last night by Grand Vice Regent Theodore S. Class, of Westfield, and R. P. VanZandt, of Bound Brook, chairman of the committee on the state of the order. Both made interesting addresses, showing the gratifying progress made by the order in this State.

National Mining and Leasing Company Acquire Interest In Property That Has Produced $857,764.94.

Mr. E. D. Middlekauff, who has just returned from a two weeks' trip to the lead and zinc district of Missouri-Kansas, reports that the National Mining and Leasing Company has acquired an undivided one-fourth interest in a lease of ten acres of ground located in the famous Chitwood District. Less than one acre of this property has been mined, and the production amounts to $857,764.94. The mine adjoining on the west has produced over $1,000,000, and the production of the property on the east amounts to $472,042.50; on the south, $123,972.60, and on the north $500,000. The output of the new property is equally divided between lead and zinc. The mill at this mine has a capacity of one hundred and fifty tons of ore daily.

Mr. Middlekauff states that it is the intention of the Company to acquire a larger interest in this property, and also that within a short time the dividends, which are now twelve per cent., will be increased to fifteen per cent. per annum. At the office of the Company, 211 North avenue, samples of the ores, photographs of the properties and official maps may be seen.

REVISING ELECTION LAWS

Commission Discusses Plan for Instructing Delegates to National Conventions.

NO FORMAL ACTION TAKEN.

The Commissioners, Stokes, Riker and Dungan Make a Call On the Governor For His Views.

The commission appointed by Governor Fort to revise the primary and election laws organized yesterday afternoon by selecting former Governor Stokes as chairman. Prior to the organization Mr. Stokes, with the two other members of the commission, Chandler W. Riker and Colonel Nelson Y. Dungan, called upon the Governor to ascertain his views. Governor Fort urged the immediate drafting of a bill providing that the primary system should be made applicable to the selection of delegates to the national convention, which was recommended in a special message he sent to the Legislature last week.

Mr. Riker, who is understood to share the views of Governor Fort, was disposed to favor the introduction of the direct primary system in the choice of delegates. Mr. Stokes and Colonel Dungan, although not committing themselves to any course of action, argued that in view of the issuing of the call for the national convention, serious complications would likely follow any attempt to adopt a direct primary method for the convention this year.

In the informal discussion yesterday Mr. Riker favored the plan of having the counties instruct their delegates as to the persons for whom the Jersey delegates to the national convention should vote for President and Vice-President.

Mr. Stokes and Colonel Dungan each thought that this proposition was impracticable, as the expression of the voters would pledge delegates to the State conventions to vote for delegates to the National convention, who in turn should be pledged to vote for one or another of the Presidential or Vice-Presidential candidates.

No formal action was taken, but Colonel Dungan was deputized to prepare a draft of a primary bill applicable to the selection of national delegates which will be considered by the commission next Tuesday. The joint resolution under which the commission was appointed has not yet been signed by Governor Fort, so that it is doubtful if the committee at this time has any actual legal existence, the resolution being still in the possession of the secretary of the Senate.

LONG ILLNESS ENDS IN DEATH OF H. E. BENNETT.

Harry E. Bennett, a former well known resident of this city, died Wednesday night at his home in New York. He had suffered a long time with a spinal trouble which compelled his retirement from work last October.

Mr. Bennett was born in North Wales in 1862 and came to this country with his parents when he was six years old. He learned telegraphy and in 1888 became associated with the Western Union Company, remaining in its service until his health failed. In 1884 he married Lauretta Cora Osmun, of Finderne, who survives him. He enjoyed the friendship of everyone with whom he came in contact and as one of them expressed it: "All through Harry Bennett there ran a fine, silken fibre, a kindliness, gentleness and consideration of others seldom met with in the rush and hurry of every day life."

While residents of Plainfield, Mr. and Mrs. Bennett made their home on East Sixth street and also for a time on Manning avenue in the borough.

Glazier Hearing Adjourned.

The hearing in the case of Miles Reusch and other residents of Alton against Theodore Glazier, Jr., seeking to make permanent a temporary injunction to prevent the defendant from continuing his fat rending factory at Alton, was to have been resumed yesterday before Vice-Chancellor Walker, but owing to the fact that it was the regular day for the district court session over which Judge Newcorn presides, the vice-chancellor changed the date to Monday, February 24. Judge Newcorn represents the defendant.

Special Sermons at Monroe Avenue.

Rev. E. E. Roberson, pastor of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, will on Sunday begin a series of special sermons on "The Higher Life." The subject will be "Higher Life—What Is It?" In the evening "Pandora's Box" will be opened again, the question to be considered being, "Can Man Live As Long Now As Did the Anti-deluvian?" The topic for the sermon will be "The Age Long Chains Which Bind the Life of Man." There will be good music at both services.

DISCUSS P. E. MISSIONS

Diocesan Women's Auxiliary Meeting Attended by Plainfield Delegates.

ADDRESSES BY MISSIONARIES.

Grace, Holy Cross and Heavenly Rest Churches Represented at New Brunswick Meeting.

The upper division of the Women's Auxiliary to Missions of the New Jersey Diocese of the Episcopal church, met at Christ church, New Brunswick, yesterday. Among those present were Rev. and Mrs. George A. Warner, Mrs. J. O. Stevens, Mrs. Allen, Mrs. Brown, Miss Ida Davis and Miss Louise Davis, of the Church of the Holy Cross, and Rev. Mr. Townsend, of the Church of the Heavenly Rest. Grace church was also represented by the usual number of delegates. The auxiliary received and accepted the invitation to meet with the Church of the Holy Cross a year hence.

One of the principal speakers of the day was Mrs. Wallace, of Tokio, Japan, who described the customs of the Japanese, the work that the Episcopal church is doing, and spoke especially of the excellent results at St. Paul's School, where there are 750 pupils. She also told of the hospital work and the progress at the theological seminary.

Another speaker was Rev. Mr. Hunter, of Raleigh, N. C., who gave an interesting talk of the American Church Institute and its work among the colored people of the South. He dwelt especially on the industrial and educational features of the work, as being the most important.

The meeting was considered one of the best held in recent years. There was a large attendance of women from the entire upper division and great interest was shown in the various topics under discussion.

CARTS IN WHEELBARROW THEIR VALENTINE LUNCH

In celebration of St. Valentine's Day, a delightful luncheon was given today at the home of Mrs. Edson C. Martin on Albert street. The affair was in the nature of a surprise and was arranged by Mrs. Floyd T. Woodhull, of the Flinch Club, of which she was one of the organizers. In order to make the surprise complete, the women members of the club and invited guests, furnished their own lunch. This was left at the home of Mrs. Woodhull, while the women proceeded to the home of Mrs. Martin.

A little later Mr. Woodhull appeared at the Martin home with the lunch, having brought it from his home in a wheelborrow. The unique proposition was conceived by Mr. Woodhull and he offered to deliver the refreshments in the wheelbarrow. On his way to Mrs. Martin's residence he met a number of his friends and acquaintances and all were much puzzled to know what his actions meant. The women folks thoroughly enjoyed the affair and both Mrs. Martin and her guests gave Mr. Woodhull a rousing reception. After lunch the women spent the afternoon playing flinch.

Those present were Mrs. E. C. Martin, Mrs. Floyd T. Woodhull, Mrs. W. H. Druse, Mrs. Robert A. Meeker, Mrs. Fred Dickerson, Mrs. Frank Wynkoop, Mrs. W. D. Williams, Mrs. Blanchard Williams, Mrs. Noble Briggs and Mrs. Lettie Blackford, the last named of Morristown, and a cousin of Mrs. Martin.

Prentice Minton's Father Dead.

Prentice Minton, of L. W. Randolph's pharmacy, received word yesterday of the death of his father, one of the most prominent residents of Red Bank. He was taken suddenly ill about two weeks ago with heart trouble and owing to his advanced age his recovery was considered doubtful from the first. He is survived by a wife, five sons and two daughters. One of the daughters is Mrs. Isaac Laing, formerly of Dunellen, and two of the sons, Charles and Prentice Minton, were engaged in the drug business at Red Band, until the latter came to this city, recently.

TO BRIDGE NEWARK BAY

Elizabeth and Bayonne Talk of Putting Public Span Across the Waterway.

NEWARK OPPOSES THE SCHEME.

Plan to Construct Combination Foot, Wagon and Trolley Car Bridge at Cost of $2,000,000.

Arrangements are under way for a conference and later, probably, a mass meeting of citizens of Elizabeth and Bayonne and residents of other parts of Union and Hudson counties, to consider the proposed plan of erecting a bridge, connecting these cities on either side of Newark Bay. The Board of Trade of Bayonne has approved the plan, and so has the Board of Trade of Elizabeth. Both Boards of Freeholders have gone so far as to say that the scheme is a good one, but they decline to take any steps in the matter before some unmistakable expression is made by the people on the question.

In the meantime the city of Newark is trying to halt the project. It has succeeded in squelching the agitation in the past, and it is trying to do the same thing now. Its objection to the bridge is that it will be an impediment to navigation. The Newark Board of Trade is vigorously opposing the plan on this account, holding that every additional bridge thrown across the Passaic river or Newark bay holds back the city's growth just that much.

The plan is to construct a combination foot, wagon and trolley car bridge from the end of Fairmount avenue, in Elizabeth, across the bay, parallel with the present Central Railroad, or "Two Mile," bridge, as it is frequently called, but about two thousand feet to the northward. The cost, it is estimated, with street grading and other work, will be about $2,000,000 for the bridge proper, but perhaps one-fifth of the approaches will be filled in from the Elizabeth shore.

At present all wagon traffic passes through Newark and by way of the Plank Road or turnpike to Jersey City and New York. The proposed route, it is said, will enable the Union county farmers to carry their products to Jersey City, through Bayonne, thus saving almost eight miles of hauling.

NOVEL GAMES PLAYED AT Y. W. C. A. VALENTINE PARTY.

In the true spirit of St. Valentine's eve, ninety members of the Y. W. C. A. met at the association building, last night, exchanging valentines and playing heart games. A feature of the evening's entertainment was the "postoffice," where Miss Georgia Ricker, as postmistress, received and distributed the valentines exchanged by the members. Miss Eleanor Waring, Miss Frances Hyde and Miss Eva Browne presented a series of valentine tableaux in the gymnasium. The various "valentines" were posed by Miss Elsie Goddard.

After playing "hunting the hearts" and the "Dan Cupid Game," in which bows and arrows were used, the prizes were awarded. "Sweet hearts," in the form of dainty cakes, were passed around, and their influence was counteracted by lemonade. During the evening, several of the young women rendered vocal selections.

Mrs. Leader's Sister Dead.

While Mrs. A. J. Leader, of Duer street, was visiting in Brooklyn, Wednesday, Mrs. Elizabeth Hilliard, her sister, at whose home she was the guest, was suddenly stricken with paralysis of the heart and died. Mrs. Hilliard, who had been ailing for some time, is survived by seven sisters, one of whom, Miss Neil McKee, was living with her in Brooklyn. Mrs. Leader is suffering from the shock and is under the care of her family physician.

WATCHUNG COUNCIL GIVES A BIG EUCHRE

Watchung Council, No. 552, Knights of Columbus, gave a social and euchre in its rooms on East Front street, last night, friends of the members from this city and other places being the guests. There were 200 players in all and some very spirited playing marked the progress of the games. First prize for the women was taken by Miss Margaret Burke, while Mrs. John Simpson was awarded second. Patrick Connolly took first of the men's prizes and John Kyle second. There were also two booby awards.

Following the awards refreshments were served and the Messrs. Brennan, of New York, entertained with an informal program of vocal and instrumental selections.

The committee in charge of the affair was composed of A. E. LaPorte, John J. Hines, Thomas Carty, J. J. Varley and Michael D. O'Keefe.

BOROUGH'S SEWER PROBLEM DISCUSSED

In a joint meeting with the city street and sewer committee held last night at Mayor Fisk's office, Mayor Samuel Townsend, of North Plainfield, and W. J. Buttfield, chairman of the borough sewer commission, discussed ways and means for the joint use of the local sewage disposal beds by city and borough. The entire committee, consisting of W. L. Gloak, chairman, and Councilmen C. C. Randolph, Buxton and Tyler, was present, with City Engineer Andrew J. Gavett and the North Plainfielders.

Nothing definite was decided at the meeting, although various plans were informally discussed. It is decidedly probable that the borough will use the Plainfield disposal beds in the event of the installation of a sewerage system. Because of the fact that several of the members of the city committee were not familiar with the plan for common disposal, the matter was thoroughly explained and it was decided to work along the lines suggested in Mr. Buttfield's report for the commission of fifty, presented and endorsed in Mayor Smalley's administration. It was decided to arrange the assessment for use of the city disposal beds on the basis of quantity of sewage from North Plainfield. Mayor Townsend is anxious to have a definite agreement framed, so that the exact cost of joint usage of the beds may be determined upon before the special sewer committee, composed of W. G. Debele and A. E. Kenney, continues its work of canvass among the property owners. At the adjournment, another meeting was arranged, after which boroughites may expect definite facts as to cost of the projected system.

PLAINFIELDERS ATTEND PEDDIE'S DUAL CELEBRATION.

Founder's Day was celebrated at Peddie Institute at Hightstown Wednesday afternoon. The event was of unusual interest this year, as the day was not only an anniversary of the founding of the school, but also the centennial anniversary of the birth of Thomas B. Peddie, after whom the school is named. There was an address by Rev. Dr. George H. Ferris, pastor of the First Baptist church, Philadelphia, followed by a reception and luncheon. The Peddie Dramatic Club presented the comedy drama "Among the Breakers," in the evening.

Among those at the celebration were: Mrs. Tonzo L. Sauvage and children, Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Winter, Mrs. William G. Sharwell, Newark; Mrs. W. F. Smith, Plainfield; Mr. and Mrs. William Bittles, Newark; Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Webb, Hanover; Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Deats, Flemington; Mr. and Mrs. James C. Coleman, Newark; Miss Sadie Pierce, Perth Amboy; Mr. and Mrs. G. Bauer, Newark; Mr. and Mrs. F. Lyons, Plainfield; Mrs. E. Knies, Newark; Miss Mary L. Topping, Rutherford.

The K. R. C. Entertained.

The K. R. C., a social organization, was entertained at the home of Donald C. Mortimer on West Seventh street, last night, for the purpose of adopting a constitution and bylaws. After the business, the members spent the evening playing euchre and listening to vocal and piano selections by Allen Snyder, concluding with "Auld Lang Syne." Supper was then served in the dining room by Mrs. John Mortimer and Miss Mary Mortimer. Those present were Donald C. Mortimer, Allen Snyder, W. Morris Hunter, Frank M. Rimmer, Robert LeRoy Cuzen, James Stanley Kenny and Peter C. Sweeney.

F. M. VOORHEES INDICTED

Former Governor of Jersey Accused of Making False Insurance Reports.

SAYS HE'S NO CRIMINAL.

As the President of Bankers Life Insurance Company It Is Alleged He Swore to Falsehoods.

The special Grand Jury in New York which has been investigating the affairs of the Bankers' Life Insurance Company for two weeks handed up two indictments yesterday against Foster M. Voorhees, former Governor of New Jersey and president of the company, and Frank G. Combs, its secretary.

Only two witnesses were examined. Ex-Gov. Voorhees appeared before the Grand Jury at his own request. The other witness was Howard N. Stokes, treasurer of the company and a brother of former Gov. Stokes, of New Jersey. Mr. Combs was under subpoena, but was never called to testify.

No arrests were made following the indictments, which were presented to Justice Dowling in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court of New York. The indicted men are expected to surrender themselves today and give bail.

Both indictments charge perjury, based on reports to the State Insurance Department. A few months ago the Bankers' Life was reorganized and new men in the company submitted to Superintendent Kelsey a report charging flagrant violation of the law in the past management of the company.

It was declared that the company's report to the Insurance Department for the year 1904, made in February of 1905, stated that $20,000 in dividends were not due the stockholders when in fact they were.

It is understood the indictments were based on this alleged false report. Perjury is a felony which can be punished with imprisonment for ten years. There is no alternative of a fine.

Former Governor Voorhees is president of the New Jersey State Potable Water Commission and president of the Board of Managers of the State Reformatory at Rahway.

When seen at his home in Elizabeth, today, Mr. Voorhees made the following statement:

"From the published accounts of the finding of the indictment that I have read it would seem that there were some dividends left out in one of the reports. I cannot understand that and until I know more definitely upon what charges an indictment is based I do not care to make any statement. This I will say, however, I have never knowingly committed a crime.

"I have served three years as president of the Bankers' Life Insurance Company, incorporated in New York, and signed the annual reports and signed three annual reports which were sent to the Insurance Commission at Albany. I am satisfied that I never knowingly signed a false report. In the meantime my friends may rest assured that my conscience is easy."

When an effort was made to see former Governor Voorhees at his home on North Broad street, Elizabeth, last night, Dr. N. M. Voorhees, the former Governor's brother, said that Mr. Voorhees was in bed and could not be seen. Dr. Voorhees said, however, that his brother has been much worried ever since he was before the Grand Jury, about two weeks ago.

"My brother," Dr. Voorhees said, "is not a criminal, and I don't think they can prove him one. What he has done, if we understand correctly, is a common offense, one that is committed thousands of times every day. He had no time to verify every statement of the facts in those voluminous reports, and naturally took for granted statements made by subordinates."

Friends of the former State Executive assert that ignorance of the insurance business is responsible for his indictment. They say that he knew nothing about the business, and when the reports were handed him to sign he accepted them as correct and affixed his signature.

The Bankers' Life Insurance Company, of which he was president, was organized about fifteen or twenty years ago. It did a general life insurance business, but its principal business was insuring the lives of bankers and bankers' clerks.

Former Governor Voorhees became the head of the company soon after his term as Governor of New Jersey expired. At this time the company was suffering from internal troubles, and its officers believed that the opposing factions could be reconciled if he were made the company's head. He remained with the company two or three years, and, being unable to accomplish this end, resigned.

ONLY NECESSARY TO TREAT THE STOMACH

The new theory advanced by L. T. Cooper relative to the human stomach has attracted such widespread attention that the public in cities visited by the young man has been joined by many physicians in a discussion of his beliefs and medicines.

Mr. Cooper says that human health is dependent almost entirely upon the stomach. He says that no disease can be conquered without first alleviating all stomach disorders. He further says that most men and women of this generation are half-sick, owing to degenerate stomachs. And lastly, he claims that his New Discovery medicine will rejuvenate the human stomach in 90 days.

Cooper has been traveling from one city to another, conducting in each what he calls a campaign of education. For the past year he has met the public in the larger cities of the country, and his success has been phenomenal. Thousands of people have flocked to his headquarters wherever he has gone, and the sale of his medicine has been beyond anything of the kind ever before witnessed.

Possibly the most interesting feature of the attention this young man has attracted is what his army of followers, whom he has converted to his beliefs through his medicines, have to say on the subject. The following statements are from two well known residents of Chicago and Boston, respectively, and the enthusiasm of these is characteristic of Cooper's admirers generally.

Mrs. H. B. Mack, of 3301 State street, Chicago, says: "I have been suffering for 12 years from a combination of stomach troubles, catarrh and constipation. I had a gnawing pain in the pit of my stomach, a sort of a dull pain that I could not quite understand. Then there was a dull headache, and my mind seemed to be wandering continually. I could not eat, and what little solid food I did eat I could not retain on my stomach. I tried every remedy I could think of, and also tried out a number of patent medicines, but without any apparent result. It was through one of my friends that I heard of Cooper's preparation, and I immediately decided to try some of it. It is two weeks since I took my first dose of it, and I feel like a new woman. The headache seems to have disappeared, and the pain in my stomach along with it. The medicine is worth its weight in gold, and I want to thank Mr. Cooper for what he has done for me."

Mr. Edwin F. Morse, of 20 Oakley street, Dorchester, a suburb of Boston, says: "For three years I had not a well day. My stomach was in frightful shape; the mere thought of food would nauseate me, and I really had a horror of anything to eat. All solid food would cause me extreme indigestion, bloating and gas on my stomach, and nothing tasted right. Some time ago I got some of this Cooper's medicines, about which there is so much talk. I actually feel as well and strong as a boy ever since the first bottle. Every sign of stomach trouble has disappeared, and I have a hearty appetite and eat three square meals; every thing seems to taste good. Anyone who knows what chronic indigestion is can appreciate what this means to me. I consider this the most remarkable medicine I ever heard of."

We sell Mr. Cooper's medicines, and find them to be all he claims. —T. S. Armstrong.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Toastmaster John Kean.

The fact that Senator John Kean is to be toastmaster at a dollar dinner of the Downtown Republican Club of Elizabeth in April, is being heralded as a sure sign that the Senator, in anticipation of having to stand as a candidte for re-election by direct choice in the party primaries in 1910, intends to make a popular campaign to secure the popular vote. In the two elections of Senator Kean to the Senate, as in all other Senatorial elections, the preliminary object was to nominate for Senate or House a man who, if elected, would vote in the Legislature for him. In 1910 the candidate for the Legislature will give his pledge to the party voters direct before he is nominated, so it will be the party voter who will have to be solicited. But it doesn't need the toastmastership of a dollar dinner among political friends and neighbors to show that Senator John Kean would like another term at Washington.—Newark Morning Star.

Thieves Enter Lyons Farms Pastor's Residence While He Is Expounding Gospel.

While Rev. Gideon M. Shott, of the Lyon Farms Baptist church and formerly of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, was expounding the gospel in that edifice Tuesday night, sneak thieves entered the parsonage, ransacked the pastor's home and made off with various articles of clothing and jewelry. The thieves gained entrance by forcing a window in the kitchen and the robbery was discovered when the clergyman and other members of his family returned later in the evening.

Upon reaching home they found the place in confusion, the intruders having ransacked bureaus, trunks, clothes, presses and every other receptacle in their search for valuables. The contents were scattered about the room, and after straightening things out an investigation was made, which disclosed that the following articles were stolen: Monogram locket and chain and black leather pocketbook belonging to Miss Elsie Shott; a gold chain, owned by Miss Ruth Shott, and a watch and several articles of clothing belonging to Mr. Shott. The police were notified of the robbery.

We're Going To Clean Out These Winter Goods

—as you can easily see by the prices we have put on them—that we mean for them to go right now. It's in line with our 1908 policy to clean out the old stock and make room for the new. We can afford to be a bit liberal about it, too, since it was inventoried last month with that in view. Read the list—how generously we cut the price! You will most likely find use for some of these things the way we sell them.

BASEBALL.

A small crowd gathered on the Southern Pacific pier at Franklin street Wednesday to give a send-off to four new players on the New York National League baseball team, who, with John Leggett and James Richards, trainer and assistant trainer, sailed on the steamship Creole for New Orleans on their way to Marlin Springs, Tex., where they will train. The recruits were John McKinney, C. L. Herzog, John O'Brien and W. J. Malarkey.

In a few days several more new men will start from St. Louis for Texas, where John J. McGraw will be awaiting them to put them through some practice before the older members of the team arrive. The regulars will sail on the steamship Momus on February 26. In the party will be Mathewson, Donlin, Seymour, Devlin, Lynch, Wiltse, Hannifan and Tenney.

James Thornton, manager of the Yale Baseball Association, has announced the schedule of the season's games. With the exception of the dropping of the Easter trip no very wide departure is made from the schedule of last year. In place of the Easter trip the nine will practise in New Haven during the recess and will play one game with the Hartford League team. Only one game is scheduled with Brown this year and two with Holy Cross. The dates:

GOLF.

Arnaud Massey, the Grench golf champion, who also won the British championship last year; James Braid and Harry Vardon, former holders of the British title, and J. H. Taylor, who was runner-up to Massey last season, have declined an invitation to participate in the United States open golf championship this year.

Roderick L. MacLean, of the Waverly Golf Club, of Portland, Ore., led a field of 129 players in the qualification round of the fourth annual St. Valentine golf tournament at Pinehurst, yesterday, with a card of 83. Next in order were J. E. Porter, of Pittsburg; E. A. Freeman, of Brooklyn, and A. C. Travis, of New York, who made 84 each, the balance of the field finishing close up, with numerous ties.

What of the ideal golf course, the millionaire's paradise, the dream of Charles B. Macdonald? At various times stories have been published concerning this undertaking, this so-called national course, which extends along the shores of Peconic Bay, where the best holes of the world are being reproduced. The latest news about the links comes by way of London and appears in "Country Life" in the columns edited by Horace Hutchinson. He writes as follows:

The success of Mr. Macdonald's great scheme of a national golf course in America, with holes copied from the best known in Europe, is more than assured, for, although play has not yet begun upon it—it is said that it will be ready for play, though in rather a crude state still, by the fall—it may be said that success is already achieved. It is a course in being. The creator's own account of it is as follows (from a private letter):

"The whole plan is working out wonderfully. * * * Of course, we have not yet put in the bunkers—that is, but very few of them—and these have been put in where we must put them in because they are where the bunkers are in the holes which we have copied from the other side.

"Our 'Alps' is a finer hole than the 'Alps' at Prestwick; the Whighams say so, and they ought to know. Our fourth hole, which is a duplicate of the eleventh at St. Andrews, as regards contour of ground and placing of hazards, is really a better hole for the reason that you cannot take a putter, as there is a little arm of the sea about ten or fifteen feet wide, which we bridge over about thirty yards in front of the tee, and there is also, about eighty yards from the te', quite a steep shoulder before we come to the shoulder which at the eleventh hole at St Andrews crosses the front of the green. The putting green is exactly the same, and, of course, we have placed the bunkers exactly as they are there. Another point is that the putting green proper will have very much better turf.

"Before I put in the trap bunkers we will do some playing over it next year, although it is not my intention to open the course to the public until July, 1909. We have been wonderfully successful with the fertilizer and grass seeds which we have put in. With a good spring, I believe our putting greens will be in good shape next fall, which will be extraordinary."

FOOTBALL.

J. B. Fine, chairman of Princeton's athletic advisory board, has issued a statement corroborating in every detail the statement sent out from Cornell concerning the failure to arrange a football game this year. He said in part:

"Princeton wished a new agreement for two years, both games to be played in New York. Cornell refused this, and insisted upon a home and home series, which was rejected by the Princeton management."

It is safe to say that the break would not have occurred if undergraduate opinion had been considered. Cornell is, next to Yale, Princeton's dearest foe, and the most friendly feeling has existed between the two institutions. The general feeling here is one of deep regret. The management's excuse for the break is that the long trip to Ithaca is hard on the team. The students feel that the break is especially unfortunate, following a defeat by Cornell.

AUTOMOBILE TAX.

In this connection it is only fair to ask why the automobile is the only vehicle which must pay for the wear entailed upon the roads. Granting that it is more destructive to macadam than others, it is probable that more wear is entailed by horse-drawn vehicles, because they are so much more numerous. Certainly roads were worn before automobiles were dreamed of, and certainly roads are worn today by "sharp shod" horses and the steel tires of wagons and carriages. It would seem, therefore, that if roads users are to keep roads in repair, which is entirely logical, all vehicles should pay an equitable tax. It may be popular to shoulder the entire burden on to the motorist, but it hardly squares with one's sense of justice.—Newark News.

Before expressing himself further, the Newark News editorial writer should for his own sake get away from that city and gather some information on the subject which he so freely discusses. The New Jersey highways are built to withstand the general wear and tear of horse-drawn vehicles, but not of fast moving, heavy tonnage automobiles. The damage done to such thoroughfares as the Mountain avenue road and the Springfield road, for instance, clearly demonstrates the automobile abuse. The taxpayers on these highways use them as a matter of necessity and take pride in their preservation. This is not so with the autoist. As a rule he cares little for the road using it only for temporary enjoyment.

It is a matter of general knowledge that the State Road Commissioner's office at this time is sorely perplexed in its effort to find some method of preventing further damage to the roads caused by automobiles. The fact is that State Road Supervisor Meeker is now in the West on that mission. Just before he left, he stated that it had been found that the top dressing on the State roads had been removed by the constant speeding of high tonnage machines and that the condition had become a serious problem.

The automobile has come to stay but it is only fair that the people who can afford such luxuries so injurious in many cases to the State's roads should be made to pay for the damage done.

An exchange declares that "it is not surprising that Union county has suddenly become the hot-bed of local option." So far as Plainfield is concerned we should say that it is quite surprising for we had thought that the excise problem had been fairly well solved here.

It will take more than a Jerome to make the people of New Jersey believe that Foster M. Voorhees has been guilty of criminal acts. The general impression prevails today in this locality at least that New York's District Attorney is a mighty small potato.

If the "knowing ones" among Jersey politicians are to be relied upon, Mr. Roosevelt would name the tail as well as the head of the ticket. In fact, all he would leave for the convention will be the shouting.

The Hungarian got five millions and Gladys got a title. It's one consolation, however, that she will be able to get a decree for a smaller sum.

Think of attending a fancy dress ball at an insane asylum!—Elizabeth Journal.

But, why did you?

Won't some kind friend tell Mr. Stokes that his vice presidential boom is only a "jolly?"

When Osborne does the District Attorney's work, he can reply "Poor Jerome."

You know that smile that Foster wears? Well, it came off yesterday.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

While driving to Newark early Monday morning with a load of hay, William Bragg was painfully hurt as a result of a collision with a trolley car. The accident happened at about 6 o'clock, near Jefferson avenue. The car crashed into the back of the load of hay, throwing Bragg from his seat; he landed on the pole between the horses and was badly bruised. The harness was broken and the vestibule of the car damaged so that it had to return to the barns. Bragg asserts that the motorman did not ring his bell.

MACFADDEN TO MOVE?

Said He Will Abandon Physical Culture "City" Soon.

It is reported that Spotswood and Middlesex county may lose Benarr Macfadden's Physical Culture City, between Spotswood and Helmetta. The "city" has grown up around the big printing plant at which the Physical Culture magazine and other publications are printed. In addition, there are the houses and tents of the pupils taking the physical culture course under Macfadden's direction.

It is said the printing plant is to be removed to New York city or somewhere in Michigan. The industry and "city" would be a severe loss to Spotswood, as the institution brought considerable money to the merchants of that vicinity and gave employment to a large number of people.

Mrs. V. O. Burtis, of Westfield, was one of the American travellers who signed the register at the Paris office of the New York Herald on Wednesday.

BAN ON SPRING SHOOTING.

Fish and Game Commissioners Would Put an End to This Sort of Pastime.

Trenton, Feb. 14.—President Benedict C. Kuser, of the Fish and Game Commission, said yesterday regarding certain statments made relative to the recent conference of the commission and the committee of the Association of Sportsmen that the commissioners are agreed to a man in favoring, with the committee of the association, the abolition of all spring shooting, and that such a recommendation was made at their last meeting. However, owing to opposition from South Jersey it is believed impossible to obtain much legislation and it is thought wise at this time to urge only such a bill that has a chance of becoming a law.

The commission favors a bill to abolish shooting of ducks and water wild fowl during March, April, September and October, reducing the open season by one-half. The commissioners are acting on the practical principle that a half loaf is better than none, and with the hope that South Jersey seeing the benefits will finally agree to the total abolition of shooting in January and February.

Regarding the statement that a petition for the abolition of spring shooting contained five thousand names Mr. Kuser said a member of the Legislature informed him that the petition contained that many signatures.

GLIB-TONGUED SCOUNDREL PREYS ON THE UNEMPLOYED.

A man about 40 years old, of neat attire and a fluent talker, is going about the city of Elizabeth fleecing men out of work. His plan is to go to the home of a man he knows to be out of employment, tell him he is the chief of a labor bureau, and that if the man desires employment he can procure it for him at once, providing that he will join the union covering the work in which he desires to engage.

The victim, anxious to get work, agrees, and is told he must pay at once money for his union fees. One of the victims who reported his loss to the police said that he and his wife were so completely taken in by the persuasive stranger that he paid over to him $9, the amount demanded. In order to do so, his wife was obliged to borrow about half of that sum from a neighbor. The stranger promised to find him employment without delay at the Rising Sun Brewery. He was told that before the stranger would take him to the brewery he must first shave himself and dress neatly. The man went upstairs to change his clothing. When he returned the stranger had disappeared.

ARREST CANADIAN IN BATH AS A SABBATH BREAKER.

Winnipeg, Man., Feb. 14.—Police officials are making out and serving hundreds of summonses for breaches on the Lord's Day act. The campaign started two Sundays ago, and the first cases appeared in police court Wednesday. Already some 500 summonses have been issued, and several hundred more are to be made out.

The police are proceeding under instructions of the Police Commission, their action being a counter movement opposed to action by members of the Lord's Day Alliance. Each Sunday police have pounced upon undertakers at funerals, newspapermen transcribing notes of Sunday sermons, and editors. Another man was taking a bath when the police arrested him.

Stetson was struck October 13, 1907, by a train while on his way to Centre Market, Newark, with a load of produce.

Proceedings of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union.

[OFFCIAL.]

Regular meeting of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union, N. J., held on Thursday, Jan. 9, 1908, at 2:30 p. m.

Roll call showed the following members present:

Director King, Freeholders Adams, Cladek, Darby, Doane, Donahue, Fay, Jones, Krouse, Maurer, Meisel, Perry, Pierson, Robison, Smith, Stephan, Wilbur and Woodruff—18.

Absent, Freeholders Cady and Swain—2.

The minutes of the previous meeting, with a slight correction, were, on motion, approved as per printed copies on the members' desks.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From the Union County Board of Taxation, as follows:

Dec. 23, 1907.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders, Union County, N. J.:

Gentlemen—This board desires to take up with your board the question of better office accommodations for the Union County Board of Taxation.

We submit the disadvantages we labor under by having but one room, where, when appeals are being heard, others can sit around and listen to the appellants' private statements.

The present office occupied by the board is unfortunate in that it cannot be ventilated without opening the window, which cannot be well done in the winter, and when colsed we breathe the atmosphere of the prison.

We believe the business of this board is of such a character and importance as to require better facilities and more privacy.

For these reasons we would be pleased to take the question up with the committee under whose charge it rightly belongs. Very truly yours,

C. C. POLLARD,
President.

On motion of Freeholder Cladek received and referred to the committee on public grounds and buildings.

From the mayor and Council of the Borough of Garwood:

Garwood, N. J., Jan. 2, 1908.

Resolved, That the Board of Freeholders be requested to lay a square culvert with gratings on top at the intersection of Centre street and North avenue. Signed,

WALLACE KAYLOR.

Approved Jan. 2, 1908.

F. SARTORIUS, Mayor.

Attest: WILLIAM DARROCH,
Borough Clerk.

Freeholder Pierson moved that the communication be received and referred to a committee, which was so ordered.

From the Funeral Directors' Association of Essex and Union counties:

Elizabeth, Jan. 8, 1908.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union Couty, N. J.:

Gentlemen—I am directed by this association to comunicate with your honorable body, apprising you of an action taken at a meeting of the association held in the city of Newark Monday, Jan. 6, in regard to the dangerous conditions existing at the crossing of the Pennsylvania Railroad and Linden avenue, known as Dark lane Linden.

This thoroughfare is extensively used by the undertakers of both Union and Essex counties as well as those from the adjoining territory, it being the main approach to the cemeteries and crematory situated in Linden. The crossing is absolutely unguarded and is recognized by all as the most deadly spot over which funeral partoes are required to drive. The catastrophe of Sunday last at the Dark lane crossing in which the driver of the funeral coach lost his life, the horses were killed, coach demolished and the several occupants severely injured, vividly impresses us with the necessity of protection at that point. Othe fatalities have also recently occurred there, and we feel that to allow the crossing to longer remain without some protective device is nothing short of criminal. The association therefore wishes to make to your honorable body a formal protest as regards the carelessness of the railroad company in not affording the necessary protection to human life, as the common laws of preservation would suggest, and would also request and urge that a demand be made upon the railroad company to immediately have gates erected at the Dark lane crossing and that a guard man be stationed there in charge of same.

Hoping that you will realize the reasonableness of our request and that you will promptly act in the matter, we are, Your very truly,

THE FUNERAL DIRECTORS' ASSOCIATION OF ESSEX AND UNION COUNTIES.

W. J. Knowles, Secretary.

County Attorney Coddington stated that the matter was one in which the municipality had full power to act, and on motion of Freeholder Woodruff the communication was received and referred to the committee on legal questions and county attorney.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

By the committee on South Broad street bridge sidewalks, Elizabeth, N. J.:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders:

Gentlemen — Your committee appointed in this matter has received bids for the work according to plan prepared by the county engineer and find the lowest bid to be $438.86.

The appropriation asked for and granted was $350, and the difference of cost in the work is caused by the inclement season for this kind of work.

Your committee is of the opinion that the walks should be repaired at once, as they are in very bad condition, and would therefore recommend that the appropriation for the work be increased from the sum first appropriated—namely, $350 to the sum of $450.

J. LOGAN FAY,
J. ROBINSON,
Committee.

Freeholder Wilbur moved that the report be received and recommendation be adopted, which was so ordered on roll call by a unanimous vote.

By the committee on jail inspection:

Elizabeth, Jan. 9, 1908.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

Gentlemen—At a meeting of the committee on jail inspection held Jan. 9, 1908, we appointed Dr. M. A. Shangle as jail physician for the ensuing year at the usual compensation of $250 per year, said amount to cover all medical services needed to prisoners of county jail during the year.

E. K. ADAMS,
J. HERVEY DOANE,
J. LOGAN FAY,
Committee On Jail Inspection.

Freeholder Robison moved that the report be received and the action of the committee confirmed, which was so ordered on roll call by a unanimous vote.

By the committee on jail inspection:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

Gentlemen—The undersigned committee would respectfully report that they have had a conference with William H. Lawrence, the sheriff of the county of Union, respecting a contract with this board for keeping of prisoners, care of jail, county buildings, etc., and have arrived at an understanding with the sheriff to the effect that we would recommend to this board the making of a contract upon the same terms as for the year 1907, and in accordance therewith we would recommend that the director and clerk of this board be authorized to execute a contract with said William H. Lawrence, sheriff, upon the same terms as the last previous contract and that said contract bear date as of Dec. 1, 1907, and to continue during the balance of the unexpired term of said sheriff.

Dated Jan. 9, 1908. Respectfully submitter,

E. K. ADAMS,
J. HERVEY DOANE,
J. LOGAN FAY,
Committee of Jail Inspection.

Freeholder Cladek moved that the report be received and recommendation adopted, which was so ordered on roll call by a unanimous vote.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

On motion of Freeholder Krouse it was ordered that the board proceed to vote on the appointment of a county road inspector.

Freeholder Smith nominated James W. Fink for said office, and there were no further nominations.

The director appointed Freeholders Wilbur and Cladek as tellers.

Upon ballot being taken Mr. Fink received 10 votes; blank, 8 votes.

Mr. Fink not having received a majority vote of the whole board, it was ordered that a second ballot be taken, which resulted as follows:

Mr. Fink received 11 votes; blank, 7 votes.

Mr. Fink, having received a majority vote of the whole board, was thereupon declared appointed as county road inspector for the legal term.

NEW BUSINESS.

By Freeholder Adams:

Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed to investigate the advisability of building a box culvert at the junction of Center street and North avenue at Garwood and report at the next regular meeting of this board as to the probable cost of the same.

On motion of Freeholder Krouse the resolution was adopted without dissent.

The director appointed as the said committee Freeholders Adams, Perry and Maurer.

By Freeholder Adams:

Resolved, That a vote of thanks be and hereby is extended to County Collector N. R. Leavitt for the handsome bound volumes of the session laws of 1907 presented to the several members of this board.

On motion of Freeholder ones the resolution was adopted without dissent.

By Freeholder Krouse:

Resolved, That a vote of thanks be extended to W. H. Kirk for the convenient and useful pocket memorandum books presented by him to the members of this board.

On motion of Freeholder Cladek the resolution was adopted without dissent.

By Freeholder Krouse:

Whereas an agreement was several months ago entered into by and between this board and Mayor P. J. Ryan as to the purchase of a vacant lot adjoining the courthouse property in the rear for the sum of $2,750, and whereas the passing of title to said premises was delayed until Jan. 8, and whereas the taxes assessed againt said premises are the um of $23.26 for the year 1907, therefore be it resolved that the county collector be and hereby is authorized to pay said taxes from the county funds.

Freeholder Woodruff moved the adoption of the resolution, and on roll call it was unanimously adopted.

The director announced the appointment of Freeholder Stephan to the place on the South Broad street bridge committee formerly held by Freeholder Gruener.

The director also announced the appointment of Freeholder Cladek to the place on the New Church street bridge committee, Rahway, formerly held by Freeholder Gruener.

Hunting In An Automobile.

Automobiles are being used for about everything these days by ingenious owners, from sawing cordwood and driving printing presses to carrying money in a Wall street panic, but the possibilities are not yet exhausted, apparently. Roy Faye, a Boston autoist, has converted his car into a traveling camp for hunting in the Maine woods. He has built an extension top of heavy waterproof canvas and fitted up the rear end of the interior with bunks for sleeping quarters at night. Along the inside of the tonneau and canopy are arranged hooks on which to hang clothing and hunting accoutrements.

The berths in the car have been adjusted by widening their hangers four inches. This makes it possible to keep the beds made up ready to be dropped into place when needed. The blankets have been converted into semi-sleeping bags that fold up with the pneumatic mattresses in such a manner that they fall easily into place when the berths are lowered. A large canvas tent is taken along, which can be attached to the car and give additional quarters, making the whole as spacious a camp as any built for permanent use. The provisions are packed in chests in the body of the car, each chest having many compartments. Folding tables, cooking utensils arranged in nests for more convenient transportation, and other things add to the comfort of camping expeditions.—Popular Mechanics.

OUR NEXT SERIAL

Will be a breezy, stirring story of cattle rustling days in South Dakota, a story of go and action with the cleverest kind of a romance. The title is

LANGFORD OF THE THREE BARS

By KATE AND VIRGIL D. BOYLES

The Chicago Record Herald Says of It:

There are some stories which, for no definable reason, seem touched with the spirit of youth and vitality. Such a tale is "Langford of the Three Bars," a vigorous, well-shaped story of "cattle rustling" and conflict on the wide plains of South Dakota. It is a stirring story, full of strength and color, quick with abundant, dramatic action, cheered by a happy ending. The writers know well the time and country in which they have placed their vital events and actors, and they know, too, how to ring the changes on love and adventure and the tonic outdoor spirit in simple but most effective way.

It will be a literary treat which you will enjoy, and of which you will want every line. Do not miss the opening installment, which will appear in a short time.

PRINCETON FURNISHES COLLEGE PRESIDENTS.

Within the last five years, Princeton University has been the training school for three college presidents. Two of them have received their appointments this year and will sever connections with the Princeton University faculty in June; these are Henry A. Garfield, professor of politics, a son of the martyred President, who has been chosen as the head of Williams College, and Edgar O. Lovett, professor of astronomy, elected president of Rice Institute of Texas, an educational foundation about to be developed in Houston, Texas. Four years ago, Prof. John H. Finley, of Princeton, became president of the College of the City of New York.

Professor Lovett received his Ph. D. at Leipsic and succeeded the late Professor Charles A. Young as head of the astronomical department. Rice Institute is as yet unknown to the country. The charter which has been granted by the State of Texas is very liberal, and the institution may yet become one of the strongest in the South.

Professor Garfield, who will lead Williams College, as professor of politics at Princeton has become one of the most distinguished members of the faculty. It will be hard for Princeton to fill these vacancies. Announcement will be made in June of their successors.

In connection with the presidents which Princeton has given to the college world might be mentioned the offer of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology to Professor Andrew Fleming West, dean of the Graduate School, to assume the presidential office of Boston's technical institute. Undergraduate sentiment, as well as alumni influence, however, was brought to bear, and the man largely responsible for the success of the present preceptorial system was not lost to Princeton.

HOW TO DARN OLD LACE.

Dainty and Pretty Bits May Look Almost Like New.

The darning of narrow lace edges is a most difficult matter.

If the tear is a serious one the edges of the lace can be basted upon the selvedge of muslin and placed in the embroidery hoop.

Care must be taken not to sew into the muslin.

If the edge is destroyed entirely or in part the lace may be basted upon white letter paper and stitched several times to form a new edge and cross-threads stitched to hold this edge in place, then the paper pulled away and the remaining stitches put in on the machine or by hand.

Hamburg edgings and insertions can be darned in the same way. They should preferably be free of starch and smoothly ironed to facilitate work.

White mosquito netting that has been washed will be found to give a good foundation for darning coarsely woven underwear on the machine and soft black mosquito netting should be basted under the holes in the knees of boys' stockings.

It should be basted directly across the hole and the machine darning done directly upon it. The rough edges and threads can afterward be trimmed away.

When you are through darning upon the machine, do not forget to replace the pressure on the pressure foot and the stitch action to the feed, otherwise you may be very much puzzled the next time you go to the machine and wonder why "it won't make a stitch."

Darning upon the single thread or chain-stitch machine is somewhat more difficult, as the machine will sew in only one direction, and the thread must be broken off before the lifting of the pressure foot at the completion of each row of stitching.

This leaves a multiplicity of loose ends on the under side of the work. Unless great care is taken to clip these ends they are very apt to catch into the sewing and spoil the appearance of the darn.

For renewing and strengthing the frayed edges of Hamburg embroidery and laces, whether valenciennes or torchon, the chain-stitch machine does prettier work than the lock-stitch.

It is necessary, however, to use very fine thread. No. 150 is none too fine and No. 20 is even better for delicate laces, especially if one seeks to follow the curves and scroll of the lace pattern.

A medium stitch is best when darning upon the chain-stitch machine.

No Need of a Fire.

"Wasn't it awful?" exclaimed the apartment-house girl. "The furnace was entirely out last night."

"I never noticed it," replied her chum.

"What? Never noticed it? And you sat in the cold parlor for two hours with that young man. Who was he, anyway?"

"An old flame."—Chicago News.

The Reason.

"Mr. Featherly is the most considerate boarder I have," said Mrs. Hasher. "He never takes the last piece of bread from the plate."

"You bet he doesn't," rejoined one of the other boarders. "He ain't quick enough."—Chicago News.

In the Present.

"And before I accepted him," Miss Passay was saying, "I asked him if he would love me when I was old."

"The idea!" exclaimed MissBright "why if he proposed to you he had already proven that ,hadn't he?"—Philadelphia Press.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

A common adage is that of "Let well enough alone." Judging by the surprising success and unusual welcome met by Franklin and Buxton in their farce comedy, "Rudolph and Adolph," during the past six seasons, that fun-making piece was "well enough." But the management thinks improvement is possible, and the phrase "well enough" does not satisfy them. They prefer the expression "best ever" and to that end have revised and improved the comedy until criticism is disarmed. It will be an almost new "Rudolph and Adolph" that will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow afternoon and night.

Leo Ditrichstein, a fine figure in comedy both as author and actor, will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre next Monday night in "Bluffs." In the supporting company engaged by Messrs. Wagenhals and Kemper are some well known players, notably Fred Bond, Miss Kenyon Bishop, Miss Fola La Follette, Miss Madeleine Sorel, Mrs. Josephine Duffield, Alfred Kappeler, Eugene Redding, Frank Wunderlee, G. M. Beldon and Charles J. Greene.

Completing a remarkably successful season in Greater New York, the new, much talked about melodrama, "The Shadow Behind the Throne," started out on what has proved to be a continuous business boom, to which Plainfield on next Wednesday night is cheerfully expecting to give yet another big circuit boost. The play is pronounced a masterpiece of its kind, and far and away superior to any of its predecessors in originality, perfection of production, versatile and powerful characterization, vivid, weird and romantic scenic realism and four consistently probable and increasingly vigorous acts, full of vivid, patriotic and mysterious surprises and fire, and mirthful dialogue and situations to temper climaxes which stir like trumpet tones. The attack upon the American Legation at Pekin, China, and the few defenders of the Stars and Stripes therein, by the superstitious and vengeful followers of the Yellow Dragon flag; the results of the treacherous plots hatched in the senile Viceroy's palace to gain possession of the beautiful daughter of Col. Calhoun, the American Ambassador, and the love heroism and black treason revealed as the story progresses, arouse the audience to the highest pitch of enthusiasm and continuous curtain calls.

Boynton Square Pot Furnaces

The latest and most important improvement in furnace construction is the patent Square Pot used exclusively in Boynton Furnaces and making them the most easily operated, the most economical, the most efficient heaters in the world.

The Square Pot, unlike the old-fashioned round pot, has a grate area equal to that of the ashes, cleaning as well at the sides as in the middle.

The walls are perpendicular, hence no clogging, resulting in quicker and more sensitive combustion, less waste of fuel, and a constantly active radiation.

Grate bars of equal length and motion; the ash pit is square and deep—everything is designed to reduce your work to a minimum.

Settle the heating question at once by letting your plumber, steam-fitter or tinsmith show what the square pot means to you. Found only in Boyntons.

There are BOYNTON heating plants of all kinds. Ask about our Round or Sectional Boilers for steam or hot water. Also ranges.

WASHINGTONS END SERIES; DEFEAT RHODERICK DHUS

The Washington bowlers completed their games in the tourney schedule at Campbell's alleys, last night, by defeating the Rhoderick Dhus two out of three. The scores on both sides were good as a rule, the lowest being a 125 that fell to the lot of George Ortleb because he never studied the book, "How not to get splits." The Washington's standing for the twenty-four games rolled in the tourney is sixteen won and eight lost. By dropping the one tally last night they killed whatever chance they had of tieing the Grants for first place as the latter now stand with seventeen won and four lost, one series remaining to be played.

Captain Nash, who took on a burst of speed in the endurance contest Wednesday, was again in fine fettle last night and did some more tall execution. He banged out scores of 215, 180 and 200, an average of 198.1. He was the only one on his side to make a double century but of the Rhodericks, Captain Meyer and Charles Ortleb went over the line. "Bill" Skinner landed a 196 and an average of 168.2. Harry Van-Emburgh was unable to roll and his average less ten stood for the match.

The scores:

WASHINGTON.
O'Keefe	160	173	190
Ortleb, G.	151	125	150
Toense, R.	159	155	171

Nine Must Study Hard.

It is probable that certain of the most promising candidates for the Plainfield High School baseball team will at least be temporarily suspended from the squad because of low standing in school work. The list of candidates to be retained on the squad has been posted at the school by Manager William Rafferty of the team but some of those slated for work with the team may have to brace up on curriculum work before they get to work on the diamond.

Hasbrouck Team Cancelled.

The basketball game to have been played at Jersey City this afternoon between the Hasbrouck five and the Plainfield High School team has been cancelled by the Hasbrouck management. The next game will be played tomorrow afternoon, when the local five will meet the Summit High School team at Summit.

He was a prospective candidate for sheriff two years ago, and it is said, that he was promised the nomination. His friends declare that they will make a vigorous fight in his behalf at the primaries.

SOME GREAT ATHLETES PRODUCED IN NEW JERSEY.

The State of New Jersey is fast coming to the front as a producer of top-notch athletic talent. In recent years the Mosquito State has given to the track and field world such sterling men as Fred Bellairs, of Lyndhurst; John Eisle, of Orange; Joe Bromilow, of Paterson; Harry Haywood and R. C. Taylor, of New Brunswick; Harry Coates, of Newark; Platt Adams, of Orange, and Joe Bauderman, of Newark—all men who have at one time or another won championship titles against America's best. But wait! Jersey has a new one.

His name is Thaddeus S. White, and he hails from Closter, N. J., a little hamlet near Englewood. "Discovered" a few short months ago by Ernie Hjertberg. White took so rapidly to running that he is now rated as one of the fastest middle distance runners in the metropolitan district. According to Hjertberg, White has excellent chance to startle the athletic world this year with some mile performances that will approach Haskins' great intercollegiate record.

Besides being fleet of foot, White has a head on his shoulders that would do credit to any veteran runner of five year's experience. This was well illustrated at the B. A. A. games, when after receiving instructions on "how to run his race" from one of the advisers that always turn up at such a time, White went out and ran his own style, incidentally getting away with a lot of crack milers, including Harvey Cohn and J. P. Sullivan. This race was one of the prettiest judged handicaps seen this year. White, instead of following the "expert" instructions given him, viz., to run right from the gun, waited until the big field strung out a bit. Then he "went out," and the way he cut down his rivals was a caution.

White has the English style of running—short, quick and snappy strides. A ludicrous incident took place at the recent Pastime games when a college coach of more or less prominence went up to the track captain of one of the largest clubs in New York and advised him to protest White as an English professional. "He is not amateur," quoth the trainer. "I can tell by the way he runs. He has the style of an English pro." A quiet investigation revealed the fact that White is a native of Closter, N. J., and has worked as a wire expert with the New York Telephone Company for several years.

He was taken ill early yesterday morning with what was at first supposed to be paralysis but afterward diagnosed as acute Bright's disease. Previous to yesterday he had been enjoying apparent good health and his death came as a great surprise.

Mr. DeCamp was fifty-five years old and had lived in Plainfield practically all his life. He was a painter by trade and was employed in the paint department at the Potter Press Works for a long while. He was a member of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., and other fraternal organizations. Beside his mother he is survived by two sisters, Mrs. J. B. Higgins, of West Front street, and Mrs. Melinda Garhold, of West Fifth street; also one brother, Frank DeCamp, of Linden avenue.

THOUGHT AGONY FEIGNED.

An audience at Burlington, N. J., mistook the cries of pain from the operator of a moving picture machine as part of the performance Wednesday night, and as a result John Riker, the operator, was nearly killed before his predicament was discovered. Groping for switch in the narrow sheet-iron cage that surrounds the flim machine, Riker by mistake seized an exposed wire.

The iron floor completed a circuit and a thousand volts went through his body. Riker's screams when they reached the audience through the narrow lense apperture of the cage sounded as if they came from a phonograph. Andrew Harris, the pianist, finally recognized that something was wrong, and breaking into the cage found Riker unconscious but still grasping the live wire.

AGED MAN BREAKS LEG BY FALL DOWN STEEP STAIRS.

Making a misstep at the head of a steep flight of stairs at his home on North avenue early this morning, Henry C. Drake slipped and fell down the stairs, breaking his left leg and sustaining painful bruises about the head. The accident happened at about 6 o'clock this morning.

Mr. Drake is in the habit of rising early and was walking through the hall to light the gas when he fell. His calls for help roused his son Howard, who came to his assistance. Dr. J. B. Probasco was summoned and the injured man was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital where the broken bone was set. He is still at the hospital and it was announced this afternoon that he is resting comfortably.

ADVICE TO THE NEW HOUSEKEEPER.

One woman, who does her own ironing, has a high chair made for the purpose, in which she sits before the board while she is working.

In dampening clothes use a clean whisk broom. This will dampen the clothes evenly, all over, and make the weekly ironing a much easier task.

To keep the silver from tarnishing, put a piece of gum camphor in the trunk, chest or drawers where the silver is kept.

Whipped cream served on top of a freshly made squash pie adds much to its appearance and flavor.

A mixture of olive oil and black ink will be found useful to paint the tips of black kid gloves which are slightly worn.

The best polish for engraved silver is whiting and ammonia. It should be applied with a soft brush, then rubbed with cheesecloth or soft cotton cloths.

To remove cream spots from embroidered centrepieces or doilies, dampen the spot with household ammonia, then lay a fresh piece of blotting paper over it and iron lightly. This treatment will remove any greese from white goods.

Kruger, Deputy Chief of the Fire Department of New York and at one time Acting Chief, died today from drowning in the water filled basement of a burning factory building at No. 217 Canal street, New York, from which he had ordered his men a few minutes before he was caught by the dreaded back draught. Life was almost extinct when the heroic squad of men who rushed to the rescue of their commander finally dragged him from the water and fumes to the street, where he expired beside his weeping chief, Edward F. Croker.

NATIONS' FAMOUS FLAGS

Historic Banners in Various Countries of Great Significance.

THE ROYAL STANDARDS.

Flags of Great Britian—Origin of Ensign is Still a Much Disputed Question.

Sir Walter Scott, in one of his fascinating romances, tells the story of a battle between two rival clans during the Middle Ages. Each clan had its banner or standard, borne by a stalwart, lion-hearted warrior. As the battle was unusually fierce and protracted, and as the fray was deadliest where the standards were, it happened that both of the standard-bearers were killed. But each banner was immediately seized by another strong arm, and became the rallying point of the contending forces. In a short time, however, one of the banners again fell, and though the third man and the fourth man was cut down, there was still somebody to grasp the banner and raise it aloft in the strife. At last, such was the fury of the battle, one man alone was left on the defeated side, and he still clutching the ensign of his clan, fell fighting with the foe.

Such is the sacredness with which a banner or flag is regarded, that an army would sacrifice its last man before relinquishing it to the enemy.

It is probable that almost as soon as men began to collect together for common purposes, some kind of conspicuous object was used as the symbol of the common sentiment, or as the rallying point of the common force. During a time of war or military operations this would be particularly desirable, to mark out the lines and stations of encampment, and to keep in order the different bands when marching or engaged in battle.

In addition to this, there is reason to suppose that flags or their equivalents have often served by reminding men of past resolves, past deeds, past heroes, to rally to enthusiasm those sentiments of National spirit, of family pride and honor, of personal devotion, patriotism, or religion, upon which, as well as upon good leadership, discipline, and numerical force, success in warfare depends.

The earliest flags proper were probably square cloths of a single color. According to Homer, Agamemnon used a purple veil to rally his men; but as nations multiplied, particolors and different combinations were adopted to secure variety, and finally the devices or bearings of chieftains or tribes were added.

In modern times flags of a single color have generally a universally accepted meaning; thus, a white flag is a token of peace or cessation of hostilities; a red, of defiance; a black flag denotes piracy, or is sometimes hoisted to indicate that no quarter will be given; a yellow flag denotes quarantine.

Ancient standards were of many shapes—long, square, pointed, swallow-tailed, and not a few ending in several points. The banner which Charlemagne received from the pope was oblong, and split into three points; the oriflamme of France was of the same shape with five points. The standards of Henry VIII. of England were long, pointed streamers, rather than flags.

Nearly all the standards and ensigns of modern nations are rectangular but there are some exceptions. The naval flag of Sweden has three points, that of Denmark two, and the flag of China, with its golden dragon, is triangular.

Not a few of the European nations, as well as our own country, have each two or more flags, a royal or imperial standard, a national ensign, and a flag for merchantmen.

Royal and imperial standards are never hoisted except on occasions of great ceremony, when the sovereign or some member of the royal family is present, or one the sovereign's birthday anniversary. It is well to bear this distinction in mind to avoid confusion.

The most famous of all flags is the royal standard of Great Britain, which displays the heraldic insignia of England, Scotland and Ireland, quartered, the field of the first and fourth quarters red, charged with three lions passant; the second yellow, with a lion rampant; and the third blue, with a harp. The ancient standard of England was red, ornamented with a golden dragon which was the former ensign of Wessex, one of the seven Saxon Kingdoms. The three lions were the emblem of William of Normandy, but several of the English monarchs adopted the old dragon of Wessex. It was the device of Edward I. and of Henry V.

The National ensign of the United Kingdom, called the "Union Jack," is blue, charged with the three crosses of St. George, St. Andrew, and St. Patrick, the patron saints respectively of England, Scotland and Ireland. The cross of St. George is red, on a white field. The Union Jack when adopted by James I., in 1606, combined only the first two; but on the union with Ireland in 1800, the cross of St. Patrick was added.

Historical events have also caused great changes in the standards and national ensigns of France. The ancient kings bore the blue hood of St. Martin upon their standards and this was succeeded by the oriflamme which originally was the banner of the abbey of St. Denis.

The oriflamme was a banner of dark-green satin, charged with a royal diadem of gold, surrounded by six tongues of flame, from which its name.

This banner was succeeded in the sixteenth century by the white standard powdered with fleur-de-lis, introduced by Henry IV., that being the escutcheon of his family.

The imperial standard of Napoleon was blue, bearing a golden eagle and powdered with golden bees.

The tri-color was introduced at the time of the revolution, and is divided vertically into three parts, colored blue, white and red—the red to the fly and the white in the middle.

The origin of this flag and its colors is a disputed question. It is said by some to have been intended to combine the colors of the St. Martin's banner, of the oriflamme, and of the white flag of the Bourbons; by others the colors are said to be those of the city of Paris; and other authorities assert that the flag is copied from the shield of the Orleans family after Philip Egalite had knocked off the fleur-de-lis.

The imperial standard of Germany is white, charged with a black cross, with the black eagle of the empire at its intersection. In the dexter canton is the cross of Prussia on a black, white and red field.

The royal standard of Italy is green, white and red in equal vertical bars, the red to fly; on the white are the arms of Savoy, surmounted by a crown.

The Russian imperial standard is yellow, charged with the double-headed eagle of Constantine the Great, symbolical of the Eastern and Western empires. This emblem was adopted by Ivan III., on his marriage with the Princess Sophia of the imperial house of Byzantium. On the breast of the eagle, which is black, are emblazoned the ancient arms of Russia—St. George and the dragon on a red field, now the arms of the city of Moscow.

The imperial standard of Austria is yellow also, charged with the double-headed eagle of the Roman empire, but it has an indented border of gold, silver, blue and black. The Austro-Hungarian national ensign is formed of three equal horizontal bars, the chief red, the middle white, and the base red in the dexter half, and green on the fly. The green is added for Hungary, the national colors of which are red, white and green. The middle bar displays a shield, charged with red, white and red, surmounted by the imperial crown.

In the time of Ferdinand and Isabella the royal standard of Spain displayed the arms of Castile, Leon, Aragon, Navarre, and Granda, the different quarterings being charged with the lion of Leon, the castle of Castile, the chain of Navarre, the eagle of Aragon, and the pineapple of Granda.

Under the Bourbons it combined the arms of Castile, Leon, Granda and the fleur-de-lis of Bourbon. It is the most showy and regal, after that of Great Britain, of all the flags that float today. It is well to remember that King Alphonso does not call himself king of Spain, but of the Spains, referring to the several principalities once independent which have been united to form his kingdom.

The national standard of Turkey is a flag bearing the figure of a new moon and a star. This was the ancient device of Diana Byzantina, the patroness of Greek Byzantium, and was hoisted first by Mohammed II. after the capture of Constantinople in 1453.

The flag of Greece is blue, charged with a white cross. The naval standard has a royal diadem intersecting the cross.

The ensign of the kingdom of Sweden is blue with a yellow cross; that of Norway is red with a blue cross. The royal standard of the latter displays the ensignia of a lion rampant, grasping a battle ax, the ancient device of the sea king's kingdom.

The flag of the United States is said to have been suggested by the coat of arms belonging to the Washington family. Since it was first adopted by the Continental Congress, in June, 1777, it has undergone several changes.

At the present time it bears thirteen stripes, alternate red and white, with a star for each state embraced in the Union. These stars are on a blue field and grouped together, and symbolize the harmonious nature of the government, and the sacred character it would seek to elevate. The red stripes are said to indicate daring, and the white, purity.—The American Boy.

118 YEARS OF CONGRESS; FACTS ABOUT SESSIONS

Since the first Congress met in 1789, 118 years ago, there have been 134 sessions of the National body of lawmakers, says the Brooklyn Eagle. There have been 119 regular and 15 extra sessions; 39 different Speakers and Speakers pro tempore and 25 clerks. The longest regular sitting was the first session of the Fiftieth Congress, which met December 5, 1887, and adjourned October 20, 1888, ap eriod of 321 days. Other long sessions were the first of the Fifty-first Congress, 304 days, and the first of the Thirty-first, 302 days.

The second regular sessions of each Congress are always short, both Houses assembling according to law on the first Monday in December and adjourning by limitation on the 4th of the following March. These sessions last from 90 to 95 days. Aside from these the shortest ever held was the first session of the Triteenth Congress, which covered 134 days, and came immediately after an extra session. Other notably short sessions were during the Fifteenth Congress, 141 days; the Fifty-eigth, 144 days; the Fourteenth, 148 days; the Eleventh, 156 days, and the Fifty-fifth, 184 days.

Extra sessions are as old as Congress itself, the first having been called together January 4, 1790, a little over three months after the first session ever held came to a close. Next came the extra session of the Fifth Congress, then others during the Eleventh and Thirteenth, ofter which there was a lapse of 24 years before it was deemed necessary to meet more than twice in two years. The next extra ssion come with the Thirty-fourth Congress, nearly 15 years after.

Others were during the Thirty-seventh, Fortieth, Fifty-first, Forty-fifth, Forty-sixth, Fifty-third, Fifty-fifth and Fifty-eighth Congresses.

The longest extra session was during the First Congress and continued 221 days. The next was a part of the Fifty-fifth Congress and lasted 142 days. The shortest was of ten days' duration, during the life of the Thirty-fourth Congress. Altogether Congress has, since its beginning, been in extra session, 1,085 days, or about three years.

Only seventeen States have furnished Speakers of the House of Representatives, Pennsylvania leads with five, Massachusetts, Virginia and Kentucky coming next with four each. Other States have been represented as follows: New York, three; Indiana, three; Tennessee, two; New Jersey, two; Georgia, two; Maine, two; South Carolina, two, and Connecticut, Maryland, North Carolina, Ohio, Iowa and Illinois have each sent a man to the Speaker's chair.

James G. Blaine, of Maine, was Speaker for eight sessions—longer than any other man ever presided over the deliberations of the House. Schuyler Colfax and Samuel J. Randall each occupied the Speaker's chair for seven sessions. John Bell, of Tennessee, was Speaker for 93 days, having been elected to fill the unexpired term of Andrew Stevenson, of Virginia. Mr. Bell's term is the shortest on record.

Only two Speakers resigned—Henry Clay and Andrew Stevenson. Mr. Clay sent in his resignation by mail, October 20, 1820, during a recess, and was succeeded by John W. Taylor, of New York. Mr. Stevenson resigned June 2, 1834, and was succeeded by John Bell.

IF GOV. FORT SHOULD BE ELECTED VICE-PRESIDENT.

The likelihood of Gov. Fort becoming Vice-President of the United States has quickened interest in the question of his probable successor. If elected Vice-President, Mr. Fort would not resign as Governor until March 4, 1909, and his successor would be the President of the Senate, upon whim, under the Constitution, the "powers, duties and emoluments" of the Gubernatorial office would devolve. At the following election for members of the State Legislature—that is, in the fall of 1909, a new Governor would be elected.

It is not known who the President of the Senate will be next year, and there is naturally almost as much speculative interest in the situation as though a Governor were to be elected. Senator Hillery's term as President of the Senate will expire next January. Senator Wakelee of Bergen, who has presided over the Senate before, is talked of as Hillery's successor, and so is Senator Robbins, of Burlington, who this year is leader of the majority in the Senate.

It is known, however, that Senator Frelinghuysen, of Somerset, will be a candidate for re-election next fall, and, if elected, of which there is little doubt, he will be in line for the Presidency of the Senate, as will also Senator Avis, of Gloucester, who, it is understood, will also be a candidate for re-election to the Senate next fall.

The second term of Senator Bradley, of Camden, will expire next year and, although he has not announced himself as a candidate for a third term, his popularity would, no doubt, ensure his renomination, if he wished it. Bradley was President of the Senate two years ago. In the event of Gov. Fort's resignation, Camden would be pretty sure to want Bradley to succeed him as Acting Governor and that would necessarily put him in the race for President of the Senate.

Inasmuch as Senator Frelinghuysen was a candidate for the nomination for Governor last year until illness compelled him to retire from the race, he is looked upon by many as the logical candidate three years hence. Should avacancy occur in the meantime, however, through the resignation of Gov. Fort, Frelinghuysen's prospects of succeeding him by election would be materially helped by a preliminary experience as Acting Governor. In view of this contingency, Frelinghuysen's friends will be sure to urge his candidacy for the Presidency of the Senate next year.

Seldom in the history of the State has a more engaging situation presented itself. What will come of it, to be sure, will depend upon Gov. Fort's attitude toward the Vice-Presidency. It is quite generally believed that the Governor can have that honor if he wants it.—Jersey City Journal.

All the reasons of men are not worth one sentiment of woman.—Voltaire.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT

Whereas, the comptroller did, on the sixth day of January, nineteen hundred and eight, under the provisions of an act entitled "A further supplement to an act entitled 'An act to provide for the imposition of state taxes upon certain corporations and for the collection thereof,' approved April 18, 1884," which supplementary act was approved June 2, 1905, report to the governor a list of all corporations coming under said act; and

DAVIS OUT FOR BRYAN

Hudson County Boss Roasts James Smith, Jr. and Knocks Essex Democrats.

THE PARTY'S "EVIL GENIUS."

Says Former Senator Magins He Has an Anti-Bryan Delegation Ticket in His Vest Pocket.

Robert Davis, the Democratic boss of Hudson county, in an interview yesterday, declared that if he was chosen as a delegate-at-large to the Democratic convention at Denver, his choice for the nomination for President would be William J. Bryan. He also made some caustic remarks on ex-United States Senator James Smith, Jr.

The interview follows:

"I have no use for State leaders who make annual retirements from politics and then bob up each year just before party candidates are to be nominated. In Hudson we believe in the rule of the majority, and I am proud to say that Hudson has never bolted a party nomination. That cannot be said of Essex county.

"I think that the 'State leader' in Essex, who imagines that he has an anti-Bryan delegation to the national convention all selected and the list of names in his pocket, is mistaken. The Democrats of New Jersey are tired of defeat under that so-called leader's evil influence, and they are ready to throw off old yokes and give the young men of the party a chance to manage it. The young men are for Bryan, for they think that he can defeat any Republican except Roosevelt.

"The man behind the recent attack on Robert S. Hudspeth as State chairman, and who is working hard to defeat him for re-election, is doing and has done his utmost to destroy the Democratic party of New Jersey. He profits more by Republican administrations that he would by a real Democratic administration. I haven't mentioned any name because I don't think that it is necessary. There isn't a Democrat in the State who does not know who is the evil genius of the party.

"Essex county has no candidate. It is hot for Judge Gray, of Delaware. It is for any man to beat Bryan. It is against Bryan because the Republican machine fears his nomination. Democratic allies of that machine in this State are, therefore, against Mr. Bryan. They want to put up a man whom it will be easy for Taft to defeat. Taft could not defeat Bryan because the Roosevelt Democrats are against Taft and will support Bryan.

"Let me tell you, the Democrats of New Jersey, from what I have heard, do not propose to let the vest pocket of the "State leader" swallow the delegates to the national convention. In every county the supporters of Colonel Bryan are active, and Republicans and corporation money, with the aid of a few Democrats, will not be allowed to name delegates who will nominate a weakling for the Presidency.

"In Hudson we believe in a fair deal and the rule of the party majority. I do not know positively that I will be a delegate to Denver, for I do not carry the Democratic votes of Hudson in my vest pocket, like the Newark 'State leader,' but if I am elected a delegates there will be no one-man control of the New Jersey delegation at the Denver convention."

When Mr. Smith was asked for his opinion of the interview yesterday afternoon, all he would say was: "I have no idea to whom the gentleman refers."

MRS. MARTHA B. MOSS DIES AT HER HOME IN BROOKLYN.

ICE COMPANY COMPLETES HARVESTING RECORD CROP

Beating the elements out by just a few hours, employes of the Natural Ice Company completed cutting the frozen water crop on the Watchung lakes, last night. They have been working constantly in regular shifts since the big freeze-over occurred and have stacked away one of the finest supplies of ice that has ever been harvested in this vicinity. Everyone of the company's houses are filled to their capacity and 1,000 tone are piled up outside.

The zero weather of last week froze the water to a thickness of twelve inches so that when the cutting began it required a shorter time than usual to fill up the storage bins. The average thickness of the crops in recent years has been ten inches. The solidity of the ice also held off the warm wave of the past two days so that none of the ice had a chance to begin rotting. Had the rain today chanced along a little bit sooner a good part of it would have been spoiled.

The ice was taken from the main pond, known as Watchung lake, and the smaller one opposite the Wilson chapel known as Crystal lake.

Debele and Stahl also completed the harvesting of a full crop from their Maple avenue pond just before the rain came.

The annual exhibition in calisthenics and gymnasium work by the pupils of the Hartridge School was held at the Casino, yesterday afternoon and was witnessed by an audience of more than 200 parents and friends of the school. FORT TALKS IN NEW YORK

Gov. Tells Rutgers "Grads" Men Who Started Panic Ought to Be in Jail.

GEO. B. M'CLELLAN A SPEAKER.

New York's Mayor Reminds Jersey Governor That All His Friends Are Not Republicans.

With Mayor McClellan, Governor Fort of New Jersey, the Rev. William Rivers Taylor and President Demorest, of Rutgers, as speakers, the Rutgers College Alumni Association of New York held its annual banquet in the Hotel Plaza in that city last night. Two hundred and fifty guests were present. President Robert E. Farley presided. Of Governor Fort the Mayor said:

"As the Democratic Mayor of New York let me assure him (Gov. Fort) that all his friends are not in New Jersey and all his admirers not in the Republican party."

The Mayor, whose subject was "New York," went on to say that, like all New York loving New Yorkers, he was not always thus. "I too was once a Jerseyman," he said.

"I acknowledge a fondness for cheap periodicals," he went on, "but I am not prepared to say that I would exchange my four years at Princeton for the light and leading of the muckraker, or the human interest story, nor even the dark prophecies and awful revelations of Boston's mighty self-advertiser." At this there was a mighty cheer for Tom Lawson.

Governor Fort in his speech laid stress on the fact that the success of the country was not based upon the Constitution, but upon the individual.

"The financial flurry is but temporary," he said; "it was brought on by people who are out of jail, but ought not to be."

The Governor, like the Mayor, also paid his tribute to New Jersey by saying there had been no business failure in his State for the last five years in life insurance. "And I am not an insurance agent either," he added.

All the features of the occasion were very special. The faculty of the college arrived on a special car, ate from special plates, and drank special vintages from special glasses. There were special cheers for each special speaker and each special word that was uttered.

PATERSON'S EXECUTIVE PLAN MAYORS' LEAGUE

It is proposed to form a mayors' league of New Jersey cities, in the organization of which Mayor Anlrew F. McBride of Paterson will soon take the initiative. The object is to have the cities of the State co-operate in securing legislation that will be of benefit to them all.

The finance board realizes that a movement is necessary to bring about the gradual advancing of the fiscal year until it coincides with the time that the taxes are due, so that the city will not have to borrow about a million dollars each year in anticipation of the collection of taxes in order to carry the city from March 20, the time the fiscal year now closes, to December 20, when the city's taxes become due. The city counsel said that several other cities in the State were in a position similar to that of Paterson, and he thought their cooperation could be obtained in any effort for legislation that will bring them relief. Mayor McBride then suggested the formation of a mayors' league, which could confer on this matter and others that affected the interests of the different cities. The suggestion was approved by the board, and the Mayor is to take action within a few days. The league will be similar to that started by ex-Mayor Fagan of Jersey City and ex-Mayor Lankering of Hoboken in 1904 but which ceased to exist owing to a disagreement over tax matters.

SOMERSET AUTHORITIES HUNT A BARN BURNER

The mysterious destruction by fire of an automobile near Harlingen, Thursday night, has led to an investigation by the Somerset county authorities, and it is believed that criminal action will follow. The automobile, which was owned by Augustus Drake, of Grant avenue, was used by him, his brother and C. H. Snyder, also of this city, to make a trip to Harlingen, on Wednesday, where the trio went to look after a property deal.

Returning home that night, the party had gone but a short distance when the automobile broke down. After repeated unsuccessful attempts to repair the machine, it was finally run in a farmer's barn nearby, and the three men came back to Plainfield by train. Late Wednesday night the barn was set on fire and partly destroyed. The farmer and his neighbors rescued the machine after great difficulty. Mr. Drake intended going after his automobile on Thursday, but was prevented for some reason, and that night the barn was again set on fire and this time it was completely destroyed and with it the machine. Nothing was left but the iron fame. When Mr. Drake went to Harlingen yesterday he learned of the loss of his machine.

The incidents in connection with the fire were reported to the county authorities and Detective George Totten has been busy on the case ever since. There is a report that he has obtained sufficient evidence that will lead to an indictment and the possible prosecution of the guilty parties. As the automobile was covered by insurance the loss will not be a total one for Mr. Drake.

BIG CLAIMS ARE MADE FOR THIS GAS ENGINE

An interesting demonstration of the new gas engine-car compressor is now being given by the Gas Engine-Pneumatic Company, at its factory on North avenue. This engine produces compressed air and power simultaneously, by the ingenious arrangement of a single air compressing cylinder between two gas or gasolene power cylinders.

The air piston acts as a perfect counter-weight to the power pistons, eliminating all vibration, requiring no expensive foundation, prolonging the life of the working parts, increasing the efficiency and producing a smoothness of rotation, which are such desirable features. An automatic controller maintains the compressed air at any desired pressure and volume, within the capacity limits of the air cylinder, with no material change in the speed or interference with the power delivered for operating other machinery by belt drive in direct connection.

The ease of starting, reliability of operation, fuel economy, compactness and simplicity of construction are other essential elements of improvement incorporated into the new engine by Franklin H. Merrill, of this city, who is the inventor. Prospective users of the engine include machine shops, foundries, automobile garages and factories, stone yards, quarries, chemical works, contractors, mines, tunnels, railroads, etc. The inventor and Dr. C. W. Leonard were first associated in the development of the engine. Later the Gas Engine-Pneumatic Company was organized with the following officers and directors: President, Dr. P. J. Zeglio; vice-president, Robert A. Meeker; treasurer, Dr. C. W. Leonard; secretary, Judge William Newcorn; directors, F. H. Ball, Walter A. Manning and Franklin H. Merrill. A small amount of treasury stock has been sold and the proceeds applied in building the engine and in repairing and fitting up the factory on North avenue. As the fullest expectations of the inventor and company have been realized a limited amount of stock will be disposed of for additional capital and to acquire equipment for economical manufacturing. Persons who are interested in the engine are invited to visit the factory and see it in practical operation, making air pressure automatically and furnishing power for driving main shafting.

MISSION AT ST. MARY'S

Father Bogan Announces Series of Special Services Beginning on Easter.

FATHER DOWNES IN CHARGE.

Hartford, Conn., Priest Will Be Assisted By Five Others—Mission Will Last Two Weeks.

In accordance with custom, Father B. M. Bogan, rector of St. Mary's church, has arranged for a mission to be held at the local church for two weeks, beginning on Easter Sunday. There will be special services daily, with special masses and three sermons a day. Rev. Father Edward J. Downes, of the Hartford, Conn., diocese, with five assistant priests, will have charge of the services. The first week of the mission will be devoted especially to services for men, while the second and last week will be primarily for the women. A series of sermon topics of a revivalistic nature is being arranged, but has not yet been made public.

Rev. Father Downes, who will be in charge of the mission services, was a classmate of Father Bogan at St. Charles College, Maryland. At the completion of his course there, he was eager to pursue his studies and be admitted to orders, but was prevented from immediately realizing his aim by the necessity of acting as breadwinner for his family. Prominent in public life during Cleveland's campaign, when he made extensive stumping tours, Rev. Father Downes was rewarded by being made consul at Amsterdam, Holland, when Mr. Cleveland became president. While he was abroad, he went to Rome, where, after continuing studies for seven years, he was ordained to the priesthood at the Papal College.

Since his return to this country, Father Downes has been constantly active in mission work at Milford, Conn., where he is now at the head of a band of mission priests, who will come with him to this city for the mission at St. Mary's. Father Downes is brother to Secretary Downes, of the New York fire commission, who died last month in New York. He is a former newspaper man, having represented the New York Sun at New Haven, Conn., for many years.

TO FIGHT A CHANGE IN STATE AUTO LAW

The New Jersey Trade Automobile Association decided at a meeting in Newark last night to fight the proposed change in the New Jersey automobile law to get rid of the manufacturers' licenses as they exist at present. A clause in the law allows manufacturers to cover five cars with one license. It is proposed in the amendment to have every car licensed according to its horsepower, which will make the fees of the dealers reach into thousands of dollars. A meeting has been called for Monday, when definite action will be taken.

Over 300 letters have been sent to dealers throughout the State, urging them to protect themselves against extermination by the proposed amendment to the present law. A fund to agitate the question has been started. One of the claims is that dealers of other States will be allowed to enter New Jersey with cars by the payment of 50 cents for six days' visiting privilege and be able to compete against New Jersey dealers to better advantage.

C. E. SOCIETY HOLDS VALENTINE SOCIABLE.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the First Presbyterian church enjoyed a Valentine social in the chapel of the church, last night. The rooms were elaborately decorated with red paper hearts, and in each of the five class rooms, where progressive games were played, the decorations were appropriate to the occasion. After playing games the young people devoted their time to making valentines. These were distributed later by the "queen of hearts," which honor was accorded Miss Marion Englehart.

The refreshments consisted of pink lemonade, heart shaped cakes, cookies and mottoes. The waiters were Jesse Lounsbury, Wilbur Dunning, Elmer Ackor, Stanley Karner, Louis Fisher and Orlando Lounsbury. The social committee which arranged the affair comprised Miss Cornelia Lounsbury, Miss Beatrice Miner, Miss Winifred Hammond, Miss Barbara Peacock, Wilbur Dunning, Stanley Karner and George Ballentyne.

PRISONER'S OPINIONS COST HIM THIRTY DAYS

Venting his opinion of Judge Runyon in anything but polite terms cost William Kennedy an additional sentence of thirty days in jail after he had been arraigned in the city court this morning on a charge of drunkenness and disorderly conduct.

Kennedy was arrested at Second street and Park avenue by Patrolman Nolan, last night, and Judge Runyon believed that his conduct had been sufficiently bad to warrant his going to Elizabeth for awhile and made it a month. As he was being taken back to a cell he made several surly remarks and ended up by declaring in loud tones what he thought of the court. Judge Runyon couldn't help hearing them and he called to Doorman McCue to bring the prisoner back.

"I thought I was treating you squarely," he said to Kennedy when he faced the desk again, "but I see you don't know enough to appreciate it. I'll just add another thirty days to your sentence in order to let you have plenty of time to convince yourself that this court is entitled to respect."

The second time Kennedy was taken back he had nothing to say.

HEART GAMES PLAYED AT WARREN'S SOCIAL

Heart games predominated in a delightful St. Valentine's Day sociable held at Warren chapel under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society last night. Despite the storm, nearly a hundred persons were out, and the evening passed rapidly as the various games pere played. The first game was "Hunting Sweethearts," and John Schenck, who found forty-two of the hidden candies, was declared the winner. Then came the drawing competition, in which the company, blind-folded, drew hearts on a blackboard and wrote their names across them. Miss Nora Schenck and Earle Smith did the best in this.

"Mending broken hearts" was done with cut cardboard hearts at tables. Miss Sadie Stelle proved the greatest "comforter" in this contest. Dividing into teams, the company then entered upon a competition of pitching cardboard hearts into baskets. Captain John Schenck's team and Captain John Green's team won the honors. Women were proved to be more observing than men in the observation contest which followed. Divided into "teams" of ten, the company was led to a table bearing all sorts of St. Valentine's Day articles, where they looked for three minutes. After this they were given five minutes to write down what they had seen, in another room. In each case, this contest was won by a woman.

When it came time for refreshments, the women drew hearts, on which were written the names of their partners, from a basket. It being leap year, they then served their partners with heart-shaped cakes and hot chocolate. The committee to plan the affair was composed of Miss Adele Kirby, Mrs. J. O. McKelvey and Theodore Martin. The reception and entertainment committee comprised Mrs. John Schenck, Miss May Bennett, Miss Harriet Squires and Charles Windham, while Charles Bryan, president of the Christian Endeavor Society, Charles Windham and the Misses Harriet Squires and Nora Schenck welcomed the guests as they arrived. Miss Helen Van Emburgh was in charge of the women's wraps, and Francis Caldwell was in the men's coat room.

Miss Dorothy Barret Surprised.

Miss Dorothy Barrett, of 1020 East Front street, was given a surprise party last night. When she returned from town about 8:30 she found a company of forty young people gathered at her home. The evening was spent in dancing and playing games. Music was furnished by Charles and George Nathen, of Newark. Refreshments were served at midnight. The out of town guests were A. Lorthman, Fred VanCott, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Nathen, of Newark; the Misses Greig, of Brooklyn; Miss Harvey and Mrs. W. L. Warren, of New York. The affair was arranged by Miss Ida Pierson. Mr. and Mrs. Barrett and Mrs. Oscar Pierson.

LOCAL OPTION'S HEARING

Mr. Moxon Announces That Arguments on Bill will Be Heard on March 2.

PROVISIONS OF THE MEASURE.

It Is Made Up of Seventeen Lengthy Sections and Its Sponsor Is Assemblyman Crosby.

In keeping with the announcement made on Wednesday, Chairman John R. Moxon, of the House Committee on Municipal Corporations, having in charge the local option bill, has arranged for a hearing on the issue to be held in the Assembly chamber at 2 p. m. on March 2. This open meeting was decided on as the only satisfactory method of securing a definite opinion from those who have interested themselves in the local option movement, and it is expected that after the hearing it will be possible to draw the line sharply between the local optionists and the opposition.

There has been quite a demand for printed copies of Assemblyman Crosby's bill and it is possible that sermons favorable to its passage preached Sunday have stimulated curiosity in relation to its provisions.

The first section of the bill contains definitions of words and phrases used in the act. This is a comparatively new fad in legislation, and in this instance is intended to deprive saloonkeepers' counsel of technical objections. For instance, the political division in which a local option election may be held is defined as a "town, township village, borough, city or other municipality or ward therein." Intoxicating liquor is defined as any distilled, spirituous, fermented or malt liquor by whatever name it shall be known. Anti-saloon territory is any municipal division in which the people by a majority vote have decided against the sale of liquor. Giving away liquor is prohibited even in a man's home if his home is in a public resort.

The second section provides for a petition to the court for a special election. It requires the signatures of 30 per cent. of the total number of votes cast at the preceding general election and all that the judge is required to ascertain is whether the applicants constitute 30 per cent., based upon the vote at the last preceding general election. A glance at the election returns will show that in a great many of the municipalities and their sub-divisions the 30 per cent. will be a very small number. In some extreme cases there will be less than a dozen signatures. Special elections seldom interest many voters and those who are especially interested generally win. It might have been a more fair proposition to require 51 per cent. of the voters, but the bill sems to have been drawn with the intention to give a minority power to initiate the movement for a special election. The notice of application is not to be advertised in the newspapers, but notices are to be posted in three places in the ward or municipality, and one notice is to be posted in the County Clerk's office. The directions to the judge are mandatory. He must issue an order for the special election within fifteen days after the hearing and must fix the date for the election within thirty-five days of the date of the order. The election cannot be held within sixty days of the general election. This makes it come prior to October 3, for the next general election will be held on November 3 next. If this Legislature adopts the constitutional amendments there will be a special general election "not less than four months after the Legislature adjourns." Thus there will be a clash between dates for the constitutional election will be held in September. The third section provides that this special local option election shall be held under the general election law.

The fourth section provides that the result of the election shall be entered in the court records to supply prima facie evidence, where a majority of the voters in a ward or municipality have voted against saloons, that the ward is anti-saloon territory where liquor-selling shall be illegal. This section also contains the penalties. These are largely discretionary with the judge. Thirty days' grace is allowed for saloonkeepers to get out of business. The first offense involves a fine of $50 to $200; the second offense involves fines from $100 to $500 and imprisonment from three months to a year, while the saloon will be abated as a nuisance.

The fifth section permits manufacturers to sell to retailers in wholesale quantites outside of anti-saloon territory. Licensed saloonkeepers will be allowed to sell until their licenses expire. Druggists are allowed to sell liquor on prescription, each prescription to be filled but once, and recorded in a book, which book is to be open to police inspection or by any officer of the county. The liquor

1812 WAR DIARY.

Interesting Book Turns Up At Woodbridge.

Woodbridge, Feb. 15.—Nearly coincident with the discovery and sale in London of the flag flown from Captain Lawrence's ship, the Chesapeake, in the War of 1812, is the finding of a diary kept by an officer on that famous ship. The diary was discovered last week by members of the New Jersey Historical Society. It belongs to Mrs. Howard Valentine, of this place.

The record, which was kept by Midshipman John D. Fisher, contains among other entries a description of the battle between the Chesapeake and the Shannon, giving an account of the engagement, the surrender of the American ship, together with the names of officers killed and wounded. It also complains against the treatment of the American survivors on the prison ship Malabar. Captain Lawrence was mortally wounded in this battle.

The record was left to Mrs. Valentine by her father, William H. Warner, who died fifteen years ago. He had had it for more than fifty years. According to Mrs. Valentine, the book was lent to her father by a retired naval officer. The owner told him that he would call for it in a few days. Soon after that the officer went on an ocean voyage, and never returned for his property.

MORRIS PLAINS ASYLUM NEEDS ARE EXPLAINED

Morris Plains, Feb. 15.—The members of the joint legislative committee that visited the State Hospital for the Insane at this place Thursday found the immense institution packed with 1,880 patients. All the exercising rooms have been turned into dormitories, and about one hundred and fifty patients occupy beds made upon the floor, and it was stated that patients are coming in at a steadily increasing ratio. Asked if he thought an addition to this institution is desirable, Dr. Britton D. Evans, the medical director, said:

"No. When anything of that character is contemplated, I think a new institution should be built somewhere in South Jersey, where it will be convenient to that rapidly growing section of the State." In discussing the affairs of the institution John C. Eisele, president of the board of managers, called the attention of the visiting committeemen to the fact that the board is handicapped, and always has been, because the moneys due the hospital are paid but once in three months, whereas economy dictates that their bill should be paid in thirty days, to enable the hospital to reap the advantage of the lowest prices. Some of the merchants of the State recently refused to bid upon bills for supplies because of this condition. They would not wait sixty or ninety days for their money.

Mr. Eisele added that many New York merchants were the low bidders, thus depriving New Jersey business men of traffic they should control, and urged that a law be passed preventing any one from bidding unless they are citizens of this State, that law prevailing in New York, to the manifest advantage of that State's merchants.

In referring to an appropriation he said that the attorney-general has ruled that the insurance money due upon the nurses' building, destroyed by fire, must be turned into the State treasury and the hospital board must go before the Legislature and ask for another appropriation for this building.

Dr. Evans called attention to some of the conditions under which they do business. "We must," he said, "advertise for bids, but without regard to the price we must not exceed our appropriation, and must give our patients the very best treatment in all respects. The injustice of all this," he said, "is so clear it does not need elaboration. Give us what is necessary," he added, "and then if we do not conduct the affairs of the institution right we are responsible for it." He laid stress upon the need of spiral fire-escapes, something in which, in the confusion attending a fire, a patient may be placed and be safe.

Senator William J. Bradley, chairman of the Senate appropriation committee, said it is plain that the hospital should have more money, and the plan of ninety-day payments is not businesslike, and he saw no reason why both the State and counties should not pay the hospital monthly. He had been greatly impressed by the magnitude of the work done here, as well as by its character.

INVENTOR'S LIFE ENDS.

Philip Ely, of Bayonne, Dies at His Home.

Bayonne, Feb. 15.—Philip Ely, inventor, died at his home, 32 East Twenty-fifth street, last night. He amassed considerable wealth from his inventions. His most notable successes were a device for tapping water pipes which is used all over the country, and a paent fire hydrant, which is used exclusively in Cuba.

Besides being a Mason, he was connected with the Royal Arcanum, the local Elks and Knights of Pythias. He was the father of Frank Ely, water purveyor of this city.

Mr. Ely came to New York from Oxford, England, forty-seven years ago. He patented his fire hydrant at the age of nineteen years. He leaves, besides the widow and son Frank, five other children, as follows: James, Richard, Charles, Jesse and Mrs. Louis Bonney. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

We're Going To Clean Out These Winter Goods

—as you can easily see by the prices we have put on them—that we mean for them to go right now. It's in line with our 1908 policy to clean out the old stock and make room for the new. We can afford to be a bit liberal about it, too, since it was inventoried last month with that in view. Read the list—how generously we cut the price! You will most likely find use for some of these things the way we sell them.

And the White Goods Sale isn't altogether over with either—in fact, all that's left of the White Goods bargains—as Muslin Underwear, India Linons, Persian and French Lawns, Nainsooks, Long Cloths, Embroideries—these will all remain at the sale prices until disposed of—and displayed on the centre tables as heretofore.

A rattling story of the South Dakota ranch life in the days of cattle thieves. Seldom has a book contained so many characters that stand for plains life as it actually was in those days, or so many that have a faculty of appealing to the reader.—Fort Worth Telegram.

A tale full of life and action, and thrilling situations, with none of the characters overdrawn. Convincing and well knit together, the novel should take its place with the best fiction founded on life in the wild and breezy west.—Chicago Evening Post.

BASEBALL.

Al Lawson, who is the president of the recently organized Union League, a baseball circuit, has decided to take in Elizabeth as the eighth city. Elizabeth declares, and as it has a population of 65,000, with many thousands more to draw from in the neighboring towns, he believes that Union League games there will be successful, particularly on Sunday. The officers of the new Elizabeth club are: R. H. McAdams, president; Mat Green, treasurer, and W. T. Rath, secretary. As now constituted the Union League will take in Brooklyn, Paterson, Newark, Elizabeth, Reading, Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore. Lawson says that this is one of the most compact circuits in the United States.

The longest jump is from Brooklyn to Baltimore, 136 miles. In four of the cities Sunday ball can be played. Lawson also says that there will be no trouble about getting good players, for the woods are full of them. A schedule will be issued in about two weeks. So long as the Union League maintains clubs in Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Newark, Baltimore and Wilmington, where organized ball is already represented, there will be no chance for it to secure membership in the National Association of Minor Leagues. The Union League clubs expect to hold their players through one season at a time by placing half of their salaries in bank, to be collected in the fall.

After much haggling the managers of the American and National League teams of Philadelphia have agreed upon a spring series of seven games, to begin on April 3. Two umpires will be selected, probably Connolly and either Klem or Emslie. This will be the only regular interleague series in the East this year, while that between the two St. Louis clubs will be the only exhibition in the West. In time it is believed that these spring series will be cut out altogether.

The owner of the Boston Nationals was stunned the other day when he received a letter from Barney Joy, a native of the Sandwich Islands, who said that he would agree to sign a Hub contract if he got a salary of $4,000, $400 in advance and a round trip ticket from Honolulu to Boston. Last season Joy pitched such good ball in California that the Boston magnate secured his release. It is hardly necessary to say that Joy will be summarily turned down.

GOLF.

Dull care, the blues and all forms of melancholia are the avowed enemies of Broadhurst and Currie's riproaring success, "Rudolph and Adolph," which is the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre this afternoon and tonight, with its clean bright comedy and funny situations and judging from the press endorsements local theatregoers should come prepared with laughter receptacles.

Miss Fola La Follette, daughter of the Wisconsin senator, has a prominent part in Leo Ditrichstein's new comedy, "Bluffs," which Wagenhals and Kemper will present at the New Plainfield theatre next Monday night. Miss La Follette is a young woman of remarkable talent who took up stage work four years ago with the conviction that she was cut out for it. Her part is "opposite" to that played by Mr. Ditrichstein. The company in other ways is one of the best that good judgment could suggest. Fred Bond, who has been conspicuous for many years, is in a commanding position in the cast which will also bring forward prominently Miss Kenyon Bishop, Miss Alison Skipworth, Alfred Kappeler and Eugene Redding.

There have been several melodramas seen here in this and previous seasons, but it was not until "The Shadow Behind the Throne" was announced for next Wednesday afternoon and night at the New Plainfield theatre that local theatregoers realized how much of real merit can be put in a real up-to-date high class melodrama. It is to be regretted that the word melodrama has too often been associated with senseless blood and thunder, impossible situations and an almost total absence of interesting plot or intelligible action or sequence. In "The Shadow Behind the Throne," it has been proved that melodrama in its best form is one of the very highest forms of theatrical amusement and the great attendance this famous play has received throughout the land seems clearly to indicate that it is also one of the most popular forms of theatrical amusement.

The title of a melodrama coming to the New Plainfield theatre next Saturday afternoon and night is suggestive of something rapidly sensational. Theodore Kremer, the author of "A Race For Life," has got it all down fine. He will make you believe that you are right on the track, so realistic is the race scene in a heavy rainstorm.

Alvah Tunison, of Somerville, has returned home after a visit with his cousins, Voorhees and Howard Huff, of West Fourth street.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Except for what they regard as abominable luck, the members of the Fairview Country Club, of Tuckahoe, N. Y., would now be in possession of a good 18-hole golf course. Realizing some time ago that the land now occupied by the club might be lost at any time, the officials decided to branch out. After considerable effort a desirable tract of land, comprising one hundred acres and known as the Decker farm, was purchased, near Elmsford. This was several miles from their old stamping ground and within a short distance of the Knollwood Country Club links.

"Bob" Peebles, the Fairview professional, was told to go ahead and lay out the new course. In this work he had the advice of George Law, of Baltusrol. Every effort was being made to get the new course ready for play in the spring, and at one time Peebles had as many as one hundred men at work. He was optimistic over the prospects, and declared the land presented possibilities for a variety of play.

After the course had been staked out, one of the greens made and seed purchased word was received that the land had been condemned for the purpose of waterworks for New York city. Now the Fairview golfers are where they started. There is nothing to do at present except remain where they are, but, as it is only possible to lease the ground on which the nine-hole course is located from month to month, they never know when they will be notified to vacate. During the last year the membership of the club has doubled, and had the new links been secured it would probably have continued to grow. There is a bare chance that the club will not be molested during the coming season.

Now that Deal has been added to the rota of the British championship links the Irish players are again pressing claim for recognition in the grand round. The game has so spread in Ireland that to deny a consideration longer in the championship distribution will be to invite a rebellion. The Irish amateurs stand high in the game, but for many reasons they do not as a class make the journey to the championships. There are upward of 140 clubs in Ireland and they represent 30,000 players. Several of the courses are of championship timber, and according to Harry Vardon, the best in the world. Thus far the British golfing authorities have shown no disposition to favor the Irish players, but now that extension has started, the golfers of the Green Isle are hopeful that it will be extended to them.

KEEP THE KIDNEYS WELL.

Health Is Worth Saving, and Some Plainfield People Know How to Save It.

Many Plainfield people take their lives in their hands by neglecting the kidneys when they know these organs need help. Sick kidneys are responsible for a vast amount of suffering and ill health, but there is no need to suffer nor to remain in danger when all diseases and aches and pains due to weak kidneys can be quickly and permanently cured by the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. Here is a Plainfield citizen's recomendation:

Mrs. M. Newman, of 536 West Third street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "For some time I was a constant sufferer from various kidney ailments, among which were violent headaches and a continuous pain in the limbs, which gave me no rest, day or night. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, and sent to Randolph's pharmacy for a supply. They seemed to take effect at once and soon after I began using them, my head got better, and the pain and stiffness left my limbs and joints. I heartily recommend Doan's Kidney Pills for such troubles as mine."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

At the county teachers' examination held in Woodbury there were fifty-six candidates, only two of whom were males.

Truman Hickman, of Green Creek, Wednesday, cut down two walnut trees which were at least 100 years old.

A human chain, composed of ten companies, saved the life of John Levi when he broke through the ice on Assischunck Creek, at Burlington, yesterday.

John Anderson was overcome by gas from a leaky fixture in William J. Davis' home, in Edgewater Park, yesterday. He was found unconscious on the floor, but was soon resuscitated by a physician.

Threatened with the loss of both his eyes, John Showell, a blacksmith, was compelled to dispose of his place of business on Kaighn avenue, Camden, yesterday, the glare of the fires having seriously affected his vision.

Dr. Louis Bevier, State High School inspector, has been visiting the Cumberland county schools, accompanied by County Superintendent Glaspell, for the purpose of placing some of the schools on the registered list, with a three years' high school course.

Angry because he could not purchase at his own figure a pair of shoes at a bargain sale, James Burke, thirty-two years old, demolished a plate-glass window at the store of Morris Smith, 916 South Third street, Camden, and was yesterday sent to jail for three months.

A double funeral was held yesterday at the old Moravian church, near Swedesboro. After a few days' illness James Steelman, seventy-nine years old, who resided near Porch's mill, died from pneumonia, and two days later his wife, Rebecca, eighty years old, passed away.

The Willowdale Dramatic Club gave its second performance of "Hetty's Triumph," in Willard Hall, Passaic, last evening for the benefit of Ben Hur Court, No. 7, Order of Ben Hur. The three principal characters of the play were taken by Andrew J. Gibson, president of the club; Mrs. Anna Jean Livsey and Thomas J. O'Donnell. The Willowdale Mandolin Club and the Farmer Boys' Quartet gave selections.

Citizens who protested in vain against filthy sidewalk conditions in many party of Burlington have organized the Society of Disgusted Ducks, to fight for street reforms. City officials, one after another, are dodging responsibility for not compelling negligent property owners to pave. City Council opened the year with promises of reform in this direction, and the "ducks" hope to awake the civic body to fulfil its pledges.

TO MARK TUNNEL OPENING.

Jersey City Will Appoint Committee of 100 to Aid in Arranging Formal Celebration.

Jersey City, Feb. 15.—At a meeting Thursday night of the local Board of Aldermen's committee of ten on the Hudson river tunnel opening celebration it was decided to appoint a committee of 100 residents of the city to co-operate with it in making the celebration on February 25 a success.

Eugene F. Kinkead, alderman-at-large, said that, inasmuch as the New York Board of Aldermen intends to take no formal action in getting up plans to commemorate the opening of the tunnels, the principal exercises will take place on the Jersey side of the river. He suggested that the program for the celebration include a public meeting at the city hall, with addresses by Governor Fort, Mayor Wittpenn, Mayor Stein, of Hoboken, and Mayor Garven, of Bayonne, and that a display of fireworks be given.

Dr. Ulamor Allen, of the Hudson City Business Men's Association, which sent a delegation to the meeting, moved that in case $700 or more be raised by contribution the money be expended for a fireworks display in front of the city hall and on the hill, probably in Riverview Park. The motion was carried. It was decided to invite the Mayors of the municipalities in Hudson county to participate in the celebration.

Getting His Own Back.

An ironworker, having had the worst of an argument with a friend, decided to get even with him.

Waiting, therefore, until his enemy had retired to rest one night, he approached his street door and knocked loudly in order to wake him.

Opening the bedroom window, the other hurriedly inquired what the noise was all about.

"Why," replied the outside one, "one of your windows is wide open."

"Which one?"

"Why, the one you have your head through," chuckled the other as he went away satisfied with the success of his plot.—Illustrated Bits.

"Magie" Cline Recovering.

Red Bank, Feb. 15.—Miss "Maggie" Cline, the actress, who has been ill for a couple of weeks with blood-poisoning, at the home of her sister, on Branch avenue, this place, is now on the road to recovery. It is understood that her illness was caused by the use of cosmetics, and that for a time she was in a serious condition. Miss Cline has retired from the stage permanently and it is understood that a testimonial will be given here shortly by her friends.

THE DAILY PRESS.

Plainfield, N. J., February 15, 1908.

OVERHEAD WIRES.

It probably might be well if the provisions of a bill that the Newark Board of Works proposes to have introduced in the Legislature on Monday night could be etxended so as to apply to Plainfield. The measure in question will vest in Newark the power to construct and maintain conduits for wires now strung overhead. In addition it will give that city authority to acquire subways owned by public utility corporations either by condemnation or purchase. One important provision will make it mandatory for all public service corporations to pay the municipality a rendal therefor.

Highly charged overhead wires are a constant menace to any city. For several years there has been some agitation in favor of compelling public utility concerns to place them underground but nothing has ever come of it. The attention of the city fathers has often been called to the condition of things and finally after one death resulted in the Netherwood section from such a cause, there was a little stir among the authorities in favor of remedying the evil. Along Second street, from Madison avenue to Watchung avenue, there is one big string of wires carrying heavy voltage. Coming into the city, from Metuchen is another. The Plainfield Protective Association has within the last few days called public attention to the latter and this association very properly has taken the position that if such a wire is dangerous it should be removed forthwith. Under no circumstances should the P. S. C. be given three years within which to place it underground.

Why this menace is allowed to continue its inconceivable. Public safety demands prompt action. To allow the P. S. C. or any other public utilities concern three years or even three months is all together out of reason.

If the Bishops' Law cannot be enforced, what is the sense of enacting more stringent excise legislation?—Elizabeth Times.

Are we to understand that the recent presentment of the Union County Grand Jury as to the deplorable excise conditions in Elizabeth has had no effect?

Dispatch from Washington states that Mr. Fowler's financial bill has been "turned down." The same fate probably awaits its author if he has an ambition to be returned to Congress next fall.

Hetty Green has joined with Tom Lawson in predicting the President's renomination. When such benevolent prophets as these tell us of a "sure thing" it begins to look dark for Mr. Roosevelt.

The fact that Robert Davis has come out in his favor, ought to furnish a good excuse for the New Jersey Democracy to turn down the Nebraskan's candidacy.

It seems a pity that the law prevents the renomination of a sheriff when such a good one as Dr. Lawrence could be continued in office.

The Taft victory in Ohio only serves to show how vunerable a State "boss" is when the people are once aroused.

The Ohio "Fire Alarm" seems to be only a false alarm.

PLANS LARGEST CITY IN WORLD FOR JERSEY.

"The City of 7,000,000 Inhabitants" was discussed at the meeting of the Board of Trade of Newark Thursday night, and the rosy view of the future establishment of the largest city in the world with Newark as it is at the present, the centre, was explained by Calvin Tomkins.

He spoke of the merging of Jersey City and Newark and surrounding towns into one large municipality, the reclaiming of the meadows between Newark and Jersey City to allow these cities to grow together, and he declared that when this was an assured fact "our interests are so closely related to those of New York that we will be practically one large city, the business centre of the civilized world."

Librarian John Cotton Dana, of the Free Public Library, chairman of the interburban committee, which prepared a report on the matter in 1906, requested that the report be reprinted and distributed and steps be taken to perfect the scheme. He suggested a metropolitan commission to take the matter up.

Another Batch of Talent Makes a Play for Amateur Night Money.

"FOREIGN ACTS" ON THE BILL.

Dunellen Dancer, Helped Out By a Pair of Wooden Shoes, Gets the First Award.

Manager Counihan's weekly tryout of future Vesta Victorias and James J. Mortóns drew another large crowd to the New Plainfield theatre, las night. In the words of the big vaudeville managers, there were "five foreign acts on the bill and one home number." One aspirant hailed from Somerville, another from Bound Brook, a third from Rahway, a fourth from Cranford and modest Dunellen contributed the genius that copped first money.

Eva Hale, the Somerville soprano, pranced on for Act 1 and pranced back quicker than she came. Whoever told her she could sing should be drawn and quartered as she appeared to know as much about scales as a catfish and they haven't any. It was impossible to learn what song she started to dissect. Dunellen's representative came next in the person of George White, who gave a wooden shoe dance. The shoes are entitled to some of the credit for the owner getting first money but to give him his dues, he had one back-action flip that was good and sakes alive, how he did nurse it. He gave it every ten seconds and then threw in two or three for good measure when the gallery applauded.

May West, who Manager Counihan said was known as "the Bound Brook baritone," came third on the list and was really the big scream for the night. Her song was announced as "The Girl That Threw Me Down," the title and May's appearance recalling Maggie Cline in her palmy days. She was left at the post when the piano man started on his journey over the keys but she caught up to him at the quarter pole. At the half she was somewhat in the lead and bidding fair to win by two bars but unfortunately May's voice was unable to stand the strain and it broke in the home stretch. She essayed to reach a high note but it ended in a gurgle and the rest appeared in the form of a pantomime sketch, the "get the hook" cries drowning out what she had to say. She was game, however, and appealed for a second try and got it. She finished out "The Girl That Threw Me Down" but fell from grace by trying "Take Me Back to New York Town." The wheelbarrow used in place of the old-time hook was sent out for her and she escaped to the other side of the stage.

Peter Ross, of Cranford, came on for a soft shoe dance a la George Primrose and they led him away after one minute had elapsed. Peter is a good kid to all appearances but somebody ought to poison him if he ever dares to breathe to anyone that he can dance, even if he says "cross my heart, hope I may die." A young lady introduced as "Wanita, the Rahway fire dancer," followed Peter's withdrawal and executed some steps the way they teach them in Peter Tillman's town. The dancing instructor over there works in the Woodbridge clay banks in the day time so there is some excuse for Wanita. The last number on the bill was a near-solo by Miss Mary Egan, of Plainfield. She came near singing it but the effort died in infancy.

Second money was awarded the Bound Brook lyricist and third was taken by Wanita.

The gallery patrons were again somewhat personal in their remarks last night and as a result one of them had to be escorted to the box office to offer an opology. A certain amount of good-natured raillery is not objected to by the management but the line is drawn at "freshness" and Manager Counihan has sought to impress this on the minds of the Smalltown comedy people who go the limit. A continuance is sure to lead to drastic measures as the offenders will realize after a fine or two.

INDICTED IN SWAMP MURDER.

Theodore Whitmore, Whose Wife was Found Dead, Must Face a Trial.

Theodore Whitmore, who is confined in the Hudson county jail on the charge of killing his wife, whose body was found in a swamp at Harrison on December 26, was indicted by the Hudson county Grand Jury yesterday.

Patrick Quinn, an employe of the Pennsylvania Railroad in Jersey City, testified to seeing Whitmore in Jersey City the same morning the body was found in the swamp.

Mr. and Mrs. O'Neill, of No. 236 Adams street, Brooklyn, where Whitmore lived, both testified that Whitmore was out the entire night on which the murder is believed to have been committed. Beatrice Schmitten, sister of the slain woman, and Miss Lizzie Handel also testified.

Miss Kingman, of Trenton, is a guest at the home of A. N. Selter, of Rockview avenue.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Dan Cupid had a busy, wet time of it last night, when the younger set of the borough celebrated St. Valentine's Day by parties and church sociables. From the Presbyterian church, the Christian Endeavor Society met at the home of Miss Tillie Miller for a jolly evening of heart games, for which suitable prizes were awarded. The Laides' Aid Society of the Baptist church held a similar affair in the church parlors. Music and games were features of the program.

"Old Wells Dug Out" will be the topic of the pastor's sermon at the morning service in the Baptist church tomorrow. In the evening, there will be a Christian Endeavor meeting, an evangelistic service and the regular evening service, at which the preaching topic will be "Missed His Man, or the Escaped Prisoner." At the conclusion of this service the benedictory service will be held in the lecture room of the church.

With the mild spring rain of today, Iceman George Schenck gave up the idea of cutting any more ice on New Market pond. The ice house is nearly filled, but the ice on the pond is so rotted by the rains that he has decided that it will not pay to cut any more of it.

A temperance service, including a program of songs, readings and recitations, will be held at the Presbyterian church tomorrow night. The meeting will be in charge of A. A. Lake, superintendent of the Sunday-school, and there will be an address by Rev. W. W. Casselberry.

sold on prescription is not to be drunk upon the premises. The druggists are also allowed to sell alcohol in packages of a quart or more for manufacturing purposes on an order to be kept on file.

The sixth section is designed to prevent defense by saloonkeepers. It provides that in all prosecutions under the act it shall not be necessary to prove the kind of liquor sold, or to describe the place where sold, or to give the name of purchaser, or to show that the principal had knowledge of his agent's acts.

The seventh section prescribes the forms for petitions to the court. The eighth section prescribes the form of ballot, which is very simple. The words on the ballot are to give the name of the word or municipality in a question thus: Shall the First ward of Jersey City be anti-saloon territory?—Yes—No. The voters to cross offer either the affirmative or the negative.

The ninth section provides that the number of votes cast at an election need not be set forth in prosecutions.

The tenth section gives the form for the record to be made in the court records by the clerk of the court.

The eleventh section provides for two challengers for proponents and opponents in each election district.

The twelfth section provides that a special election on local option may be held at intervals of two years, counting from the date of the election. This will ensure continuous agitation.

The thirteenth section provides that any city or county may hold a special election, and if a majority shall favor prohibition, then wards which have opposed prohibition shall become anti-saloon territory, because the larger unit includes the smaller. This provision will probably excite the most opposition, because it deprives the local option law of its home-rule feature.

Section fourteen provides that all money received by fines or forfeited bonds under the act shall go into the common fund of the municipality. This will wipe out the law under which this money has been appropriated to sinking funds.

Section fifteen provides that any citizen of a ward or municipality where an anti-saloon election has been held may contest such election by filing a petition and giving security for the costs. This is to enable prohibitionists to keep up the agitation. Any citizen may appear on the other side in any contest of election. Notice of contest is to be published in one newspaper.

Section sixteen provides that the judge or justice in the county shall have final jurisdiction and the hearing shall be governed by the general election law.

The seventeenth section repeals all acts and parts of act inconsistent. This section is useless, becauseit repeals nothing. The final section provides that the act take effect immediately.

Frederick Ritter, Hackensack avenue, in Newark car, face and lip cut by flying glass.

Thomas Russo, Garfield, left wrist cut and sprained; in Lodi car.

John Kaufhold, Lodi, in Lodi car, bruised about body, left eye cut; face and hand cut.

Salvatore Bonai, Garfield, right ear lacerated and head cut; on Lodi car.

John Marino, Garfield, body bruised and cut; on Lodi car.

The accident, it is said, was due to Egan's desire to "steal a switch." It is alleged that the red signal at the Union street crossing showed him that an eastbound car was approaching the high trestle.

Egan was on a Newark and Hackensack car going west. The Lodi car tore a hole in the larger car, plunging through the vestibule and into the smoking compartment. Egan was pinned in the wreck, and it took a score of men half an hour to get him out.

It was foggy at the time of the collision, but it is said that the red signal was plainly visible ten feet away. The cars pass within two feet of it.

Teachers Begin Fight.

Public school teachers who want examinations for promotion done away with will have a chance to air their views before the teachers and salaries committee of the Board of Education, in the assembly chamber of the City Hall, Jersey City, on Thursday night of next week.

"Maine" Destrayed 10 Years Ago.

Ten years ago today the United States warship Maine was destroyed in Havana Harbor with great loss of life, and which was followed by the Spanish-American War.

Proceedings of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union County.

Official.

Regular meeting of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the county of Union, N. J., held on Thursday, Feb. 6, 1908, at 2:30 p. m.

Roll call showed all members present except Freeholder Krouse—1.

The minutes of the previous meeting were on motion of Freeholder Cady approved as per printed copies on the members' desks.

Communications, Etc.

From the New Jersey Conference of Charities and Corrections, by Mary A. Jacobson, secretary, an invitation to attend their seventh annual meeting in High School Auditorium, Palisade avenue, Jersey City, N. J., on Feb. 9th, 10th and 11th. Especial request was made for attendance of wardens of jail, penitentiary, alms house, and officials of institutions for insane. After being read in full, it was ordered on motion of Freeholder Cladek, that the invitation be referred to the committees on jail inspection and on lunacy.

From the Mayor and Council of the borough of Roselle, as follows:

January 31st, 1908.

Mr. Henry Krouse, Dear Sir: At the last meeting of the council the clerk was instructed to write to you in reference to the dangerous crossing of the B. & O. Ry. on St. George avenue, and request you to take the matter up at the next meeting of Freeholders of the county and see if something cannot be done to safeguard the public at this dangerous crossing. The council would like you to let them know if anything is done or can be done in the matter, at your convenience.

Yours truly,

J. T. Ostrander, Borough Clerk.

On motion of Freeholder Cady the foregoing communication was referred to the county road committee, the county attorney, or in the absence of the latter, to the county collector.

Reports of Committees.

By the committee on legal questions on the matter of the Dark Lane Railroad crossing, etc.

Gentlemen: Your committee, to whom was referred the petition of the Essex and Union County Undertakers' Association, beg to say, that they have taken the matter up, and have been advised by the county attorney that this board have but little or no jurisdiction over the matter.

The law provides that in cases of grade crossings like that referred to at Dark Lane, that the municipalities may take the matter up and obtain the necessary relief through the court of chancery, but for the purpose of endeavoring to have the matter adjusted without compelling Linden township to go into litigation, this committee requested the county attorney to communicate with the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, calling their attention to the situation, and in response to the same, the superintendent of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company has replied to the county attorney, which communication is hereto attached, and made a part of this report.

Dated, January 24th, 1908.

Respectfully submitted, Joseph Perry, Robert C. Maurer, committee.

Attached to the foregoing report was the following letter:

Jersey City, N. J., Jan. 22, 1908.

Subject: Regarding protection at Dark Lane crossing.

Mr. W. R. Coddington, 152 Park avenue, Plainfield, N. J.

Dear Sir: Replying to your favor of the 15th, a record of the travel over Dark Lane crossing, Linden township, does not bear out the assertion of the frequency of travel thereover, and further investigation of the accidents that have taken place reveals the most culpable negligence on the part of those who have been injured. However, as it has always been the part of the Railroad to meet the request of its patrons and those in authority adjacent to the Railroad, I will have a watchman placed at this crossing from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m. which will cover the generad purpose, as soon as possible.

Yours truly,

F. P. Abercrombie, Supt.

The Director stated that a flagman was now on duty at said crossing, after which, on motion of Freeholder Cady, the report and letter were received and filed.

By the committee on Jail Inspection.

Elizabeth, N. J., Feb. 5, 1908.

Gentlemen: Your committee on jail inspection would respectfully report that they have inspected the jail, also the books of the warden, and find that 148 prisoners have been confined in the jail during the month of January, 1908, and the number of days' board was 2,054, making an average of 66 8-31 prisoners per day.

E. K. Adams, J. Hervey Doane, F. Logan Fay, Committee.

On motion of Freeholder Jones, received and placed on file.

Freeholder Cladek reported progress on the claim of the Serrell Contracting Company, against the Public Service Corporation of N. J., for money consideration, occasioned by dilatory action of the latter on repairs to Westfield avenue culvert, Rahway.

Freeholder Cady, of committee on new First street bridge, Elizabeth, reported that contract for construction of said bridge had been awarded to the Sandford Construction Company, of Hoboken, N. J., for the sum of $24,949, which report was received.

The following bills properly audited and approved were read and on roll call unanimously ordered paid.

POINTS FOR THE BUYERS

When you want the best hair cut, shampoo or shave patronize E. B. Maynard, of North avenue. His shop is strictly up-to-date.

Your coal bins may be low, if so let V. W. Nash, Jr., of Watchung avenue, fill them up. Best coal, well screened and full weight.

George F. Brown, of Somerset street, may have just the kind of a property you are looking for. He represents the best life and accident insurance companies.

Mending a Corset.

When you least expected it that corset steel broke! Every woman knows the inconvenience it causes. If you have time get an old piece of stell or strong whalebone and run through the casing. It will last until you can put in a ew steel. If a strong whalebone is run in a casing and roughly stitched with coarse thread at the back it will answer the purpose. When steels or ribs puncture the corset cloth, tip them with chamois or old pieces of kid.

With Tiny Shells.

If you have a collection of pretty shells, there is no prettier way to use them than in making a fancy vase. The vase can be any pretty shaped receptacle, but must be covered with potters' clay. Cover this with the shells, making row after row alike and not mottled all over. Use the largest shells for the base, gradually decreasing the size until it is entirely covered. The clay hardens and firmly holds the shells, making a very handsome vase.

A Philadelphia Dream.

"Will, you please drive off the track," asked the motorman. The truck driver promptly reined to one side.

"Thank you ever so much," added the motorman, with a smile.

"You're very welcome," responded the truck driver, "but you must pardon my carelessness. I had no idea your car was so near."—Philadelphia Ledger.

THE DREAMER.

In the busy world of action,
Where the race is to the strong,
Dreamers do not win the prizes
But they somehow get along.
Doers gather in the bakeshop,
Take the cookey and the bun
But in missing things substantial
Dreamers have a lot of fun.

Witrh his feet incased in slippers,
Seated in his easy chair,
And his pipe at hand the dreamer
Can defy the world of care.
Business in the street may bustle
Commerce in the mart may hum,
But that doesn't jar the dreamer
Or effect his kingdom come.

He can daily in the valley
Where the lilies lurk,
He can wander in the forest
When he ought to be at work.
When he should be chasing dollars
He can saunter down the street,
Calm, unmoved and quite complacent
If he gets enough to eat.

Dreaming doesn't bring him money
Nor put treasure in his sack,
But it helps along digestion
And it doesn't hurt his back;
He can analyze the struggle,
He can see unmoved the strife,
And if there is cause for worry
Shift the burden to his wife.

BY KATE AND VIRGIL D. BOYLES

COPYRIGHT BY A. C. McCLURG & CO. 1907

CHAPTER I.

The Island With a Mystery.

He said positively to Battle Ax, his scraggy buckskin cow pony, that they would ride to the summit of this one bluff, and that it should be the last. But he had said the same thing many times since striking the barren hill region flanking both sides of the river. Hump after hump had been surmounted since the sound of the first promise had tickled the ears of the tired broncho, humps as alike as the two humps of a Bactrian camel, the monotonous continuity of which might very well have confused the mind of one less at home on these ranges than George Williston. Even he, riding a blind trail since sun-up, sitting his saddle with a heavy indifference born of heat and fatigue, began to think it might be that they were describing a circle and the sun was playing them strange tricks. Still, he urged his pony to one more effort; just so much farther and they would retrace their steps, giving up for this day at least the locating of a small bunch of cattle, branded a lazy S, missing these three days.

Had not untoward circumstances intervened, he might still have gone blindly on; for, laying aside the gambling fever that was on him, he could ill afford to lose the ten or twelve steers somewhere wandering the wide range or huddled into some safe place, there to abide the time when a daring rustler might conveniently play at witchcraft with the brand or otherwise dispose of them with profit to himself and with credit to his craft. Moreover, what might possibly never have been missed from the vast herds of Langford, his neighbor of the plains country, was of most serious import to Williston.

"Devil take you, Battle Ax, but you're slow," muttered Williston. "I'd give a good deal to sit down this minute to some of my little girl's flapjacks and coffee. But nothing for us, lazy-bones, till midnight—or morning, more likely. Do walk up as if you had some little standing in the world of cow ponies. You haven't, of a surety, but you might make an effort. All things are possible to him who tries, you know, which is a tremendous lie, of course. But perhaps it doesn't apply to poor devils like us who are 'has beens.' Here we are. Ah!"

There were no more hills. Almost directly at his feet was one of those precipitous cut-aways that characterize the border bluffs of the Missouri river. A few more steps, in the dark, and horse and rider would have plunged over a sheer wall of nearly 200 feet. As it was, Williston gave a gasp of involuntary horror which almost simultaneously gave place to one of wonder and astonishment. He had struck the river at a point absolutely new to him. It was the time of low water, and the river, in most of its phases muddy and sullen-looking, gleamed silver and gold with the glitter of the setting sun, making a royal highway to the dwelling-place of Phoebus. A little to the north of this sparkling highroad lay what would have been an island in high water, thickly wooded with willows and cottonwoods. Now a long stretch of sand reached between bluff and island.

Dismounting, with the quick thought that yonder island might hold the secret of his lost cattle, he crept as close to the edge as he dared. The cut was sheer and tawny, entirely devoid of shrubbery by means of which one might hazard a descent. The sand bed began immediately at the foot of the yellow wall. Even though one managed to gain the bottom, one would hardly dare risk the deceitful sands, ever shifting, fair and treacherous. Baffled, he was on the point of remounting to retrace his steps when he dropped his foot from the stirrup amazed. Was the day of miracles not yet passed?

It was the sun, of course. Twelve hours of sun in the eyes could play strange tricks and might even cause a dancing black speck to assume the semblance of a man on horseback, picking his way easily, though mayhap a bit warily, across the waste of sand. He seemed to have sprung from the very bowels of the bluff. Whence else? Many a rod beyond and above the ghostly figure frowned the tawny, wicked cut-away. Path for neither horse nor man appeared so far as eye could reach. It must be the sun. But it was not the sun.

Motionless, intent, a figure cast in bronze as the sun went down, the lean ranchman gazed steadfastly down upon the minature man and horse creeping along so far below. Not until the object of his fixed gaze had been swallowed by the trees and underbrush did his muscles relax. This man had ridden as if unafraid.

"What man has done, man can do," ran swiftly through Williston's brain, and with no idea of abandoning his search until he had probed the mystery, he mounted and rode northward, closely examining the edge of the precipice as he went along for any evidence of a possible descent. Presently he came upon a cross ravine, devoid of shrubbery, too steep for a horse, but presenting possibilities for a man. With unerring instinct he followed the cross-cut westward. Soon a scattering of scrub oaks began to appear, and sumach already streaked with crimson. A little farther and the trees began to show spiral wreaths of woodbine and wild grape. Yet a little farther, and doubtless there would be outlet for horse as well as man.

But Williston was growing impatient. Besides, the thought came to him that he had best not risk his buckskin to the unknown dangers of an untried trail. What if he should go lame? Accordingly he was left behind in a slight depression where he would be pretty well hidden, and Williston scrambled down the steep incline alone. When foothold or handhold was lacking, he simply let himself go and slid, grasping the first root or branch that presented itself in his dare-devil course.

Arrived at the bottom, he found his clothes torn and his hands bleeding; but that was nothing. With grim determination he made his way through the ravine and struck across the sand trail with a sure realization of his danger, but without the least abatement of his resolution. The sand was firm under his feet. The water had receded a sufficient length of time before to make the thought of quicksands an idle fear. No puff of cloudy smoke leaped from a rifle barrel. If, as he more than half suspected, the island was a rendezvous for cattle thieves, a place surely admirably fitted by nature for such unlawful operations, the rustlers were either overconfident of the inaccessibility of their retreat and kept no lookout, or they were insolently indifferent to exposure. The former premise was the more likely. A light breeze, born of the afterglow, came scurrying down the river bed. Here and there, where the sand was finest and driest, it rose in little whirlwinds. No sound broke the stillness of the summer evening.

What was that? Coyotes barking over yonder across the river? That alien sound! A man's laugh, a curse, a heart-breaking bellow of pain. Williston parted ever so slightly the thick foliage of underbrush that separated him from the all to familiar sounds and peered within.

In the midst of a small clearing—man-made, for several stumps were scattered here and there—two men were engaged in unroping and releasing a red steer, similar in all essential respects to a bunch of three or four huddled together a little to one side. They were all choice, well-fed animals, but there were thousands of just such beasts herding on the free ranges. He owned red steers like those, but was there a man in the cattle country who did not? They were impossible of identification without the aid of their brand, and it happened that they were so bunched as to completely baffle Williston in his eager efforts to decipher the stamp that would disclose their ownership. That they were the illegitimate prey of cattle rustlers, he never for one moment doubted. The situation was conclusive. A bed of glowing embers constantly replenished and kept at white heat served to lighten up the weird scene growing dusky under the surrounding cottonwoods.

Williston thought he recognized in one of the men—the one who seemed to be directing the procedure of this little affair, whose wide and dirty hat-rim was so tantalizingly drawn over his eyes—the solitary rider whose unexpected appearance had so startled him a short time before. Both he and his companion were dressed after the rough, nondescript manner of cattle men, both were gay, laughing and talkative, and seemingly as oblivious to possible danger as if engaged in the most innocent and legitimate business.

A little to the left and standing alone was an odd creature of most striking appearance—a large, spotted steer with long, peculiar-looking horns. It was quite impossible to mistake such a possession if it had once been yours. Its right side was turned full toward Williston and in the center of the hip stood out distinctly the cleanly cauterized three perpendicular lines that were the identifying mark of the Three Bars ranch, one of those same big, opulent, self-centered outfits whose astonishingly multiplying sign was becoming such a veritable and prophetic writing on the wall for Williston and his kind.

Who, then, had dared to drive before him an animal so branded? The boldness of the transgression and the insolent indifference to the enormity of attendant consequences held him for the moment breathless. His attention was once more called to the movements of the men. The steers with which they had been working was led away still moaning with surprise and pain, and another brought forward from the reserve bunch. The branded hip, if it was a brand, was turned away from Williston. The bewildered animal was cleverly roped and thrown to the ground. The man who was plainly directing the affair, he of the drooping hat and lazy shoulders, stepped to the fire. Williston held his breath with the intensity of his interest. The man stooped and took an iron from the fire. It was the endgate rod of a wagon and it was red-hot. In the act of straightening himself from his stooping position, the glowing iron stick in his right hand, he flung from his head with an easy swing the flopping hat that interfered with the nicety of sight requisite in the work he was about to do, and faced squarely that quiet, innocent looking spot which held the watching man in its brush; and in the moment in which Williston drew hastily back, the fear of discovery beating a tattoo of cold chills down his spine, recognition of the man came to him in a clarifying burst of comprehension.

But the man evidently saw nothing and suspected nothing. His casual glance was probably only a manifestation of his habitual attitude of being never off his guard. He approached the prostrate steer with indifference to any meaning that might be attached to the soft snapping of twigs caused by Williston's involuntary drawing back into the denser shadows.

"Y' don't suppose now, do you, that any blamed, interferin' officer is a-loafin' round where he oughtn't to be?" said the second man with a laugh.

Williston, much relieved, again peered cautiously through the brush. He was confident a brand was about to be worked over. He must see—what there was to see.

"Easy now, boss," said the second man with an officious warning. He was a big, beefy fellow with a heavy, hardened face. Williston sounded the depths of his memory but failed to place him among his acquaintances in the cow country.

"Gamble on me," returned the leader, with ready good nature, "I'll make it as clean as a boiled shirt. I take it you don't know my reputation, pard. well, you'll learn. You're all right, only a trifle green, that's all."

With a firm, quick hand, he began running the searing iron over the right hip of the animal. When he had finished and the steer, released, staggered to its feet, Williston saw the brand clearly. It was J. R. If it had been worked over another brand, it certainly was a clear job. He could see no indications of any old markings whatsoever.

"Too clean to be worked over a lazy S," thought Williston, "but not over three bars."

"There were six reds," said the chief, surveying the remaining bunch with a critical eye. "One must have wandered off while I was gone. Get out there in the brush and round him up, Alec, while I tackle this long-horned gentleman."

Williston turned noiselessly away from the scene which so suddenly threatened danger. Both men were fully armed and would brook no eavesdropping. Once more he crossed the sand in safety and found his horse where he had left him, up the ravine. He vaulted into the saddle and galloped away into the quiet night.

CHAPTER II.

"On the Trail."

Williston himself came to the door. His thin, scholarly face looked drawn and worn in the mid-day glare. A tiredness in the eyes told graphically of a sleepless night.

"I'm glad to see you, Langford," he said. "It was good of you to come. Leave your horse for Mary. She'll give her water when she's cooled off a bit."

"You sent for me, Williston?" asked the young man, rubbing his face affectionately against the wet neck of his mare.

"I did. It was good of you to come so soon."

"Fortunately your messenger found me at home. As for the rest, Sade, here, hasn't her beat in the cow country, if she is only a cow pony, eh, Sadie?"

At that moment Mary Williston came into the open doorway of the rude claim shanty set down in the very heart of the sun-seared plain which stretched away into heart-choking distances from every possible point of the compass. And sweet she was to look upon, though tanned and glowing from close association with the ardent sun and riotous wind. Her auburn hair, more reddish on the endges from sunburn, was fine and soft and there was much of it. It seemed newly brushed and suspiciously glossy. One sees far on the plains, and two years out of civilization are not enough to make a girl forget the use of a mirror, even if it be but a broken sliver, propped up on a pine-board dressing table. She looked strangely grown-up despite her short, rough skirt and badly scuffed leather riding leggings. Langford stared at her with a startled look of mingled admiration and astonishment. She came forward and put her hand on the mare's bridle. She was not embarrassed in the least. But the color came into the stranger's face. He swept his wide hat from his head quickly.

"No indeed, Miss Williston; I'll water Sade myself."

"Please let me. I'd love to."

"She's used to it, Langford," said Williston in his quiet, gentlemanly voice, the well-bred cadence of which spoke of a training far removed from the harassments and harshnesses of life in this plains country. "You see, she is the only boy I have. She must of necessity be my chore boy as well as my herd boy. In her leisure moments she holds down her kitchen claim; I don't know how she does it, but she does. You had better let her do it, she will hold it against you if you don't."

"But I couldn't have a woman doing my grooming for me. Why, the very idea!"

He sprang into the saddle.

"But you waited for me to do it," said the girl, looking up at him curiously.

"Did I? I didn't mean to. Yes, I did, too. But I beg your pardon. You see—say, look here, are you the 'little girl' who left word for me this morning?"

"Yes. Why not?"

"Well, you see," smiling, but apologetic, "one of the boys said that Williston's little girl had ridden over and said her father wanted to see me as soon as I could come. So, you see, I thought——"

"Dad always calls me that, so most of the people around here do, too. It is very silly."

"I don't think so at all. I only wonder why I have not known about you before," with a frank smile. "It must be because I've been away so much of the time lately. Why didn't you wait for me?" he asked suddenly. "Ten miles is a sort of a lonesome run—for a girl."

"I did wait a while," said Mary, honestly, "but you didn't seem in any hurry. I expect you didn't care to be bored that long way with the silly chatter of a 'little girl.'"

"Well," said Langford, ruefully, "I'm afraid I did feel a little relieved when I found you had not waited. I never will again. I do beg your pardon," he called, laughingly, over his shoulder as he galloped away to the spring.

When he returned there was no one to receive him but Williston. Together they entered the house. It was a small room into which Langford was ushered. It was also very plain. It was more than that, it was shabby. An easy chair or two that has survived the wreckage of the house of Williston had been shipped to this "land of promise," together with a few other articles such as were absolutely indispensable. The table was a big shipping box, though Langford did not notice that, for it was neatly covered with a moth-eaten plum-colored felt cloth. A rug, crocheted out of parti-colored rags, a relic of Mary's conservative and thrifty grandmother, served as a carpet for the living room. A peep through the open door into the next and only other room disclosed glimpses of matting on the floor. There was a holy place even in this castaway house on the prairie. As the young man's careless eyes took in this new significance, the door closed softly. The "little girl" had shut herself in.

The two men sat down at the table. It was hot. They were perspiring freely. The flies, swarming through the screenless doorway, stung disagreeably.

Laconically Williston told his story. He wasted no words in the telling. In the presence of the man whose big success made his own pitiful failures incongruous, his sensitive scholar's nature had shut up like a clam.

Langford's jaw was set. His young face was tense with interest. He had thrown his hat on the floor as he came in, as is the way with men who have lived much without women. He had a strong, bronzed face, with dare-devil eyes, blue they were, too, and he had a certain turn of the head, a mark of distinction which success always gives to her sons. He had big shoulders, clad in a blue flannel shirt open at the throat. In his absorption he had forgotten the "little girl" as completely as if she had, in very truth, been the 10-year-old of his imagination. How plainly he could see all the unholy situation—the handful of desperate men perfectly protected on the the little island. One man sighting from behind a cottonwood could play havoc with a whole sheriff's posse on that open stretch of sand-bar. Nothing but a surprise—and did these insolent men fear surprise? They had laughed at the suggestion of the near presence of an officer of the law. And did they not do well to laugh? Surely it was a joke, a good one, this idea of an officer's being where he was needed in Kemah county.

For Ties and Hatpins.

When making a pretty holder for ties, do not forget to make a padded lid in which to run the hatpins. It makes a pretty combination article to be used on the dresser and keeps neat jeweled pins much cleaner than when exposed to the dust of the room.

TWO MORE TEAMS END THE TOURNEY SCHEDULE

With another series of games played last night, two more teams closed their schedule in the five-man bowling tourney. They are the Brian Borus and the Lafayettes, the former winning two out of the three tallies. The Brian Borus accordingly stand with 13 games won and 11 lost, while the Lafayettes have a record of 9 won and 15 lost.

In last night's games a lot of poor scores were made and there were only two double centuries, Radin and Skelly each getting a credit. Henry Keuhn went below the hundred mark and Tune Hewitt dropped to a 112 in his second try. The Brian Borus lost the first game but took the other two with fairly easy margins. The team rolled with only three men, McMahon and Herbert both being out.

The scores:

BUSINESS MEN TAKE CLOSE GAME FROM LEAL'S FIVE.

The Business Men's five of the Y. M. C. A. won a close game from the Leal's School team at the association gymnasium, last night, by a score of 29-25. The play was fast throughout, and the men showed an inclination to "rough it up," especially in the second half. For the winning five, Physical Director Listman showed up to the best advantage in the scoring, finding the hoop seven times and adding three points from the foul line. Duke and Day, for Leal's, each scored four baskets. The school boys were weak at the foul line, but showed improvement in team work. The lineups and summaries:

Business Men: Listman and Doane, forwards; Dunning and Stone, centre; Javis and Rowley, guards. Leal's School: Duke, Martin and Campbell, forwards; Brown, centre; C. Lawrence and Day, guards. Field goals: Listman, 8; Duke, 4; Day, 4; Dunning, 3; Martin, 2; Stone, Jarvis, Campbell, Brown. Goals from fouls: Listman, 3; Duke.

TREAT FOR PLAYGOERS IN THE NEW COMEDY "BLUFFS."

Wagenhales and Kemper, who are listed among New York's leading theatrical managers, will bring to the New Plainfield theatre Monday night, their newest production, a comedy called "Bluffs." It is from the pen of Leo Ditrichstein, who wrote "Are You a Mason" and "Before and After" and the author will play the leading role. The supporting cast will include Frederick Bond, one of the best known players in the metropolis; Miss Kenyon Bishop, Miss Fola LaFollette, daughter of Senator LaFollette; Miss Alison Skipworth and Miss Lovell Taylor.

The new comedy is said to be Mr. Ditrichstein's best effort and to possess more laughable situations than any other production of the kind. Wagenhals and Kemper have given it an elaborate scenic mounting and all the details necessary to make it their leading attraction. It is destined for a short tour in the Eastern States before going into the Astor theatre, New York.

St. Valentine Games at Grace M. E.

About forty members of Grace M. E. church gathered in the church parlors for a most novel Valentine sociable last night. A feature of the games was the "heart race." For this game, sides were chosen and the contestants strove to blow "arrows," pendant from cords strung across the church to hearts at the end of the line. The women brought lunch boxes, each of which was numbered, and the men present drew for numbers to decide upon their partner for the refreshments.

THIN OUT SHADE TREES

Commissioners Decide That Those Along Many Streets are Set too Close Together.

MENACE TO PUBLIC HEALTH.

Thoroughfares Too Damp—Proximity of Trees Makes Them Ill-Shapen—Many Will Be Removed.

In carrying out its plans for the care and preservation of shade trees in the city are causing the removal of those which are found to be a detriment, the Shade Tree Commission, E. T. Barrows, Miles Roberts and City Engineer A. J. Gavett, find that on many of the streets the trees stand altogether too close to each other, causing the soil to become exhausted, sour and over-grown with moss, as well as making the streets damp and the trees ill-shapen.

When the trees were first planted they were placed at short distances apart to provided needed shade, but now that they have grown larger it is the belief of the commission that they should be given more room by cutting out some of the intervening ones. This will give the others an opportunity to develop symmetrically, and allow needed sunlight to help sweeten the soil and proper circulation of air. It is also the belief that the ground should receive a good dressing of fertilizer.

The commission, feeling that the proper thinning of the trees is one of the greatest needs of the city to preserve its beauty and healthfulness, is now making arrangements to co-operate with property-owners with a view to removing as many overcrowded and defective trees as its facilities will permit.

Application for the removal of such trees may be made to the commission at 151 North avenue.

COLLEGE EDUCATION COST.

Statistics of Princeton University As to the Expenses of the Students.

Princeton, Feb. 15.—Is a college education expensive? One hundred dollars and $1,100 per year represent the extremes in the cost to students at Princeton University, according to statistics compiled by the treasurer. Owing to the fact that at Princeton bills for board, tuition, room rent, etc., are payable through the university, a close estimate can be had of what it actually costs the student per year of all classes.

There are thirteen students whose bill for the college year of thirty-six weeks is $100 or less, but these are exceptional cases, where, by excellence in scholarship or industrious work, the expenses are reduced to a minimum. Forty-eight students pay between $100 and $200. Here, too, are many who are earning part of their expenses, and the above sums represent tuition and rent in many cases. The expenses increase to $1,000 and over, the highest bill being for $1,100.

Out of a total registration for the year of 1,188 students in Princeton University, omitting the nineteen whose families reside in town, the following statistics represent the cost of all classes at the college: Paying less than $100 per year, 13; from $100 to $200, 48; from $200 to $300, 78; from $300 to $400, 73; from $400 to $500, 160; from $500 to $60, 541; from 600 to $800, 253; from $800 to $900, 4; $1,100, 1.

In this table, little of the money goes to the university proper, a large percentage being paid to the managers of the eating clubs and to landlords of town rooms. Matriculation, gymnasium and infirmary fees are included in these cost figures.

MOTHER DEAD, SON DYING.

Explosion of Benzine in Staten Island Home Has Fatal Results.

Mrs. Margaret Roell, thirty-two years of age, was fatally burned and her son, William, fourteen years old, badly injured by the explosion of a four gallon can of benzine at their home, No. 5 Ann street, Port Richmond, last yesterday afternoon. It is believed at St. Vincent's Hospital, at Livingston, when the son was taken, that he will die from his injuries.

Mrs. Roell and her boy lived alone. The mother earned a living by cleaning garments. She was thus employed yesterday afternoon in the kitchen of the two story frame building. Her work was on a lace waist. Between her and the stove, in which there was a fire, stood the benzine. The boy was in the dining room studying his lessons.

Fumes from the benzine must have caught from the stove. The can blew up, scattering the oil around the room and throwing Mrs. Roell into the corner. The boy rushed into the fire charged room in an effort to reach his mother. His clothing caught fire and he ran out to the street. Men caught him and rolled him in a snowbank and then hurried him to the hospital.

It was some little time after the firemen arrived before they could reach the interior of the kitchen. By that time Mrs. Roell was not only dead but her flesh was charred.

The house was damaged to the extent of $600. The building is owned by J. J. Sharrot.

FEAST OF SACRED MUSIC

Trinity's Quartet Assisted by Organist and Violinist Edifies Congregation.

FAMOUS HYMNS EXPLAINED.

Acting Pastor Johnson Makes Brief Remarks On Origin of Each Composition Rendered During Service.

Music lovers thronged Trinity Reformed church to its utmost seating capacity last night on the occasion of a special musical service rendered by the church quartet choir. Mrs. Violet Truell-Johnston, violinist, furnished a violin obligato to the organ accompaniment by Arthur L. Titsworth, the organist, and an elaborate musical program of vocal and instrumental music was excellently rendered.

A feature of the service was the explanatory remarks by Rev. Dr. E. P. Johnson in connection with the singing of the three hymns sung in connection with the service. These explanations, referring briefly to the author of each hymn and giving the circumstances of its composition, were given by the pastor before the singing of the hymn, in which the congregation took part, with the quartet. Explanatory of the first hymn, "My Faith Looks Up to Thee," Dr. Johnson said that it was composed by Rev. Ray Palmer, in 1830, when under a cloud of great discouragement. He wrote the poem in his study, little thinking that it would become famous as a hymn, but tendered it to Lowell Mason, who urged him to write something to go in the new hymn book he was preparing. The hymn is the best of his composition, and was impressively rendered.

The second hymn was "Art Thou Weary?" and the pastor referred briefly to the circumstances of its composition by Joseph of the Studium, a monk in a monastery in lower Jedea, in the sixth century. The last hymn, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," was referred to as the greatest composition of Charles Wesley, the famous hymn writer. It was inspired by the helplessness of a pursued bird, whose flight and refuge suggested the theme to the author. It was composed in 1740, and although Wesley is the author of about 7,000 hymns and songs in all, this stands supreme as his masterpiece.

The musical program gave opportunity for the display of vocal skill and training of each of the members of the quartet. The solos and choruses showed the results of careful training by Mr. Titsworth, the choirmaster, and each member of the choir had excellent opportunity in their solo parts to show an excellent range of voice and tone. Especially commendable was the solo work of Miss Etta Raybert in her song, "Calm as the Night," which also developed the firm, strong tones of Mr. Cutter's voice to perhaps the best advantage. The offertory, "The Great Day of the Lord Is Near," also gave opportunity for excellence on the part of the members in solo work, and Miss Carroll's singing in "Still, Still with Thee," showed her at her best. The regular chants, "The Lord Is In His Holy Temple," "The Lord's Prayer," and the response, "Our Father, Thou in Heaven Above," were excellently rendered with little supporting music. Mr. Titsworth and Mrs. Violet Truell-Johnston gave excellent renditions of the prelude—"Abendlied" and the postlude, Mendelssohn's "War March of the Priests."

The musical program follows:

Prelude, organ and violin, "Abendlied," Robert Schumann; sentence, "The Lord Is In His Holy Temple," quartet, "Still, Still With Thee," Olez Speaks; gloria, D. E. Davis; duet, "Calm as the Night," Carl Gotze; trio, "O Salutaris Hostia," John Wiegan; response, "Lord's Prayer," Charles H. Hoyt; quartet, "The Great Day of the Lord Is Near," Lucien G. Chaffin; contralto solo, "Hold Thou My Hand," with violin obligato, C. S. Briggs; response, "Our Father, Thou in Heaven Above;" sentence, "Keep Us Through the Night;" Postlude, organ and violin, "War March of the Priests," Mendelssohn.

Honored Past Noble Grand.

At the regular meeting last week of Friendship Lodge, No. 4, Daughters of Rebecca, Past Noble Grand Mrs. J. B. Higgins was the recipient of a very handsome collar, the insigna of the important position she holds in the order. This was given by the lodge as a token of appreciation for her excellent services and in connection with the resumption, by her, of this office. After the informal presentation Mrs. W. J. Ford, past noble grand, extended her congratulations and complimented her upon her career and attendance at the meetings during her term of office.

Miss Lou B. Alexander, of Green avenue, Brooklyn, was the guest yesterday of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Williams, of Westervelt avenue.

BRIGHT COLORED STUDENT ADMITS SERIOUS CHARGE

Following a dozen complaints made by young women and girls and a week's vigil on the part of Detective-Sergeant John Flynn, Preston Clay, a seventeen-year-old colored youth residing on Harmony street, was arrested this morning on Watchung avenue. He has been acting in a disorderly manner in the shadow of the Y. M. C. A. building for the past three weeks and the police had made repeated attempts to catch him but without success. He was arraigned before Judge Runyon and after admitting his guilt was remanded until tomorrow morning.

After Clay had been taken back to a cell he sent word to court by Doorman McCue that he wanted to speak to Chief Kiely. When the police head compiled with his request, the prisoner whispered to him that he would give him a dollar if he would let him go free. The proffered bribe failed to have any effect on the chief and a chance to tempt Judge Runyon in the same way was denied him.

Clay is a pupil in the North Plainfield High School and according to the principal is the brightest in his class. He has been working for a local physician before and after school hours and the offense he is charged with was committed before 7 o'clock in the morning as he was on the way to the physician's office.

ACKERMAN BILL ON FINAL READING TONIGHT

The Ackerman Civil Service bill will come up for third reading and final passage in the State Senate at Trenton tonight. There are one or two slight defects in the measure which need remedying, however, and will no doubt be looked after by the Union county Senator. It is also probable that the Robbins utilities bill will come up for action, either tonight or tomorrow. Senator Robbins has no less than twenty amendments to offer to his measure, a hearing on which was held last Monday afternoon.

Senator Leavitt has introduced a bill which has been misnamed a Civil Service measure. It provides for a tenure of office for all persons in the public service, no provision being made for safe-guarding their appointment or promotion. The Mercer county Senator does not believe it wise to add to the expense of the State by creating another commission, and thinks that his bill will meet the demands of the large number of persons in the State who are working for reform in the public service. The principle of this reform is not to hold persons in office, but to do away with the "spoils" system and increase the efficiency of the public service by making merit and fitness the sole qualifications for appointment to and promotion in the service of the State or municipality.

NOTED ARTIST DRAWN ON THE PETIT JURY

George Wharton Edwards of Franklin place, the noted artist and author, has been drawn as one of the Plainfield members of the petit jury to serve for two weeks, beginning next Monday. The names were announced this morning and Sheriff Lawrence showed by his selections that he intends to get the best men possible for jury duty in the Union county court. Those chosen from Plainfield for the next two weeks, commencing February 24, are as follows:

Injuries Prove Fatal.

Francesco Delcompare, who was struck by a drill engine on the New Jersey Central near Washington street, last Tuesday, died in Muhlenberg Hospital, last night. The injuries were not thought to be severe at first but complications developed in one of his legs and amputation was resorted to but without success. Delcompare was fifty years old and lived with a brother on Cottage place. The funeral will be held in St. Mary's church Wednesday morning.

SOCIETY GROWS BETTER

Conditions Today Vastly Improved Over Those of Yore Says Dr. Chambliss.

ENCOURAGING SIGNS OF TIMES.

The Drink Evil and Gambling Not Nearly So Bad As They Were In the Olden Days, Pastor Declares.

"Were the Former Days Better Than These," was the subject of a strong discourse delivered by Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss at the First Baptist church, yesterday morning. He scouted the opinion of some people that the former days were so much better than those of the present and offered strong arguments to prove his contention. In part Dr. Chambliss spoke as follows:

"It is a curious and solemn commentary on the elusiveness of our earthly life that men everywhere are accustomed to speak of their occupations as pursuits. We are so familiar with this use of the term that we never think of the suggestion which it carries with it of the unrest of the human heart—the universal failure to find satisfaction in whatever we get, however good, in the point we reach, however high it may be.

"Paul said, 'not as tho' I had already attained—but I pursue onward.' He was speaking of spiritual things, but everyone of us must confess it of natural and material things—'not yet attained—pressing toward a mark, ever and ever toward a mark.' And it is well for us that it is so. For in worldly things, as in heavenly, we are saved by hope—saved from listlessness and despair. It is hope of something more, something better, that holds us up and moves us on.

"But here is a sort of condition in our nature. While it is true that we continually look forward—lean forward—march forward—press forward hoping for some future brighter than the present, it is also true that we are prone to send our thoughts roving through the years gone by. To indulge in pensive reviews upon former days, as if they were better than these. We are like travellers through a rough country, who feel sharply enough the ruggedness of each portion of the road, and grumble about it while they are passing over it, but to whom the same road seems smooth and carpeted with softest verdure when they look back upon it with enchanting distance lying between.

"We spend our lives under illusions, like the deceitful appearances which cheat the weary pilgrim in Arabian deserts. Of the unapproachable mirage in the future I do not say anything today. The text or the two texts which I have brought together for our present consideration. How we should view the past and what use we should make of it. 'Say not 'What is the cause that the former days were better than these? for thou dost not inquire wisely concerning this.' Now certainly that is not meant to condemn as foolish all comparisons of the present with the past which may be unfavorable to the present. One and another of us may say it and it may be true 'the former years were better than these,' in my experience. And if it is true the word here does not forbid us to see it, to look the fact squarely in the face and to say it with utmost seriousness and anxiety to our own hearts.

"In the writings of the most ancient authors we find lamentations over some golden age of the past, some legendary millenium hidden in the depths of fabulous antiquity—just sathe golden age of men and women now is only the romantic dream of a warm imagination. Is it not one of the most striking evidences of the vanity of human life that we are forever seeing something better far away in the past ever preferring the ideal 'was' to the real 'is?'

"But let us look at some of the facts. I need hardly pause a minute to show how foolish it would be to speak of the 'former days as better than these' as to the physical conditions of life, though there are some who see in all the present day conveniences of living—the introduction of time saving and labor-saving machinery, the cultivation of arts, the improvements in furniture and dress, the multiplicity of books and newspapers, the building of fine dwellings and fine churches, the construction of the sky-scrapers and subways, as well as elevated roads and the incalculable net-work of railways. Who see in all this, not progress, but degeneration, not an evidence that the world is becoming a better place, but rather a worse place to live in, and actually sigh for the simple life of our forefathers.

"Well, before we meet here again we shall celebrate the birthday of

DISCUSSES OPEN SUNDAY

Rev. A. C. McCrea Says He is Not in Sympathy With Puritanical Sabbath.

FAVORS PRESENT OBSERVANCE.

Does Not Fear Any General Desecration of the Day—Some Work Is Necessary, He Believes.

I am not in sympathy with an organization that is attempting to obtain such a strict observance of the Sabbath day which includes the stopping of all railroad and steamboat travel and many other necessary forms of labor," said Rev. A. C. McCrea in his discourse on "The Open Sunday," at the First M. E. church last night. "Some travel is necessary. I can understand that it is often necessary for certain industries to be operated on Sunday with reduced force," said the preacher, "and I do not believe it is the spirit of the Master to forbid everything as some people interpret the Scriptures."

Mr. McCrea took his theme from Mark 2, 27-28: "And He said unto them, the Sabbath was made for man and not man for the Sabbath; therefore the Son of Man is Lord also of the Sabbath."

In referring to "The Open Sunday," the preacher said that he did not believe that in the present day there is any great demand for such a Sabbath and he did not think that there would be any change in the observance of the Sabbath as people now understand it. "A year ago an attempt was made to submit the question to a vote of the Legislature, but it failed," said Mr. McCrea. "The open Sunday has been experimented with in all parts of the world, but the day has been established so long as one for worship and rest that there is very little fear of it being changed. Some fear that it will become a day of labor, but our holidays are multiplying at such a rapid pace that there is not much danger of the people giving up the Sabbath.

"In certain parts of the country there is a tendency toward the abuse of the Sabbath. There are some men who have no conscience as to what means they employ to get money, they have no regard for God or man. They are not satisfied with making money during six days of the week, but they want to keep open on Sunday, in fact some of them would keep open all night if permitted. Their only regard is for the almighty dollar and we need never expect them to have respect for the Sabbath. They are willing to rob God in any way possible.

"We see little labor on the Sabbath. People, as a rule, I believe, properly observe the day. There are three principles, to my mind, which grow out of the Scripture narrative, the first of which is the law of liberty. I once heard of a boy who was compelled to so strictly observe the Sabbath that when he became a man he made the day one of recreation. In his youth it was a burden to him and I can understand how such abuses might make the day irksome. bath day to keep it holy,' yet if it is bath day to keep it hol,' yet if is necessary to gather grain or bake bread on that day to sustain life I do not believe that such labor is a violation of God's law.

"Then there is the law of necessity. Things are sure to arise on the Sabbath which would come under this law and necessity knows no law. If thine ox should fall in a pit on the Sabbath day you would be justified in rescuing the animal.

"The third principle is the law of loyalty. Loyalty to Him who is God of life, the day and mankind. There is no question about the actions of a man who is loyal to God. He will do nothing on the Sabbath day which would be of a compromising nature. Let loyalty run through your life and you will cut off many things, pleasures you have indulged in, places you visit, persons you are found with and you will be very particular about your secular work on Sunday. Necessity may make you do certain things on Sunday, but you will not do these things as a rule. Let it always be a question of loyalty to Christ first and your acts will not only be negative, but positive. You will be found in the house of worship on Sunday and doing works of charity and mercy.

"It is natural that a man should have one day of rest and I do not believe that there is much danger of our losing the sanctity of the Sabbath day if the people observe the rules of which I have spoken, and recognize that the day was made for man and not man for the Sabbath."

Next Sunday night Mr. McCrea will discuss "The Open Church."

JESUS AND CHRISTIANITY

Theme of Rev. Dr. Herring in Last of Series of Sermons on Comparative Religion.

EXPLAINS THE SEVERAL CREEDS

Christian Religion Means Many Things to Many People—Injunction to Preach Christ.

The last discourse on the series of comparative religions was delivered by Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring at the First Presbyterian church, last night, the theme being "Jesus and Christianity." It was listened to by a large congregation and was considered the strongest and best of the discourses given by this divine. Dr. Herring spoke as follows:

"That may seem a strange theme for Christianity and the religion of Jesus are not two thoughts but one. The religion of Jesus is Christianity.

"But what is Christianity? If I should ask Harnack, the greatest Protestant theologian, who has written a popular work with that title, I should discover his conception of Christianity to be—the revelation of the Fatherhood of God, the infinite value of a single human soul, the capability of infinite development for that soul, and the Kingdom of God. But another equally learned scholar of the Catholic faith, Abbe Loisy, would not accept that definition but would rather say Christianity is a church, the primacy over that church handed down from Peter the first Apostle, but even the learned Abbe is not perfectly orthodox in all that he says so that he has been punished by the church, then according to the church he is not a perfect exponent of the faith.

"Can we affirm therefore just what Christianity is with so many interpretations of it?

"Here is what we may assert as to the relation of Christianity to Jesus:

"Christianity is the progressive realization of the ideals of Jesus. Historic Christianity has not always been ideal religion. It has also been the religion of the sword.

"The Crusaders with the sword sought to free the holy sites of Palestine from the power of the Moslem.

"The Huguenots of France, Waldensians of Italy, Christians of Bohemia were massacred in the name of Christianity. Even John Calvin is not our ideal of Christian moderation and gentleness. The Jews throughout history have been the recipients of insult and spoilation.

"So we cannot say Christianity and the religions of the world, but Jesus and the religions of the world—Jesus and Christianity.

"The message of Jesus to men is the gospel of a person. His words bristle with personal affirmation: 'I am the Way, I am the Shepherd, I am the Door, Learn of Me, Come unto Me. No other religious teacher ever employed this personal element in religion. Jesus said, "I am my religion. Which of you convinceth Me of sin?'

"The self assertiveness of Jesus was the basis of the apostles' faith.

"They were devoted not to the truth of Jesus but to Jesus Himself. It was, 'the love of Christ constraineth me.' 'I know whom I have believed.' 'He is my peace.' 'He is my hope.' John, who was one of his intimates, said, 'The word was made flesh and tabernacled among us, and we beheld His glory.'

"Christ then affected the men of His day, not by what He did, so much as by what He personally was.

"I am in a quandary then about Christianity. It means so many different things to different people.

"One church tells me the entrance into Christianity begins when baptism is administered, and baptism is savingly effective as administred by that church. In another church, Christianity seems to be mainly the worship of images and pictures which possess most miraculous powers, and which may be exerted both for good and evil. Christianity is to many the external thing that is done. The heart and the life don't count.

"But we are not told to preach Christianity but to preach Christ. Obliterate the thought of Christianity for a moment and behold the glory of that unique figure in all history. What do you personally think of Christ? Have you ever studied His character—a character so wonderful that hundreds of attempts have been made to declare Christ a myth? These attempts have proved futile, and Christ stands a historic character who says to all men, 'Come unto Me and I will rest you.'

"Perhaps a man of Jewish faith associates the Christianity of the Middle Ages, when his own forefathers suffered persecution, with the spirit of Jesus himself. Let him for a moment put aside historic Christianity and honestly, sincerely, intensely, hopefully study the life of Jesus himself and settle for himself

COMMITTED WITHOUT BAIL ON COMPLAINT OF GIRL

Acting on instructions from Chief Kiely, the Asbury Park police on Saturday took into custody Charles J. Wilbur, a former Plainfielder, against whom a serious charge has been preferred by Violet Marr, known as Violet Prosher, fifteen years old, of Essex street. He was brought to this city by Detective-Sergeant Flynn yesterday and pleaded not guilty when arraigned before Judge Runyon this morning. He was committed without bail to await the action of the Grand Jury.

Wilbur is thirty-four years old and worked for a long time at the local office of the U. S. Express Company. Previous to coming here he lived at Asbury Park and the authorities there say he was arrested on a similar charge nine years ago but escaped conviction through a disagreement of the jury that tried him. Before he could be arraigned a second time material witnesses disappeared and the charge was eventually dropped.

The child making the complaint was fourteen years old at the time the offense alleged was committed and became a mother on Tuesday last. She is the adopted daughter of Mrs. Josephine Prosher.

RAPID FIRE TALK EARNS PRISONER HIS FREEDOM

The possession of a glib tongue earned William Jeroloman, a Newark, a suspension of sentence when he was arraigned in the city court this morning on a charge of drunkenness and disorderly conduct preferred by Patrolman Nolan. Though he admitted that he had imbibed so much red eye he didn't know just what he had done he was positive his actions could not have been such as to warrant his being arrested. The officer informed Judge Runyon that Jaroloman resisted being put out of the North avenue station at 2:30 yesterday morning and when finally ejected consigned the cop and the night baggagemaster to a place where snowballs have a slim chance of existence.

"Hold on," ejaculated Jeroloman, "you're mistaken about that. What I said was, 'Well, well, this is a nice way to treat me.'"

This original construction of what had been said so amused the court that the defendant handed out several more before the magistrate recovered his usual demeanor. Jeroloman launched out into an account of how many officials he knew in Essex and Union counties and the number of his acquaintances in Liberty Corner, one of whom had been Judge Runyon's great-uncle. He ended up by stating that he never knew of a Runyon who wasn't a good man and the salve had the desired effect on His Honor. Jeroloman was bidden to streak it back to Newark and be good for the rest of his natural life. He formerly conducted a pool room on Somerset street.

TO AIR LIGHT CONTRACT

P. P. A. Executive Committee to Be Given a Hearing Before Council Tonight.

A CIRCULAR HAS BEEN ISSUED.

Report Has It That the Proposed Agreement As Framed By Authorities Will Be Turned Down.

Chief among the matters that will occupy the attention of the Common Council tonight will be the public hearing on the proposed lighting contract with the P. S. C. The agreement as framed by the city authorities is strongly opposed by the Plainfield Protective Association's executive committee. The active members of that committee have made two addresses to the members of the association showing why in their opinion the better interests of the city demand that no such contract be signed. It is reported that in all liklihood the agreement as now suggested by the city authorities will be "turned down" tonight in order that some amendments may be made.

The P. P. A. executive committeemen on Saturday sent a supplemental circular to the association members. In part it follows:

"In view of the fact that many people have the impression that there is now no contract for lighting, between the city and the Public Service Corporation, we beg to advise you that a contract made on November 28, 1898, is still in force and will so remain unless superceded by a later contract.

"The price charged was $15.50 for each 25 candle power lamp,same to be kept lighted from sunset to sunrise. The new contract proposes a price of $15.00 per lamp to be kept lighted from one hour after sunset to one hour before sunrise—about 3 1-5 per cent. reduction in price for about 16 2-3 per cent. reduction in amount of light furnished, measured by hours; or, reduced to a money basis, about $450 reduction in price for about $2250 reduction in amount of service—apparently, a loss of about $1,800 a year to the city, instead of a saving which was to be effected by the contract.

"In 1891, and for two or three years thereafter, the contract was renewed annually, the price for all lamps being fixed at $15.50 each, to be lighted from sunset to sunrise.

"The form of "Rate Agreement" of the company, dated January 31, 1898, contains a schedule of charges whereby for a certain specified number of kilowatt hours the rate is 18 cents per K. W. and after that it drops to 7 cents per K. W. This results, in the case of many large consumers, in an average rate below 10 cents and they have been, and are now, entitled to the benefit of this schedule, as the arrangement between the Public Service Corporation and the Protective Association referred to house lighting only and not to mercantile, manufacturing and similar consumers. Therefore, in view of this fact, and of the rate of 10 cents now being charged, the privilege of charging 12 cents should not be granted to the company. It is directly against the terms of the existing contract and against the interest of the citizens of Plainfield.

"In any agreement there is always the possibility of mistake, as appears to have occurred in the renewal agreement of November 1, 1891, under which the rate was fixed at $15.50 per lamp, but from which was omitted the clause in the original contract under which the company bound itself to 'maintain the twenty-five candle light power all through the night" and the failure to include in the contract of 1898 the clauses contained in the contract of 1890, namely—'All wires are to be strung and insulated in a proper manner,' etc., and 'that any violation of the terms of the contract by said party of the second part to said party of the first part on even date herewith, and also all the rights and franchises granted at any time by said party of the first part to said party of the second part.'

"Under the provision of the 1898 contract the city has the right to purchase the electric plant in 1923, or at the expiration of any five years thereafter. It is important that no error should occur which might prejudice this right."

Muskrats "played hob" with the water works of Woodbury, and a timely discovery averted a water famine. Prosecutor Henry S. Scovel, in the Camden Court Saturday, served notice that he was determined to punish saloon-keepers who violate the "bishops' law." THINK HE IS SNEAK THIEF.

Newark Police Believe They Have Man Who Robbed Aristocratic Residences There.

By the capture in Newark last night of Charles Curtis, of New York, the police believe they have the sneak thief who has been robbing flats in the big apartment houses in the aristocratic South End.

Curtis was arrested by Detective Sergeants Ryan and Farrell and Patrolman Gaffney, who had been shadowing him. When searched the proceeds of two alleged robberies that he had committed earlier were found on him, together with two loaded revolvers, a jimmy, a chisel and a lot of skeleton keys. He almost collapsed when arrested. A poker layout and a lot of jewelry were taken from him and was later identified by J. W. Faitoute as having been stolen from his home, at No. 28 Elizabeth avenue. More jewelry was identified by W. Koch, of Clifton avenue. The prisoner had a membership book of the Eagles made out in the name he gave, also a gold badge inscribed "Foreman, Bureau of Highways, Borough of Brooklyn."

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

BASEBALL.

Charles Andrews, left fielder of the Lansford (Pa.) League, has been signed by the Bridgeport (Conn.) League.

Harry Steinfeldt has signed a three years' contract with the Chicago Nationals.

"I paid a good, big round figure for Waddell, and he is worth it," was all Jimmy McAleer would say when asked about the terms made with Connie Mack for the Rube, Saturday, in Philadelphia. McAleer returned to Youngstown from Philadelphia Saturday, where he completed arrangements for Waddell. Jimmy is satisfied. He just smiled when it was told him that Lajoie, Griffith and a few more managers said they would not take Rube as a gift. He fears no trouble in handling the erratic pitcher.

George Dovey, the owner of the Boston Nationals, was stunned the other day when he received a letter from Barney Joy, a native of the Sandwich Islands, who said that he would agree to sign a Hub contract if he got a salary of $4,000, $400 in advance and a round trip ticket from Honolulu to Boston. Last season Joy pitched such good ball in California that the Boston magnate secured his release.

Charley Keith, the left-handed pitcher of Little Rock, who has been drafted by the St. Louis Americans, is looked upon as the luckiest of all players in the business. He is a student at Oxford University, England, having won one of the Rhodes scholarships in Arkansas, his native State. He is allowed $3,000 a year for pursuing his studies and $100 a month during vacation. The St. Louis club will pay his transportation over, and, in addition to his $100 a month spending money, will pay him $450 a month for playing ball.

Walter W. Burnham, of Newark, enters a denial to the report sent out from New Haven, Conn., Saturday, which stated that he had purchased the Connecticut League franchise in that city. The only intimation he had that the club was for sale, Mr. Burnham said, was a letter he received from C. J. Danaher, the owner, last Tuesday, in which the latter said: "You are now out of baseball, why not buy the New Haven club?" "That is all I know about it," said Burnham, "and I do not imagine for a minute that I will purchase the club."

The Newark club has secured by purchase from the Detroit American League club a young twirler phenom named Stoup. Stoup pitched last season for the Newark, O., team in the P. O. M. League, where he was discovered by Hughey Jennings. Jennings was obliged to let the youngster go owing to the large surplus of pitchers on the list of the Detroit club.

GOLF.

It is not at all probable that the Plainfield Country Club will get the big golf tournament this season, and in fact, the club is not making efforts in that direction. The excise question is an important factor in awarding a tournament of this kind and there are hundreds of players and friends who attend such events who prefer to go where they can obtain liquor. In view of the fact that a majority of the Plainfield Country Club members are opposed to having liquor at the clubhouse there is little room for argument. Thus far Hackensack and the Yountakah Country Club have bid for the tournament and it is quite likely to go to one of these clubs.

"Golfers are exceedingly wrathy at the closing of the Van Cortlandt and Forest Park public links this winter. No one objects to the courses being closed in the spring when the frost is coming out of the ground, but to banish the players from the public links in this fine golfing weather is deemed an outrage. Golfers who can afford a private club are having the best of sport now and but for the unusual zeal of the park commissioners the players of the public links could obtain as much enjoyment. A petition signed by 140 players asking that the Forest Park course be kept open as it was last winter has not even been answered. Some of the Forest Park players go to the course and practise driving, although they do so under threats of arrest made by the park workmen.

"See here, you mustn't play golf on this course," cried the custodian to one player. "I'm not playing golf," said the golfer. "You couldn't play golf without the putting holes any more than you could play pool without a billiard table. To make practice drives is fair wherever there is turf and that's all I'm doing."

Thus far no arrests have been made, but the custodians look on with jealous eyes and may at any moment call the police. The hardship of the matter is that the two links that have cost the taxpayers much money are now lying idle and the hundreds of business men who seek recreation on them are debarred from the two public courses. Winter golf improves instead of hurting the turf of a course and the golfers can see nothing in the early closing but a whim of those in authority.

There will not be over ten radical changes in the rules to be recommended by the American to the St. Andrews committee, according to one of the members. The St. Andrews committee has given out that the revised rules may not be ready in May, on account of waiting for suggestions from America. The American suggestions are to be sent at once, without waiting for an advance proof of the rules, which will be news to St. Andrews, and enable the Scots to rapidly complete their labor.

A brand new comedy will be presented at the New Plainfield theatre tonight when Leo Ditrichstein will be seen in "Bluffs." The names of the supporting company are notable. Fred Bond heads the list and there are also in the cast Miss Kenyon Bishop, Miss Flora La Follette, Miss Alison Skipworth, Miss Florence Huntington, Alfred Kappeler and Eugene Redding. Messrs. Wagenhals and Kemper look upon "Bluffs" as the choicest comedy product that has ever come into their possession, exceeding in laughing possibilities its famous predecessors, "Are You a Mason?" and "Before and After." It is due for a run in New York at the Astor theatre, beginning early in March.

"The Shadow Behind the Throne," a high class melodrama which has been pronounced everywhere that it has been seen by dramatic critics and theatre-going public alike, to be the very best modern melodrama of many years, to be more magnificently staged as to scenery, costuming and strength of company, than any other melodrama ever presented, will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre next Wednesday afternoon and night. The locale of the play, by Alicia Ramsay and Rudolph De Cordova, is China, and the time is the uprising of the fanatical Boxers. This Oriental setting gives the authors and the costumer and the scenic artists opportunity, none of which have been neglected. Rudolph De Cordova, one of the authors, was a war correspondent for one of the great London dailies at the time of the Boxer troubles, and is an acknowledged authority on Chinese life, intrigue and villainy.

"Too Proud to Beg," Lincoln J. Carter' stirring and interesting drama of police life in a large city, will be at the New Plainfield theatre next Friday night. Police stories are always popular and appeal to the people because the police department is established for the prosecution of criminals who are an enemy to public safety and the welfare of the community; hence, anything pertaining to the public welfare is of interest to the people.

In his melodrama, "A Race For Life," which plays an engagement at the New Plainfield theatre next Saturday afternoon and night, Theodore Kremer is claimed to be, by those most familiar with his work, a popular playwright, and in plot, construction, individuality of characterization, and sustained interest and sensation, his new play, "A Race For Life," is much the cleverest thing he has yet turned out. Its scenes are laid in the wild regions bordering on the Sierra Nevada Mountains, and the story told in the four heart-touching and hair-raising acts, range from Austin Seymour's cattle ranch to the race track at Los Angeles; serving to both melodramatically and mirthfully introduce the typical good and bad, and fierce and funny characters bred and developed where men are largely a law unto themselves.

Fall Down Stairs Is Fatal.

Mrs. Caroline Cauley, aged eighty-four years, a widow, fell down stairs at her home, No. 691 avenue E, Bayonne, yesterday and died a few hours later of shock.

MUST PAY FOR RIGHT TO SERVE WINE AT DINNERS.

There were some exclamations of surprise among the members of men's clubs and others who frequently attend public functions in East Orange over the announcement Saturday that hereafter caterers take out a license from the Excise Board, the same as saloon men of the city. There are many dining halls used only on occasions of public functions where liquors have in the past been served with dinners and the excise authorities have provided for these.

An organization giving a dinner may purchase liquor in bulk and have it delivered as the participants wish. In declaring the intention to require strict enforcement of the new rule, the Board announces that one caterer, without paying a license, had sold more liquor in the course of a year than any of the saloon proprietors.

Clubs in the city that can claim five years' existence or more may get licenses for $300 annually, but newcomers must pay $500. This section will provide for the important organizations getting a lower rate.

The caterer seeking a license must pay $500 for selling liquor outside their establishments, and an additional $500 for sales within the stores section. The first is for wholesalers and the second for retail privileges.

C. A. RAWLINS ARRESTED.

Wanted in New Brunswick on Bigamy Charge, He Is Picked Up by New York Police.

New York, Feb. 17.—Colwell A. Rawlins, who gave his address as Springfield, Mass., was held without bail Saturday by Magistrate Corrigan in the Tombs Court to await extradition by the authorities of Middlesex county, N. J., where Rawlins is wanted on a bigamy charge. According to the testimony, Rawlins, in December, 1902, at Los Angeles, Cal., married Frances A. Hahnemann. Two years later, it is charged, he left her and came East, and on June 4, 1906, in New Brunswick, N. J., he married Miss Esther N. Raymond. Rawlins later disappeared and was not found until Tuesday night, when New York policemen picked him up.

New Brunswick, Feb. 17.—Colwell A. Rawlins, who was arrested in New York on the charge of bigamy, married Miss Raymond, of Newark, in this city on June 4, 1905. The couple went to Los Angeles, Cal., to live. Rawlins tried there, it is said, to have the first marriage set aside on the ground that his wife was under age at the time, but he failed. He will be brought here for trial.

4 MILE AUTO COURSE; STADIUM SEATS 50,000

Preliminary plans have been prepared by Clyde S. Adams, a Philadelphia architect, at the direction of the American Automobile Association, for an automobile stadium, including the erection of a mammoth outo course, hotel, garage, exhibition buildings, horse track, clubhouse and repair shops. The plan will involve an expenditure of $2,000,000, and it is said an option has already been obtained on a tract of land at Pleasantville, N. J., near the Atlantic City Railroad, measuring 3½x2 miles, which will be used for the race course.

The automobile course will be four miles in circumference and 200 feet wide, being constructed entirely of cement. The corners will be banked to allow for a speed by racing cars of 120 miles an hour. At the eastern end of the course and inside the oval will be a horse track, one mile in circumference, erected along the lines, of the best tracks in the country. At the other end of the track will be a clubhouse of the most modern design, three stories high, while surrounding the course will be a concrete grandstand seating 50,000. The land will be excavated to provide for the two tracks, and on the plateau surrounding them provision will be made for the accommodation of 200,000.

The plans also provide for the erection of a large garage and repair shops which will accommodate 200 cars. At some little distance from the race course a hotel will be erected which will be of modern fireproof construction, six stories high, with a roof garden, and with 1,000 rooms, single and en suite, with every modern hotel convenience. In connection with the hotel there will be a large garage and stable for the public which will accommodate a few hundred cars. There will also be a number of exhibition buildings for fair and exposition purposes.

JUST EIGHT HUNDRED POSTOFFICES IN STATE

According to the United States Official Postal Guide, for January, which is the year book, there are 61,566 postoffices in the United States. Of this number just 800 are located in New Jersey. The number of Presidential offices in the Mosquito State are 153, divided as follows: First class, 20; second class, 47, and third class, 86. The balance, 647, are fourth-class offices, the postmasters being named by the Congressman from that district.

Strange as it may seem, New York, the Empire State of the Union, is fourth on the list of total postoffices, but second on the list of Presidential offices. Pennsylvania ranks first, with 3,912 postoffices, 479 of which are Presidential. Kentucky is second with 3,004 offices, 104 of which are Presidential. Virginia comes third with a total of 2,873 offices, 107 of which are Presidential. New York follows with 2,796 offices, 473 of which are Presidential.

The State with the least number of offices is Nevada, with 244 stations, 22 of which are Presidential. There is but one postoffice in the District of Columbia, but there are 82 substations where money orders may be obtained or cashed.

Plainfield Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., will meet tonight and receive several propositions.

Washington. We need not go so far back as to the time he was born, but look back even to the time when he died or somewhat later still, when the grandfathers of some of us were living and mark the conditions. The streets of the largest cities were unpaved, a writer of the day mentions looking out of his office window and seeing horses mired in the streets of Philadelphia. The streets of London even were filled with mud and filth and the gentleman was carried about in his sedan chair. The use of street lamps were almost unknown, leather was so dear that boys and girls went barefotted most of the year. If the boy had a headache he was bled purposely, and if that intensified the headache he was given calomel.

"The schools even of New England were open two months in the winter for boys and two months in the summer for girls. Sanitation was unknown. Every fifth person on the street was horribly disfigured with smallpox and in the open country the death rate was higher than in the worst tenemtn districts of New York today.

"Many are pessimistic regarding the times in which they live by reason of the rum traffic and the gambling and speculative tendencies of our age. Dreadful enough are all these vices. Unless they are checked the future is dark, indeed. The tremendous sweep of the anti-saloon reform over the country is one of the brightest signs of the times. As to the terrible evils of gambling, whether on the race track or in Wall street, we ought to be thankful that the true men of most far-reaching influence in the United States today have made their voices heard in no uncertain tones. But gigantic as evil is, yet the contrast of the present with earlier days encourages hope. Some year ago, after a long struggle the Louisiana State Lottery was finally expelled from our land and in this victory the whole country rejoices. But how striking the change in sentiment that had come over the people. In the days of our grandfathers the lottery was the favorite form of benevolence. Schools, colleges and churches were built thereby. The library of Harvard College was built by the sale of lottery tickets, and good orthodox Princeton adopted the same method of advancing its interests. Even the English Government went into the lottery business. At one time the authorities of London were selling lottery tickets for twenty different objects.

"And drunkenness was well nigh universal. Births, marriages, funerals, the dedication of public buildings and of churches, all were consecrated with liquor. Almost every business transaction was concluded with a drink. For the hostess not to offer wine to her lady callers was an offense against good breeding. As late as the time which some of us remember a deacon in a prominent church in Boston was at the same time a distiller of whiskey and an agent for the Bible Society. And that was not exceptional. The fortune that founded our most celebrated college for women was made in brewing beer and the founder was honored in the church. The fortune that founded our richest university was made by means which only in very recent years have been generally condemned.

"If the scandals of today are great, the scandals of an earlier day in American and English society were infamous. Many vices of that day are now unknown and not one single vice or crime can be mentioned that has not been so decreed as to encourage hope of its determination."

In conclusion, Dr. Chambliss briefly reviewed the progress of the church, the Sunday-school, charity and missionary benevolence to show how much better the present day is than the days of former years.

the claims of Jesus upon his own life.

Will Consider Milk Question.

The Union County Boar of Agriculture has arranged for a meeting to be held at Elizabeth on Thursday, February 20, to consider the milk question and all persons interested in the production of milk, its sale and certain restrictions placed on individuals are cordially invited to attend. The meeting will be held in Room 12 at the Court House, Elizabeth. The board recently passed resolutions favoring the adoption of the parcel post and savings banks, a copy of which has been sent to Postmaster-General Meyer, State Senators and Congressmen from this State.

Plainly Apparent.

"Pardon me," began the new acquaintance, "but are you the Mr. Cadley Nuritch who wrote that magazine article last month for us?"

"Yes," interrupted Nuritch, "but, of course, you'll understand that I don't make a business of that sort of thing."

"Of course, I know that. I read the article."—Philadelphia Press.

TO HAVE 'NEW IDEA' WING OF DEMOCRATIC PARTY

Many Democrats in Newark are interested in a plan to form a "New Idea" section in the Democratic party in Newark and Essex county, to overthrow the control of City Counsel James R. Nugent, which is characterized as "bossism," and to accomplish other reforms in the Democratic ranks, such as have been successfully accomplished by the "New Idea" faction of the Republican party.

Several conferences have recently been held and a meeting is soon to be held in Newark to discuss the formation of an organization.

Men who have attended the recent conferences, which will result in a public meeting within a week or ten days to make the active fight against boss rule, say that they are pledged to secrecy for the present as to exactly what lines the "insurgents" are proceeding on. One of the interesting features is that several Aldermen have allied themselves with the movement and one of them is John F. Sinnott, president of last year's Common Council, who has been fighting the Nugent influence in the Aldermanic body.

It is said that prior to the proposed general meeting the Democratic "New Idea" managers will have well under way the formation of ward organizations in Newark and that similar organizations from around the county will be welcomed at the big conference.

There was to have been a monthly meeting of the Essex County Democratic Committee last Monday night, but it was postponed indefinitely on the ground that there was no business to be transacted. It is now said that the real reason was fear of a disturbance by the "New Idea" element.

There is a plan on foot to petition Tyler Parmley, county chairman, for a special meeting, one purpose of which will be the forcing by the "New Idea" men of the question of the iligibility of Richard Franz, of the Eighth ward, to be treasurer of the county committee, because he is not a member of that body.

Guests of President Roosevelt.

Governor J. Franklin Fort, accompanied by State Senator Everett Colby, will be the guest of President Roosevelt in Washington, this week. The Governor goes to the Capitol to consult with the President, Secretary of War Taft and Attorney-General Bonaparte about corporation questions and political conditions.

Mrs. C. G. Emil Larsen, of Fairview avenue, has gone to Philadelphia to visit friends.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

THE HOTBED OF LOCAL OPTION.

It is not surprising that Union county has suddenly become the hotbed of local option. Many things have conspired, in a kind of cumulative way, to bring about a strong sentiment favoring a change in that county. In the first place, the liquor interests have been exceedingly aggressive, particularly in the city of Elizabeth, which is the county seat. There are about 350 saloons, inns and taverns, hotels and wholesale places in the county, of which 240 are in Elizabeth, twenty-eight in Rahway and twelve in Plainfield.

The charge of the grand jury, in June last, was to the effect that Elizabeth was governed by the liquor interests; that the president of the council was the president of a brewery, and that several members of council were connected with brewery interests; that the police force and members of the fire department were appointed for political reasons, and that the relations between the brewers and the Excise Board were noticeably close. Scores of saloonkeepers in the county have been indicted for violations of the law, but the petit jurors allowed to sit on these cases have so invariably acquitted the accused that the prosecutor has abandoned untried cases, because hopeless of getting a conviction.

This sort of business has been going on for years in Union county, and particularly in Elizabeth. The Sunday violations there are outrageous in numbers and boldness. There is no efficient effort made to suppress them, nothing done to bring the offenders to justice, for the reason that, as the grand jury declared, the city is wholly in the hands of the liquor interests. The screen provision of the "bishops' law" is observed by those who wish to observe it.

A reaction of public sentiment has at last set in. Assemblyman Moxon, who is a resident of the liquor governed city, is chairman of the Municipal Corportions Committee, to whom the Crosby local option bill has been referred. He is being overwhelmed by the flood of letters, petitions and memorials on this topic, some urging him to support local option, others begging him to keep the bill in committee and never report it. This latter, however, he can't do, because the House has adopted a rule whereby fifteen members can call a bill out of committee whether the chairman wants it out or not.

All the Union County Assemblymen are in more or less distress over the new situation. Mr. Moxon doesn't want to express any opinion, but is willing that the bill shall have a hearing. Mr. Pierce thinks the bill seems to have many adherents now, but just wait till the other side is heard. Mr. Kierstein, of Rahway, whose Excise Board Moxon tried so hard to save by a trick, hasn't any opinion to express, but is willing to be guided by the people.

Why Mr. Moxon should hesitate to give his views is inexplicable. He believes in majority rule. He fought the anti-smothering amendment because it imperiled majority rule and he insisted upon local option for Rahway, on the question of abolishing or retaining the present Excise Board. A man so strongly in favor of home rule and majority rule as Mr. Moxon cannot consistently shy at local option. Union county has suddenly become the storm centre of this policy and Mr. Moxon is in the midst of it without lightning rod or umbrella.—Newark News.

ADVERTISE IN THE DAILY PRESS

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The resignation of Rev. T. Moore-Smith as pastor of the Baptist church is still in the committee's hands, no action being taken at the morning church service yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. William Dean, of Summit, N. J., spent Sunday with Mrs. Dean's mother, Mrs. Charles Mooney, of Valley Road.

The members of the Epworth League held a well attended meeting last night in the class rooms of the church.

Miss Ruth Hetfield led the weekly meeting of the B. Y. P. U. held last night in the parlors of the church.

The ten days' fair of Excelsior H. & L. Co. and Public Library opens Friday night in Excelsior Hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Walpole were the guests yesterday of friends in Newark.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas M. Paff, Sr., entertained friends from out of town yesterday.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

A leap-year dance will be given in Apgar's Hall on Friday night, February 28. The committee of arrangements includes Miss Ethel Clum, Miss Eleanor Dodwell, Miss Irene Dunham, Miss Alice Fenner, Miss Susan L. Lowrie and Miss Eva Kelley. About two hundred invitations have been issued.

The evangelistic services were continued at the First Baptist church, last night. The theme for the discourse delivered by Rev. Mr. Gardner was "Missed His Man or the Prisoner Escaped." There was special music by the choir.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Seventh-Day Baptist church held an enjoyable St. Valentine social Saturday night. There was also a program of vocal and instrumental music.

The Piscataway Board of Education will meet this afternoon at the New Market school.

The Cheerful Workers met with Mrs. M. Foster Sofield, Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. Ogden Meeker will entertain the G. E. Club at her home tonight.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

C. H. Collier, of Newark, addressed the meeting at the evening service in the Baptist church yesterday on behalf of the Anti-Saloon League. His remarks were listened to with great interest and it was felt by all that his presentation of the case was most admirably and moderately put.

The Christian Endeavor meeting at the Baptist church on Sunday evening was one of the best attended and most interesting sessions that the society has held in a long time. M. J. Manning was the leader.

The Valentine social given last week by the Christian Endeavor Society was not largely attended as the evening was wet but it was very much enjoyed by those who were there.

Miss L. M. Corson, the popular teacher of the primary and first grade of the public school, gave a hand-painted valentine to each of her little pupils on Friday last.

Rev. C. W. F. Attlee has collected statistics in preparation for the mass meeting which will be held tomorrow to discuss the suggested borough bill.

Mrs. Mary Teeple, who left here several months ago to reside in Pennsylvania, has returned for a brief visit to Mrs. Melvin Teeple.

Mrs. J. McDowell and her daughters passed a pleasant afternoon, Friday, with Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Thorne.

Miss Emma Boland, of Massachusetts, is making a lengthened stay with Mrs. Harris in the village.

C. H. Smith, of Bloomsbury, N. J., is spending a few days with John Linnaberry.

Fowler Bill Has No Friends.

Chairman Fowler, of the House Banking and Currency Committee, is finding his bill without friends and it was turned down last week without discussion. Drastic changes in the Aldrich financial bill are foreshadowed both in the Senate and House by amendments that have already made their appearance. There is a bare chance that when the Senate was whipped the new currency plan into shape for the House it will have an easier road to travel than was first considered probable.

Publishers Firm After a Swindle.

Chief of Police Tenney, of Elizabeth, Saturday received a telegram from the Curtis Publishing Company of Philadelphia that they were informed a swindler was operating under their name in Elizabeth, and offering a reward of $25 for his capture.

Out of It.

"Don't you feel well?" asked a friend.

"Not very," answered Mr. Cumrox.

"Why don't you go home?"

"I can't. Mother and the girls are giving a tea and I'm not invited."—Washington Star.

SOMETHING OF A LAWYER.

"Well, yes," replied the landlord of the tavern at Polkville, Ark., "when an attorney, appearing for a bloated railroad corporation in the face of a jury composed exclusively of middle-aged farmers, can prove, in a case wherein a widow-lady—and a pretty blamed middlin' good-looking widow-lady, at that—sues for the value of a calf that was run over and killed by the train, right dab in the middle of the town at high noon, with half the population beholding the slaughter; that the calf did not stop, look and listen, as warned by the sign at the crossing; that the engine did not hit the animal at all, except nominally; that the calf really died, if at all, of some obscure Latin calf-disease or other; that the company, by its faithful servant, the engineer, did an act of pure philanthropy in killing the calf, as, instead of being a valuable possession in the hands of the widow, as alleged, it was really an incubus, in that it was engaged in eating its fair mistress out of house and home; and, lastly, that the fair plaintiff, herself, despite her tears, had once been a lady book agent—when he can achieve all that and win the case, as the colonel shorely did, no longer than a week before last, I sh'u'd presume to say that he is pretty considerable of a lawyer!"—Puck.

Not Properly Descriptive.

"At what hour do you wish the marriage solemnized?" asked the clergyman.

"Eight o'clock to-morrow evening," said the caller, twirling his hat in an embarrassed way; "but there ain't no need of being so awfully solemn about it, you know. I'm the clown and she's the lady bareback rider."—Chicago Tribune.

Mr. Flea Wasn't There.

Yeast—They say the flea is covered with armored plates, very hard and overlapping each other. Each bends in conformity with the movements of the body.

Crimsonbeak—Well, I've often struck at a flea, but I assure you that what my hand came in contact with came very far from resembling armored plate.—Yonkers Statesman.

Not Forging Ahead.

"What are you kicking about? You have never even been arrested," said the chronic convict.

"It is true I have never been arrested," returned the expert forger, "but every time I have taken the trouble to write another man's name on a check that check has come back marked, 'Not sufficient funds.'"—Puck.

He Thought He Was.

Evangelist—My friend, are you living right?

Hardened Sinner—Must be, sir! Haven't needed a doctor for 20 years.

WHAT FATHER THOUGHT.

Mrs. Proud—What did you think of Myrtle's graduation essay?"

Mr. Proud—Excellent. No one would think that Myrtle chewed gum and slapped her little brother, would they, dear?—Baltimore American.

Cupid's Patent.

"Dear me!" exclaimed the young lady in the big furniture store. "What a queer-looking sofa! Why, it has such short legs!"

"Yes, miss," replied the polite salesman, "that is a courtship sofa. Little brothers can't squeeze under it."—Chicago Daily News.

Feminine Consistency.

He—Why don't you women who are always talking about early Christmas shopping, and sparing the poor clerks, practice what you preach, and do your own shopping early?

She—What! And miss all the best bargains?—Baltimore American.

Capable Poetry.

She—I am proud to meet him. They say his poetry will pass on to future generations.

Rival Poet—Well, his lines ought to get somewhere. The most of them have eight feet.—Judge.

Made All the Difference.

"What shall I play?" asked the organist of an absent-minded clergyman.

"What sort of a hand have you got?" was the unexpected reply.—Royal Magazine.

Singularly Appropriate.

She—Dear, where shall we make an appointment to meet in the conservatory?

He—I should suggest under the date tree.—Baltimore American.

Done on Purpose.

Cublick—Old Soak is an habitual drunkard, isn't he?

Kaustic.—Well, I would call it systematic rather than habitual.

ALL OVER THE WORLD.

Sixteen of the United States now have beet sugar factories—64 in all.

There are fourteen former residents of Missouri in the House of Oklahoma.

The Cherokees have more day schools and more Indian teachers than all the other tribes combined.

Kansas has the largest head of Galoway cattle in the world, in Greenwood county, in which there are 400 head of registered animals.

Harvard university has received a gift of about 2,000 acres of valuable timberland as a special adjunct to the division of forestry by James W. Brooks.

The United States has more newspapers than any other country. Every week day there are 19,000,000 copies issued and on Sunday the number is 11,500,000 copies.

It is predicted by a very modern architect that the house of one large room, a small electric kitchen attached and an enormous enclosed porch, with facilities for outdoor sleeping has come to stay.

A basket of roses, made completely of butter, basket and all, is being exhibited through England by the government of Victoria, one of the States in Australia to remind the mother country of her great agricultural wealth.

The blanket trade of China is valued at 1,192,213 haikwan taels, in which the United States has practically no share, and this notwithstanding the fact that much of the wool and cotton with which these goods are manufactured originates in the United States.

There is a tradition in Germany that it was customary in the Middle Ages to put an elderberry plant over buried treasure. A farmer at Oelsdorf while plowing close to such a bush unearthed a vessel containing 2,300 silver coins of the eleventh century.

Guayakil, with 70,000 inhabitants, has been described as a city without windowpanes. Scarcely a business house or a residence has window glass, shutters with stairs being used and adjusted so as to allow the free circulation of the air and at the same time keep out the dust and rain.

The production of metallic cadmium, which has hitherto been confined to Belgium and Silesia, has been undertaken by a chemical company of Cleveland, O. The ore of the Joplin district is stated to be richer in cadmium than the ore of Silesia, but under the conditions of zinc smelting in the United States it has not been considered worth while to attempt to save cadmium as a by-product.

ABOUT PEOPLE.

Stephenson, of Wisconsin, is the richest United States Senator; Brown of Nebraska, the poorest; Bankhead and Johnston, of Alabama, the only Civil War Veterans; Guggenheim is the seventh Hebrew to attain the Senate; Owen, of Oklahoma, and Curtis, of Kansas, are the Indians of the Senate; Curtis and Smith, of Michigan, began as newsboys; Taylor, of Tennessee, is considered the humorist, and Paynter, of Kentucky, is considered the handsomest of the members in that body.

Representative Joseph Warren Keifer, of Ohio, and "Uncle Joe" Cannon are the "old boys" of the House, and they are alike in that their age does not show itself excepting in their looks. Both are as spry as youngsters. Seventy-two years ago Representative Keifer was born on a farm in Clark county, O., and his has been an eventful life.

Col. Edward B. Fox, who has retired as executive clerk to the Governor of New Jersey after a continuous service of over 42 years, has been accorded by the Legislature the unusual privilege of taking with him into private life the well-worn desk at which he has labored so long and so faithfully.

The longest winter trip in Alaska ever undertaken by an army officer has been started by Capt. Hanson B. Black, of the Signal Corps, on an inspection tour of the telegraph lines. He started from Valdez January 12 with one sergeant, traveling by dog team, going first to Eagle City, thence to Circle City, Fairbanks and Valdez, a distance altogether of 1,030 miles. He expects to be gone until April.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

When a cut will not heal, saturate a piece of absorbent cotton with coal oil and bind on.

Apply arnica to a bruise if the skin is unbroken. If broken wash the bruise and apply vaseline.

The benefits of sleep are shown inversely by the haggard lines that come into even a young woman's face when she has been up night after night until long after midnight.

Women who walk with no heels make a mistake. The heel preserves the arch of the foot and prevents it from becoming flat. It keeps the ankle round and is a help to the spine.

No application is better for lusterless hair than salt. Rub well into the roots of the hair at night, then tie up in a large handkerchief or wear a night cap. Brush out the salt in the morning. Several applications will show a marked improvement in the appearance of the hair.

There is nothing that is better for a muddy skin than a diet of fruit and greens. Fortunately both are so plentiful in this country that they can be had all the year round, but even if the cost were twice as much as it is it would be cheaper than cosmetics and professional skin treatments.

Aluminum Money.

Nearly 32,000,000 coins made of aluminum have just been struck from the Royal Mint for circulation in Uganda and the Nigerian protectorates. Each coin bears the value either of one cent or two mills, and is perforated in the centre, like Chinese coins, in order to permit the natives to string them together. The advantage of aluminum as a coin is due to its light weight and the fact that it is the best non-germbearing metal known.

Bronze coins, as well as some silver, are circulated on the west coast of Africa, but in the interior the natives use little shells, known as cowries, as fractional currency. It is primarily to replace the cowries that the new coins have been struck. Ellison Macartney, the deputy master of the mint, is very enthusiastic over the use of aluminum for coins. He believes that it will shortly take the place of bronze, copper and nickel throughout the civilized world. In speaking of the new coins he explained how their low value rendered it necessary to make them of some extremely light metal, hence the adoption of aluminum. "The smaller the amount the greater the cost of coinage," he remarked. "Half pence are much more costly to coin than pennies, and yield far less profit. So far as I know, these are the only aluminum coins in the world."

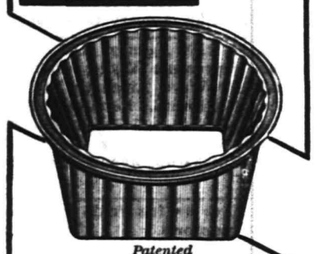
The One and Only Square Pot



Patented

Makes

easily the most powerful heaters ever constructed.

Look at the fire pot of a furnace from a practical point of view. Figure out for yourself which is better, the old-fashioned round fire pot that balks and clogs, giving imperfect combustion and wasting fuel, or the patent Square Pot used exclusively in Boynton Furnaces.

With this construction there are no slanting sides to gather ashes, no possibility of clogging, no necessity of raking. The grate bars operate under the entire fire bed, insuring thorough cleaning and quick combustion.

Noticeably economical in fuel. Easiest to regulate and care for. The ash-pit is large and square—handy to clean and giving increased draught.

Remember these most important improvements are found only in Boynton Square Pot Furnaces. Have your plumber, steam-fitter or tinsmith tell you about them.

There are BOYNTON heating plants of all kinds. Ask about our Round or Sectional Boilers for steam or hot water. Also ranges.

DON'TS.

Don't use more than one ounce of salt to every hundred adult fowls. This quantity is helpful.

Don't mix soft feed with broth from salt meats. This kind of assault and battery often ends in murder.

Don't throw coase salt where your fowls run. They pick it up for grit and are salted down for good.

Don't use coal ashes for grit. It's too soft. Draw your false teeth. Try it and see how you like it.

Don't use round, smooth grit. No good. It's cheap; but, like you razor, it's most awful dull.

Don't forget that grit is hen teeth. The rough is best. Buy "granite crystal." It's sharp. Comes from Boston. See?

Don't think ducks are frost proof because they have thick down. You'll have a downfall if you do.

Don't forget the ticks in the pigeon house. Plaster the cracks.

Don't pull ticks off. The head of the tick makes a sore and kills the pigeon. Just touch the bug with benzine. Beats an ax.

Don't feed homers as you do chickens. Buy the special mixed pigeon feeds and prosper.

The Value of Labor-Saving Devices.

When Mr. McCormick built his first hundred reapers in 1845, he paid four and a half cents for bolts. That was in the mythical age of hand labor. Today fifty bolts are made for a cent. So with guard-fingers; McCormick paid twenty-four cents each when James K. Polk was in the White House. Now there is a ferocious machine, which, with the least possible assistance from one man, cuts out 1,300 guard-fingers in ten hours, at a labor cost of one cent for six. Also, while exploring one of the Chicago factories, I came upon a herd of cud-chewing machines that were crunching out chain-links at the rate of 56,000,000 million a year. Nearer by four smaller and more irritable automata, which were biting off pieces of wire and chewing them into linchpins at a speed of 400,000 bites a day.

"Take out your watch and time this man," said Superintendent Brooks of the McCormick plant. "See how long he is in boring five holes in that great casting."

"Exactly six minutes," I answered.

"Well, that's progress, observed Brooks. Before we bought that machine it was a matter of four hours to bore those holes."

In one of its five twine mills—a monstrous bedlam of noise and a wilderness of fuzz, which is by far the largest of its sort in the world—there is enough twine twisted in a single day to make a girdle around the earth.—Herbert N. Casson, in Everybody's.

Premature Obituaries.

One of the traditions of the office of the New York Herald has to do with an editor who was a great upholder of the infallibility of his paper. It simply couldn't make a mistake.

A flustered citizen once burst into his office and bustled up to the editorial desk. "See here!" he demanded. "This obituary notice. It's all wrong."

"What's wrong about it?" asked the editor in calm confidence.

"Why, it's about me. I'm not dead!"

"If the Herald says you're dead," sternly replied the editor, "you're dead. But," he added magnanimously, "if you don't like being dead we'll print your birth notice."

His attitude was rather different from that of another editor, who, on being shown by the man most interested that the death of the complainant was falsely reported, apologized profusely and offered to make it all right.

"We'll print a correction at once," he said.

"Well," said the man that wasn't dead, "perhaps it would be better to let it stand. I'll show it to my friends when they want to borrow money."—Woman's Home Companion for February.

Legal Solid Gold.

The term "solid gold" has been the cause of much discussion on the part of manufacturers of gold articles and of much misapprehension on the part of the public for some time, and the recent law fixing the commercial definition of the phrase is welcomed on all sides.

According to this law ten-karat gold is the commercial "solid gold," all articles containing more alloy than this, or articles with parts which contain more alloy, are henceforth to be known as plated, filled or rolled gold, and must be so marked by the manufacturer. For example, a pin with top of "solid gold," even to the value of 18 karats, cannot be legally called solid if hinge, hook or pin is not ten-carat gold; while another pin of 10 karats throughout, though of much less intrinsic value than that of 18 karats, is legally "solid gold."

This law was made to protect the manufacturing jewelers against the makers and sellers of "phony" jewelry, and has been heartily endorsed by the legitimate trade all over the United States.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

By KATE AND VIRGIL D. BOYLES

(Copyright by A. C. McClurg & Co., 1907.)

"And my brand was on that spotted steer," he interrupted. "I know the creature—know him well. He has a mean eye. Had the gall to dispute the right of way with me once, not so long ago, either. He was in the corral at the time, but he's been on the range all summer. He may have the evil eye all right, but he's mine, bad eye and all; and what is mine, I will have. And is that the only original brand you saw?"

"The only one," quietly, "unless the J R on that red steer when he got up was an original one."

"J R? Who could J R be?"

"I couldn't say, but the man was—Jesse Black."

"Jesse Black!"

The repeated words were fairly spit out.

"Jesse Black! I might have known. Who else bold enough to loot the Three Bars? But his day has come. Not a hair, nor a hide, not a hoof, not tallow enough to fry a flapjack shall be left on the Three Bars before he repents his insolence."

"What will you do?" asked Williston.

"What will you do?" retorted Langford.

"I? What can I do?" in the vague, helpless manner of the dreamer.

"Everything"—if you will," briefly. He snatched up his wide hat.

"Where are you going?" asked Williston, curiously.

"To see Dick Gordon before this day is an hour older. Will you come along?"

"Ye—es," hesitatingly. "Gordon hasn't made much success of things so far, has he?"

"Because you—and men like you—are under the thumb of men like Jesse Black," said Langford, curtly. "Afraid to peach for fear of antagonizing the gang. Afraid to vote against the tools of the cattle thieves for fear of antagonizing the gang. Afraid to call your souls your own for fear of antagonizing the gang. Your 'on the fence' policy didn't work very well this time, did it? You haven't found your cattle, have you? The angel must have forgotten. Thought you were tainted of Egypt, eh?"

"It is easy for you to talk," said Williston, simply. "It would be difficult if your bread and butter and you little girl's as well depended on a scrawny little bunch like mine."

"Maybe," said Langford, shrugging his shoulders. "Doesn't seem to have exempted you, though, does it? But Black is no respecter of persons, you know. However, the time has come for Dick Gordon to show of what stuff he is made. It was for this that I worked for his election, though I confess I little thought at the time that proofs for him would be furnished from my own herds. Present conditions humiliate me utterly. Am I a weakling that they should exist? Are we all weaklings?"

A faint, appreciative smile passed over Williston's face. No, Langford did not look a weakling, neither had the professed humiliation lowered his proud head.

Langford strode to the door. Then he turned quickly.

"Look here, Williston, I shall make you angry, I suppose, but it has to go in the cattle country, and you little fellows haven't shown up very white in these deals; you know that yourself."

"Well?"

"Are you going to stand pat with us?"

"If you mean, am I going to tell what I know when called upon," answered Williston, with a simple dignity that made Langford color with sudden shame, "I am. There are many of us 'little fellows' who would have been glad to stand up against the rustling outrages long ago had we received any backing. The moral support of men of your class has not been what you might call a sort of 'on the spot' support, now, has it?" relapsing into a gentle sarcasm. "At least, until you came to the front," he qualified.

"You will not be the loser, and there's my hand on it," said Langford, frankly and earnestly, ignoring the latter part of the speech. "The Three Bars never forgets a friend. They may do you before we are through with them, Williston, but remember, the Three Bars never forgets."

Mary Williston, from her window, as is the way with a maid, watched the two horsemen for many a mile as they galloped away She followed them with her eyes while they slowly became faint, moving specks in the level distance and until they were altogether blotted out, and there was no sign of living thing on the plain that stretched between. But Paul Langford, as is the way with a man, forgot that he had seen a beautiful girl, and had thrilled to her glance. He looked back not once as he urged his trusty little mare on to see Dick Gordon.

CHAPTER III.

Louise.

It was raining when she left Wind City, but the rain had soon been distanced. Perhaps the judge was right when he said it never rained north or west of Wind City. But the judge had not wanted her to go. Neither had the Judge's wife.

Full 20 minutes, only day before yesterday, the judge had delayed his day's outing at the mill where the Jim river doubles right around on its tracks, in order to make it perfectly clear to her that it was absolutely outside the bounds of her duty, that it was altogether an affair on the side, that she could not be expected to go, and that the prosecuting attorney up there had merely asked her out of courtesy, in deference to her position. Of course he would be glad enough to get her, but let him get some one nearer home, or do without. It was'nt at all necessary for the court reporter to hold herself in readiness to answer the call of anything outside her prescribed circuit duties. To be sure she would earn a trifle, but it was a hard trip, a hard country, and she had much better postpone her initial journey into the unknown until the regular term of court, when he could be with her. He had then thrown his minnow seine over his shoulders, taken his minnow pail in one hand and his reel case and lunch box in the other, and walked out to the road wagon awaiting him at the gate, and so off to his frolic, leaving her to fight it out for herself.

The judge's wife had not been so diplomatic, not by any means. She had dwelt long and earnestly, and no doubt to a large extent truly, on the uncivilized condition of their neighbors up the line; the roughness of accommodations, the boldness and license of the cowboys, the daring and insolence of cattle thieves, and cunning and dishonesty of the Indians, and the uncouthness and viciousness of the half-breeds. She had ended by declaring eloquently that Louise would die of lonesomeness if, by God's good providence, she escaped a worse fate at the hands of one or all of the many evils she had enumerated. Yes, it was very evident Aunt Helen had not wanted her to go. But Aunt Helen's real reason had been that she held it so dizzily unconventional for her niece to go to that wild and unholy land alone. She did not actually fear for her niece's personal safety, and Louise more than half suspected the truth.

She had heard all the arguments before. They had little or no terrors for her now. They were the arguments used by the people back in her eastern home, those dear, dear people, her people—how far away she was!—when they had schemed and plotted so pathetically to keep her with them, the second one to break away from the slow, safe, and calm traditions of her kin in the place where generation after generation of her people had lived and died, and now lay waiting the great judgment in the peaceful country burying-ground.

She had listened to them dutifully, half believing, swallowed hard and followed her uncle, her father's youngest brother, to the "Land of the Dakotahs."

Now, that same dear uncle was a man of power and position in the new land. Only last November he had been reelected to his third term on the bench of his circuit with a big, heart-stirring majority. In the day of his prosperity he had not forgotten the little, tangle-haired girl who had cried so inconsolably when he went away, and the unaccountable horror in whose eyes he had tried to laugh away on that never-to-be-forgotten day when he had wrenched his heartstrings from their safe abiding-place and gone forth in quest of the pot of gold at the rainbow's end—the first of many generations. Tradition knew no other since his ancestors had felled forests and built homes of hewn logs. Now he had sent for Louise. His court reporter had recently left him for other fields of labor.

There was commotion among her people on receipt of the astounding proposition. She lived over again the dark days of the first flitting. It might well be her uncle had exaggerated the dangers of life in the new land. It was great fun to shock his credulous relatives. He had surely written them some enormous tales during those 15 years and more. He used to chuckle heartily to himself at reading some of the sympathizing replies. But these tales were held in evidence against him now that he dared to want Louise. Every letter was brought out by Louise's dear old grandmother and read to her over again. Louise did not half believe them, but they were gospel truth to her grandmother and almost so to her father and mother as well. She remembered the old spirit of fun rampant in her favorite uncle, and while his vivid pictures took all the color from her sensitive face, deep down in her heart she recognized them for what they were worth. The letters were a strange medley of grasshoppers, blizzards and Indians. But a ten-dollar per diem was a great temptation over a five-dollar per diem, and times were pretty hard on the old farm. More than all, the inexplicable something that had led her uncle to throw tradition to the four winds of heaven was calling her persistently and would not be denied.

The dear hero of her childhood was much changed to be sure; his big joints had taken on more flesh and he had gained in dignity of deportment what he had lost in ease of movement. His once merry eye had grown keen with the years of just judging. The lips that had laughed so much in the old days were set in lines of sternness. Judge Hammond Dale was a man who would live up to the tenets of his high calling without fear or favor, through good and evil report. Yet through all his gravity of demeanor and the pride of his integrity, Louise instinctively felt his kindliness and loved him for it. The loneliness fell away from her and a measure of content had come in its place, until the letter had come from the state's attorney up in Kemah county:

My Dear Miss Dale: The eighteenth of August is the date set for the preliminary hearing of Jesse Black. Will you come and take the testimony? I am very anxious that the testimony be taken by a competent reporter and shall be grateful to you if you decide to come.

The judge will tell you about our poor accommodations. Let me recommend to your consideration some good friends of mine, the Willistons, father and daughter. They live three miles northwest of Kemah. The judge will remember Williston, George Williston of the Lazy S. They are cultured people, though their way of living is necessarily primitive. I am sure you will like it better there than at our shabby little hotel, which is a rendezvous for a pretty rough class of men, especially at court time.

If you decide to come, Mary Williston will meet you at Velpen. Please let me know your decison. Very sincerely,

RICHARD GORDON.

So here she was, going into the Indian country at last. A big state, South Dakota, and the phases of its civilization manifold. Having come so far, to refuse to go on seemed like turning back with her hand already on the plow, so with a stout heart she had wired Richard Gordon that she would go. But it was pretty hard now, to be sure, and pretty dreary, coming into Velpen knowing that she would see no one she knew in all the wide, wide world. The thought choked her and the impish demon, loneliness, he of the smirk and horns and devil's eyes, loomed leeringly before her again. Blindly, she picked up her umbrella, suit case and rain coat.

Louise.

"Homesick?" asked the kindly brakeman, with a consolatory grin as he came to assist her with her baggage.

She bit her lip in mortification to think she had carried her feelings so palpably on her sleeve. But she nodded honestly.

"Maybe it won't be so bad," sympathized the brakeman. His rough heart had gone out to the slim, fair-haired creature with the vague trouble in her eyes.

"Thank you," said Louise, gratefully.

There was a moment's bewilderment on the station platform. There was no one anywhere who seemed to be Mary—no one who might be looking for her. It was evening, too, the lonesome evening to those away from home, when thoughts stab and memories sap the courage. Some one pushed her rudely aside. She was in the way of the trucks.

"Chuck it! None o' your sass, my lad! There's my fist. Heft it if you don't put no stock in its looks. Git out o' this, I say!"

The voice was big and convincing. The man wasn't so big, but some way he looked convincing, too. The truckman stepped aside, but with plucky temerity answered back:

"Get out yourself! Think you own the whole cattle country, jest 'cause you herd a few ornery, pink-eyed, slab-sided critters for your salt? Well, the railroad ain't the range, le' me tell you that. Jest you run your own affairs, will you?"

"Thanky. Glad to. And as my affairs is at present a lady, I'll thank you to just trundle this here railroad offspring to the back of this here lady—the back, I say—back ain't front, is it? Wasn't where I was eddicated. That's better. And ef you ain't satisfied, why, I belong to the Three Bars. Ever hear o' the Three Bars? Ef I'm out, jest leave word with the boss, will you? He'll see I git the word. Yes, sir, you ol' hoss thief, I belong to the Three Bars."

The encounter was not without interesting spectators. Louise's brakeman was grinning broadly at the discomfiture of his fellow employe. Louise herself had forgotten her predicament in the sudden whirlwind of which she was the innocent storm center.

The cowboy with the temper, having completely routed the enemy to the immense satisfaction of the onlookers, though why, no one knew exactly, nor what the merits of the case, turned abruptly to Louise.

"Are you her?" he asked, with a perceptible cooling of his assertive bravado.

"I don't know," said Louise smiling fearlessly at her champion, though inwardly quaking at the intuition that had flashed upon her that this strange, uncouth man had come to take the place of Mary. "The boldness and license of the cowboys," her aunt had argued. There could be no doubt of the boldness. Would the rest of the statement hold good?

"I think maybe I am, though I am Louise Dale, the new court reporter. I expected Miss Mary Williston to meet me."

"Then you are her," said the man with renewed cheerfulness, seizing her suit case and striding off. "Come along. We'll git some supper afore we start. You're dead tired, more'n likely. It'll be moonlight so't won't matter ef we are late a-gittin' home."

"Court reporter! I'll be doggoned!" muttered the brakeman. "The new girl from down east. A pore little white lamb among a pack o' wolves and coyotes, and homesick a'ready. No wonder! I'll be takin' you back tomorrow, I'm thinkin', young lady."

He didn't know the "little white lamb" who had come to help Paul Langford and Dick Gordon in their big fight.

A Little Philosophy.

Death can play a waiting game if needs be.

Love should light the fires on the family altar.

The hero business does not always pay dividends.

The power to awaken sympathy is the widow's might.

All that is needed to take a man down is a stenographer.

It is a poor disease that doesn't justify a big doctor's bill.

Many a man who strives to keep the peace has to run to save the pieces.

Men who first do wrong and then kill themselves should reverse the process.

After a second catastrophe those who have escaped fear the rule of three.

For Freckles.

The little sun kisses are not easily bleached, yet they can be greatly reduced in color if persistently given a treatment for bleaching them. A good remedy for freckles on the arms and hands is made of: Cocoa butter, 4 scruples; sweet almond oil, 4 scruples; oxide of zinc, 2 drachms; borate of soda, 1½ grains; essence of bergamot, 8 drops. This will keep the arms in splendid condition and prevent more freckles from coming.

Now for a remedy to cure them on the face: Elderflower water, 4 ounces; eau de cologne, 1 ounce; cucumber juice, 2 ounces. Take care there are no pimples or bad scratches on the face when this lotion is applied.

Troublesome Comma.

A comma, like many other things out of place, can cause a lot of trouble, says the London Chronicle. Not many years ago a distinguished graduate of Oxford decided to enter the Noncomformist ministry, and to wear no sacredotal garb. And he announced this intention in a manifesto containing the words: "I shall wear no clothes, to distinguish me from my fellow Christians." That delightful comma made him the laughing stock of the university and the joy of the picture shops, whose windows were flooded with illustrations of the Rev. X. Y. Z. distinguishing himself from his fellow Christians.

Mother's Cook Book.

The girl who is always making something useful for the kitchen made a handy cook book, using different colored sheets of paper for various articles, like white for cakes, blue for pies, green for pickles, etc. The sheets were bound in blue and white checked oilcloth, fastened with blue ribbons. The front sheets were indexed in alphabetic order, with numbers of the pages. When a good recipe was tested, it was cut from the paper or magazine and pasted in the book. A reliable cook book is the handiest thing in the kitchen.

His Safety.

"I understand Jenks has failed in business."

"Yes, all is lost but honor."

"He couldn't very well lose that."

"Why not?"

"Can't lose a thing you haven't got."

Not a Plain Cook.

Mistress—See here, Jane, I can't have you entertaining campany in my kitchen all the time.

New Cook—Faith, an' it do be your own fault, ma'am. Yez should 'av advertised for a plain cook.—Chicago News.

TOURNEY ALMOST ENDED

Five-Man City Championship Bowlers Have Only Two More Series to Roll.

GRANTS CONCEDED 1ST PLACE.

Washingtons Sure Of Second Money —Other Bowling Notes of Interest to Pin Knights.

The Plainfield five-man city championship bowling tourney will come to an end this week, there being but two more services to be rolled to complete the schedule.

First and second places are assured to the Grant and Washington teams respectively, while the Bismarck's can, by winning all three games from the Grant team tomorrow night, tie the Napoleons for third money, while two victories will enable them to tie up with the Brian Borus for fourth place.

While Chauncey Stout has a fair lead in the race for individual average honors there is a possibility of Chief Kiely, who is crowding him, beating him out and the work of these two bowlers will be watched with interest in tomorrow's night's series.

Bowlers from Newark Lodge, Knights of Pythias, will roll a friendly series with a team from Perseverance Lodge, of this city, tonight on Johnny Campbell's alleys.

The Armright bowling team, of this city, have arranged a home and home match game with the Elizabeth Stars. The first half will be rolled on Campbell's alleys next Friday night.

Prompeted by the success of the tourney, which closes this week, Johnny Campbell is arranging to hold another tourney on the same lines, entries for which will close on March first.

PLAINFIELD BOY MAKES SHOT PUTTING RECORD

Russell Lawrence, of Leal's School, smashed all metropolitan records for the interscholastic indoor 12-pound shot by a put of 49 ft. 4½ in., at the Brooklyn Poly Prep. meet, at the Twenty-third Regiment Armory, Saturday afternoon. Lawrence's performance surpasses Ralph Rose's best schoolboy mark by 1 foot 3 inches, which was the American record until Lee R. Talbot, Mercersburg's star, made a heave of 51 ft. 1 in. at Philadelphia last spring. Lawrence, who is not over average height and weighs only 170 pounds, has been putting the shot only a year, but his form is perfect. Addison H. Bissell, of Newark Academy, was second, with 46 ft. Lawrence also took second place in the standing broad jump.

SUMMIT HIGH SCHOOL EASILY DEFEAT P. H. S.

The Summit High School basketball five defeated the Plainfield High School team at the former place, Saturday afternoon, by a final score of 50 to 26. The home team got such a good start when the game opened that the Plainfield boys were unable to overtake the lead. At the end of the first half the score stood 22 to 10 in favor of Summit and the home players after than had things mostly their own way.

Morris did the best work for Plainfield, shooting six baskets from the field, while Caldwell was a close second with six baskets from foul and one from the field. Parks was the star member of the home five, being credited with eleven baskets from the field and three from foull.

The lineup:

Summit H. S.	Plainfield H. S.
Parks	Mortimer
Edgar	Morris
forwards.
Alesbury	Caldwell
centre.
Burkley	Snyder
Kirkpatrick	Parsons
guards.

Referee, McNaughton, of Summit; umpire, Paul Collier, Plainfield; timers, Gus Nash, Plainfield; Barr, Summit; scorers, Gus Nash, Plainfield; Burke, Summit.

NO BRYAN DELEGATION SAYS JAMES SMITH JR.

Former United States Senator James Smith, Jr., and the leader of the Democratic party in every county of the State excepting Hudson, is out with a statement that he does not intend to go to the Democratic national convention, and that he does not believe that Bryan will be the nominee, or that he will have the delegates from New Jersey. It is believed that Smith's candidate for President will be Judge George W. Gray, of Delaware.

The coming dinner by President Roosevelt to Governor Fort and Senator Everett Colby on Wednesday night is the subject of much speculation. It is looked upon here as certain that Fort and Colby will be asked to capture the Jersey Republican delegation for Taft.

It is believed that Fort has the vice-presidential bee in his bonnet, although his close friends hold up their hands and cry out aloud when it is mentioned.

Along the Fort-Colby lines is the bill to be introduced in the Legislature this week extending the direct primary law to the selection of delegates to the national committee convention. The Republican State committee should have been called together before this time, but Chairman Franklin Murphy is waiting to see what is to be done about this direct primary law. If delegates to the national conventions are to be elected by the direct primary, the work of making the law and holding the primaries must be finished by April 18.

The present candidates for delegates-at-large are Governor Fort, United States Senators Briggs and Kean, former Governor John W. Griggs, State Assessor David Baird and State Chairman Franklin Murphy.

Another interesting bit of legislative news is the notice sent out for a hearing on the Crosby local option bill on March 2, at 2 in the afternoon. The House committee on municipal corporations will give the hearing, and everybody interested has been notified. It is expected that this hearing will be the biggest of the session.

CHAS. MESSLER'S RUDE AWAKENING FROM A NAP.

Charles Messler, who has been in the habit of sleeping in the hay-loft of a barn on Chatha m street, had a rude awakening Saturday afternoon while taking one of his "beauty maps." When he laid down he selected a spot a little too near the edge of the mow and in attempting to turn over he rolled off, falling a distance of nearly fifteen feet to the floor below. He struck on his head, inflicting a painful wound.

Several workmen about the barn heard the commotion and hastening to learn the cause found Messler in a semi-conscious condition. The ambulance was summoned and the man was hurried to the hospital. An examination showed that the man's condition was not serious. He will be detained at the hospital for a few days.

HOSPITAL HORSE SHED MAKES AERIAL TRIP.

During the severe wind storm, following the heavy downpour of rain on Saturday the wooden horse-shed near Muhlenberg Hospital, was lifted clear and clean of its foundations, carried a distance of thirty feet, turned upside down and thrown into a ditch. At the time horses belonging to Drs. P. J. Zeglio and J. Hervey Buchanan were tied beneath the structure, but fortunately, when it changed its location the hitching straps broke, allowing the animals to run free and escape injury. A serious mixup was averted by hospital attendants.

The horses pranced about the open fields until they were finally caught. The rigs were not damaged to any extent. Although the heavy wooden shed was carried such a distance, it remained intact and today a large force of men was engaged to replace it on its proper foundation.

NO CONTROVERSY OVER PRIMARY LAWS--STOKES

Ex-Governor Stokes, chairman of the commission appointed by Governor Fort to revise the primary and election laws, when asked at Trenton for a statement as to the facts regarding the alleged controversy over the application of the primary laws to the selection of delegates to the national conventions, said:

"There seems to be a misapprehension concerning the situation and a misunderstanding of the present laws. The commission has had no conference, except an informal meeting for organization, and no decision has been reached as to the recommendations that will be made or the policy to be pursued.

"Governor Fort's recent special message suggested the application of the primary law to the selection of delegates to the district conventions. The immediate work of the commission will be the drafting of a law on these lines, and if such a law is framed and adopted by the Legislature these primaries will not be held under party management, as now, but under the regulation of the State laws and the supervision of the State election officers."

LEONARD SMITH'S FUNERAL.

Service at His Late Home Attended by Large Gathering of Relatives and Friends.

The funeral of Leonard S. Smith, whose death occured after a long illness, was held Saturday afternoon at his late home on Duer street. It was conducted by Rev. Dr. E. M. Rodman, rector-emeritus of Grace church, and was attended by a large gathering of relatives and friends, among them many lodge brethren. The simple Episcopal service was used and Dr. Rodman took occasion at the close to recite the poem, "Now the Laborer's Task Is O'er."

During the service, a quartette composed of S. B. Howe, Jr., Frederick J. Pope, E. E. Runyon and Dr. George D. Herring rendered two selections, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," and "Asleep in Jesus." The floral tributes were very numerous and included set pieces from Plainfield Council, Royal Arcanum, Plainfield Lodge of Odd Fellows, Jerusalem Lodge, F. and A. M., the Trinity Church Mission Band and Mrs. Smith's Sunday-school class at Trinity and the King's Daughters of the same church.

The body was placed in the receiving vault at Hillside, the pall bearers being Elias H. Bird, Edward T. Van Winkle, Clarence Goss, R. A. Becker, John D. Roberts and Edward Johnson.

BIBLICAL INSTRUCTION PROGRAM AT Y. W. C. A.

Miss Caroline L. Palmer, instructor in the New York Bible Teachers' Training School, will speak at the association rooms, No. 212 East Front street, on Thursday afternoon, February 27, at 3 o'clock. His subject will be "The Social Question in the Book of Luke." Miss Palmer is an exceedingly interesting speaker, and all women, young and old, are invited to hear her.

The Bible Study Committee has been fortunate in obtaining William D. Murray to give a course in the "Minor Prophets" in Tuesday evenings during Lent. This class will be free, and enrollment in it may be made at the association rooms at any time.

Miss Halloway's Tea.

A very delightful tea was given Saturday afternoon by Miss Harriet Halloway, of East Seventh street, in honor of Miss Cochran, who has recently moved to Watchung avenue, were assisted in receiving by their mothers, Mrs. Halloway and Mrs. Cichran. At the tea table Mrs. John S. Zelie and Mrs. Henry Cochran presided, assisted by the Misses Elsie Goddard, Elsie Martin, May Cahoone, Josephine Randolph and Miss Stevens. A large number of guests were present.

From the Court Blotter.

In the city court, this morning, Arthur Allen, was fined $3 on a charge of drunkenness. He was arrested Saturday afternoon. Harry Molleson, who became intoxicated and went to sleep in a Park avenue hallway early yesterday morning, was let go with the understanding that the next time he appears in court his sentence will be sixty days straight. He has been arrested six times within the past fifteen months.

WHAT COUNCILMANIC COMMITTEES ARE DOING

The Councilmanic police committee will meet at 6 o'clock tonight at Mayor Fisk's office to investigate the charge against Acting Patrolman John Payne, whose suspension from the force followed his arrest in New York on a charge of disorderly conduct.

The Councilmanic fire committee, which investigated the conduct of the fire department at the Letcher fire two weeks ago, will file its report with the Common Council tonight. A large number of witnesses were examined and it is said that some surprises are in store.

The Councilmanic license committee, it is reported, has decided to present to the city fathers all applications as filed. Well founded rumor has it that enough votes have been mustered in the Common Council to "turn down" Henry Haurand, who has kept an orderly place for a dozen or more years.

Progress is being made by the Councilmanic finance committee in its work on the budget for the coming year. A report will be made at the March meeting.

JAP HAS A CRAVING FOR BLANK CHECKS.

At an early hour yesterday morning Policeman Julius Saulter nabbed a Japanese at the Central Railroad station at Somerville, who carried a suspicious-looking pack on his back. The Jap put up a hard fight and finally escaped from the policeman and ran up the railroad track. The policeman fired several shots after him. The pack contained packages of blank checks, valuable receipts and stationery, which had been stolen from the grocery store of Hardgrove & Kline at Somerville.

Later in the day Superintendent of Police Durling learned that the Jap had been seen at Whitehouse. Policeman Henderson, who was detailed to capture him, unexpectedly met his man on the way to the Whitehouse railroad station. He was pushing a wheelbarrow, on which was a trunk filled with blank check books and railroad stationery. The Jap again put up a hard fight, and it required six men to subdue him. He was brought to Somerville and placed in the county jail.

The odd prisoner has been working on the roads about Somerville as a laborer. He was once paid by check, and the exchange of a piece of paper for a lot of silver at the bank led him to believe that everything in the shape of a bank check was as good as gold.

TWO HELPFUL MEETINGS AT THE RESCUE MISSION.

Several prominent religious workers from the Bethany Rescue Circle, of Brooklyn, were in charge of the services at the Plainfield Rescue mission in the W. C. T. U. rooms, Saturday and Sunday nights, and there was a deep spiritual awakening among the large number of people who attended. Superintendent LeMatty, of the local mission, arranged and took charge of both services.

Among those who attended were a number of people who have never heretofore shown any interest in religion and the results were most encouraging to the workers. There were requests for prayers and many testimonies, all of which combined to make the meetings helpful to those in charge as well as the audience.

CHURCH BENEFIT DANCE HELD AT TRUELL HALL.

A successful reception and dance was held at Truell Hall, Saturday night, for the benefit of St. Stephens' Episcopal church. There were about seventy-five patrons, including many of the younger people from the Netherwood section of the city. The affair was arranged by a committee of which Mrs. R. H. McCready was the chairman, and it was greatly enjoyed by everyone.

The large ball room was used for dancing and an orchestra of five pieces furnished the music. The festivities were continued until nearly midnight and during the intermission light refreshments were served. The church will realize a substantial sum as profit from the affair.

Conductor Meets With An Accident.

James Boyd, a conductor on the Arlington avenue trolley, met with a peculiar accident Saturday night just after leaving the terminus near Hillside cemetery. The trolley pole jumped off the wire and while Boyd was leaning over the back of the car trying to replace it, the small wheel dropped out of its fastenings and struck him on the forehead, inflicting a deep and painful wound. The man was taken to Muhlenberg Hospital for treatment and another conductor took his place. The injuries are not serious and Boyd will be able to return to work in a few days.

State Convention in May.

The election of delegates to the State and Congress district conventions will be held on either April 22 or 25. The State convention, it is expected, will be held in the first week in May. Under the call of the national committee it cannot be held later than May 12.

The P. H. S. basketball five will play the Y. M. C. A. second team at the association building tonight.

HUGH FOX DISCUSSES PRISONS AND PRISONERS

Hugh F. Fox, president of the Plainfield Charity Organization and one of the best known eleemosynary workers in the State, gave an address at last night's service in the Congregational church. His subject was "Prisons and Prisoners" and because of his years of experience in visiting the penal institutions in this and other States his remarks were of absorbing interest to the large audience.

Mr. Fox is a member of the executive committee of the New Jersey Prison Reform Association and many changes in the conduct of institutions have been brought about through the organization. The speaker detailed the manner in which criminals are taken care of and also the steps that have been followed out in the curbing of criminal tendencies in young men and boys. The reformatories have been an important factor in this respect and the addition of probation officers has also accomplished the saving of many young men who would otherwise become confirmed lawbreakers and menaces to society.

Mr. Fox compared the institutions of this State with those of its neighbors and pointed out advantages in either, crediting New Jersey with having an excellent system.

He Was Willing.

In the morning mail the busy editor found the following written on a postal card: "Dear Sir—I have just graduated from a correspondence school of journalism. Would you like to have me write for your paper? J. Alexander McNutt."

Seizing his trusty pencil, the busy editor dashed off the following in reply: "Dear J. Alex.—Certainly we would be pleased to have you write for our paper. Kindly address your letter to the circulation manager and enclose the regular subscription price."—Chicago News.

TICKET COMMITTEE MEETS.

Assurances that Attraction for Major Edwards Testimonial Will Be Greeted by Crowded House.

The ticket committee in charge of the Maze Edwards testimonial held a meeting at the Casino yesterday and learned that the returns so far have been very satisfactory. Fully $600 has already been received and the indications are that the amount will be doubled before the close of the present week. All of the Major's friends have been working hard to make sure that a crowded house greets "The Heir to the Hoorah" and it is now a certainty.

It was intended to begin the exchange of tickets and regular seat sale today but it was found necessary to put it over until Wednesday. On and after that date the seats may be obtained.

Those at the meeting yesterday were F. W. Butler, H. L. Hall, S. P. T. Wilbur, Lewis G. Timpson, B. F. Coriell, J. Hervey Doane, W. J. Counihan, Samuel Cunningham and James Dodd.

Clifford Schorb and son, Ernest Schorb, of Cumberland, Md., are visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Schorb, of the borough.

PROPOSED CITY LIGHTING CONTRACT IS REJECTED

Convincing Arguments, at Hearing, Against Agreement with P.S.C. Made by Taxpayers.

COMMITTEE IS DISCHARGED.

Mayor and Corporation Counsel Tell Of Its Merits While R. Henry Depew and Others Successfully Attack Its Provisions.

After practically spending the whole evening discussing pro and con the relative merits and disadvantages of the proposed electric lighting contract between the city and the Public Service Corporation, the agreement was finally rejected and the committee which drafted it was discharged, at an adjourned meeting of the Common Council, last night. The fact that there was to be a public hearing on the matter, which had been agitated so vigorously by the Plainfield Protective Association, brought out an unusually large number of representative citizens, occupying every bit of available space in the lobby.

Judging by the frequent applause of the speakers the Plainfield Protective Association was supported by a majority of those present in its contention for a better contract. The Public Service Corporation was well represented by L. D. H. Gilmour, Farley Osgood, H. P. Church and E. C. Deal, the last named of this city, who occupied front seats and listened attentively to all the arguments. Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh was present to represent the city and at the request of the Councilmen to whom questions were put by various ones in the lobby, he interpreted different parts of the contract and explained other knotty problems. In the absence of President Tolles the chair was filled by Chairman Buxton of the finance committee.

Mayor's Address.

The hearing began, when Mayor Charles J. Fisk was extended the privileges of the floor and for over a half hour presented his views and opinions regarding the matter under discussion. "I want to tell you at the outset," said the Mayor, "that the Public Service Corporation don't want a new contract. They are willing to operate under the old one of 1889, which calls for a price of $15.50 per incandescent lamp. Under the terms of that contract the price for the commercial use of electricity was 18 kilo-watts, which has since been reduced to 10 cents, and I want to say that the reduction would have been made whether any society or organization had been formed or not."

Referring to the old contract Mr. Fisk said that it gave the company the right to string wires at will conveying electricity for light, power and heat. Other rights were also given to the company by the State, permitting the stringing of wires wherever the company pleased and the city could not deny it the right.

Mayor Raps P. P. A.

"The P. P. A. wants no contract," continued Mr. Fisk, "and I have been trying to find out what it does want. It is always ready to object to everything, but without offering any reasonable suggestions. The Board of Trade, through its president and other members, called on me in my office and urged that arc lights be adopted at any cost and they were willing to waive any specified term of years for a contract. The Commercial Travelers' Association says it favors a one year contract for the reason that the cost of producing electricity is growing less and it believes the city should get the benefit of the reduction.

"The Mayor and Common Council has but one object in view, that is to make the best contract possible, no matter who it is made with. We want the best lighted streets in the State. With that object in view a committee was appointed last October to confer with the Public Service Corporation. The question of street lighting was taken up on two grounds, namely, the best rate possible and to regulate the manner in which wires should be strung and to cause the removal of high tension wires. The committee did not intend to waste any time in argument over the question of regulating wires, etc.

P. P. A. Dictatorial.

"At the conference the proposition was made to remove wires from the highway. The company absolutely refused to do this in one year or eighteen months, but finally said that they would comply with the request during the next three years. If the contract had been signed at that time I believe the wires would have been removed in six months.

"An examination of the wires by our electrical expert, Dr. F. A. C. Perrine, showed that they were in poor condition and irregular, and the insulation was worn off in many instances. In his opinion the wires throughout the whole city would have to be replaced to be in a safe condition. This brought the city up to one of its biggest fights with the company. It absolutely refused to accept rules and regulations covering this part of the work on the ground that if it agreed to the proposition here the same thing would be required of the company in other cities throughout the State. Our ordinance was passed and the only place to insert such a clause was in a contract. Finally the company agreed to the proposition. The contract preserved to the city all the rights of previous contracts, with an option to purchase the local plant at the expiration of the terms of agreement.

Benefits of Contract.

"Under the proposed new contract the city has all these rights and new ones. The company agrees to furnish 25 candle power lamps for $15 each per year. The city has it says in the kind of lamp to be used and it is to be changed on schedule dates. It is not to go below 20 candle power. That may be too much lee-way, but when left to our engineer he said it was not, that lamps begin to deteriorate the minute they are put in service.

"Another clause gives the city the right to place at the company's station a self-recording register showing at all times the voltage. I don't want light in a laboratory, but on the street. If the lamps fall below 20 candle power they are to be removed and the company pays the penalty. Another provision is that when a lamp is found not burning, a deduction is made on a percentage basis. We are to get a lamp that is required to furnish light for 4,000 hours a year at a cost of $15. It is between sunset and midnight that the lights are needed the most, but when a light is found to be out the deduction is made for the whole night, unless it be due to some unavoidable accident.

"The maximum rate for commercial lighting has been fixed at 12 cents per kilo-watt, while the present rate is 10 cents. Many say that 12 cents is too high, but if you cannot get it for less you would certainly take it at the lowest possible figure. I cannot get these lamps for $13 as the price suggested by someone.

The Three-Year Period.

"As to the three year period. This is a question of negotiation. The company says it will do certain things for a contract of three years. It agrees under a five year term to furnish twenty-five arc lights for $85 each and fifty for $80 each, while the present two will be continued at a rate of $90 each if no additional ones are ordered.

"Clause five of the contract is objected to on the grounds that the company is to specify the lamp decided upon for use and which the city is to secure in the open market for test. It is believed that the responsibility can be shifted on the city, but this is not so. The company can penalize the company so heavily that in case the lamps are not satisfactory a change can be obtained.

"Such tests as have been proposed would not be worth the effort. One has the right to take a representative of the company with him and show him where a light fails to come up to requirements, but taking a lamp out of service on one's own responsibility would be null and void. It would be impossible to penalize the company under such conditions.

"Another objection is made to the wording 'As far as may be practical,' in requiring or making changes. If an improvement is decided practical it is easy to determine the fact and the company would have to comply. As to high potential wires. They have a right to be where they are and we cannot force their removal. The wire referred to carries 13,000 volts, but it wouldn't kill much quicker than those of 2,300 volts. While the company has the right to put them up anywhere in the city, it has agreed to take them down after three years.

Dares to Do Right.

"There is one thing I want for Plainfield and that is the very best contract I can get. The P. P. A. published a circular in which a statement I made was quoted and declared to be 'uncalled for.' What the association wanted was to be done and it knew the fact. The members were informed that everyone would be given free and full opportunity to be heard, that the contract would not be rushed through.

"There sits a man here tonight that made the remark to me that if I signed a contract for more than one year I would never be Mayor again. Such a threatening attitude is not the right way to obtain any-

TREE WORK COST, $2,200

Appropriation Requested by Shade Tree Commission for the Coming Year.

NO REPORT ON LETCHER FIRE.

Probers To Tell Their Findings Later—Routine Matters Considered By the City Fathers.

Outside of the public hearing on the proposed electric lighting contract, little business was transacted by the Common Council, last night. The expected report from the fire committee following its investigation of the Letcher fire, did not come to light. It was explained that only one name, that of Chairman Hibbard, was on the report and the other members of the committee did not have time to read it through previous to the meeting. The report will be presented later.

The Shade Tree Commission communicated with the city fathers, stating that it would need an appropriation of $2,200 for the coming year. The matter was referred to the finance committee. A petition from N. H. Saxton and others, requesting that West Eighth street, between Monroe avenue and the city line, be macadamized was referred to the street committee. The Religious Society of Friends petitioned against the granting of any increased number of licenses or any licenses at all.

Through H. C. Van Emburgh, its secretary, the Board of Assessors presented a list of tax duplicates and field books, etc., needed for the year, stating that persons desiring to submit bids can get information through him or from Tax Collector W. R. Townsend. The matter was referred to the finance committee.

The Highland Park Realty Company petitioned to have Leland avenue, between Front street and South avenue, macadamized. This was referred to the street committee, as was also a similar petition to have Netherwood avenue, between Front and East Second street, macadamized.

Lemuel E. Hart and Lucy Woolley, through William M. Stillman, petitioned to have an unopened street, extending from Elmwood place to Plainfield avenue, closed. The petitioners claimed that the street which was staked out in 1884, does not appear on the city map and no attempt has ever been made to open it as a thoroughfare. The matter was referred to the street committee.

The Plainfield Land and Building Improvement Company, through its president, A. D. Thompson, asked for three lights on Ravine road and also requested that the street be macadamized. He called attention to the fact that this developed property had been assessed for $750 and he thought the company was entitled to some consideration. The petition was referred to the street and light committees. Another petition for two lights at Netherwood and Leland avenues, was also referred to the light committee.

The appointment of William Duyg, as special patrolman, by Mayor Fisk, was confirmed.

A resolution offered by Mr. Hibbard, and adopted, provides that in all cases where taxes are not paid on or before December 2, that 10 per cent. interest shall be added.

Before the meeting, Mr. Montgomery offered a motion that the Council adjourn to Monday night, February 24, to consider the license applications.

MUSICAL TREAT ARRANGED BY H. RAYMOND LODER.

What promises to be one of the musical events of the season will be given at the Park Club on February 25. The program arranged by H. Raymond Loder, who recently made his debut at the Waldorf Astoria and is well known in musical circles in New York and Plainfield, shows an array of good things which augurs well for intelligent and discriminating music-lovers of this city.

Associated with Mr. Loder in this musicale will be John Bland, tenor, of New York. Those who heard Mr. Bland last spring while he was in this city need no further introduction. Mrs. Joseph McIntyre will be the pianist. Miss Gertrude Lohrke, of East Orange, will be the soprano soloist. J. Edmund Skiff will act as accompanist. Mrs. G. A. Warner will have a violin solo, and Mr. Loder will have several numbers on the program. The program shows full well the character of the music and ability of the artists.

Grace M. E. Church Bazaar.

Under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of Grace M. E. church, an entertainment and bazaar will be held in the lecture room Thursday and Friday of this week. The various committees in charge of the affair are hard at work on a program of entertainment, which will be different each evening of the bazaar.

MERCHANTS IN A LEAGUE

Local Tradesmen to Form a Permanent Organization on Monday, March 8.

STORES TO CLOSE SATURDAY.

Thirty-two Shops Will Do No Business On Washington's Birthday—Are Working In Unity.

Representative tradesmen of the city got together last night and decided to form a permanent organization to be known as "The Retail Merchants' Association of Plainfield, New Jersey." The new organization is for the purpose of mutual protection and also for the improvement of conditions with the various firms and among the employes. The advisability of its formation was discussed at length in the meeting, by the heads of representative firms, and it was unanimously decided that a permanent association be formed.

A. E. Force was in the chair, and J. V. E. Vanderhoef acted as secretary for the meeting. After the decision to organize, F. A. Duttenhofer, H. Schwed and J. S. Johnson were appointed a committee to draft a suitable set of resolutions looking toward the perfecting of the association. More than a score of local firms have signified their desire to join, and a canvass is to be made among the firms not represented at the meeting. The organization will doubtless be completed at the next meeting of the tradesmen, to be held on Monday evening, March 8.

At the meeting last night, the question of closing local stores for Washington's Birthday was discussed and it was finally decided by the firms represented that they would remain open Friday evening but be closed all day Saturday. In connection with this discussion, the general question of closing the stores on other holidays was brought up, but nothing definite was decided upon. Twenty-two firms have agreed to close up shop on Washington's Birthday, and a canvass will be made among the other firms by a special committee, composed of H. P. Greenwood, H. C. Levy and Morris C. Van Ardsdale.

MORE ABOUT VENICE TO INTEREST WOMEN

A very charming paper on Venetian Churches and Plans was presented by Mrs. William Griscom at the meeting of the Monday Afternoon Club yesterday afternoon at the Casino. The vivid description of the architectural and artistic beauties of St. Mark's and other churches as well as the palatial homes of the Dogel and Jarician families of Venice gave pleasure alike to those familiar with the scenes and those who only knew them by illustrations and written records. An animated and interesting discussion followed.

The paper was preceded by a notable one on Club Ethics prepared by Dr. Lozier, of New York, and read by Mrs. William C. Hubbard. It dealt with the motive, development and influence of women's clubs and was first read at the Federation of Women's Clubs May 8, 1907.

PAYNE IS LET OFF EASY

Local Cop is Reduced in Grade and Fined for "Conduct Unbecoming an Officer."

McDONALD IS ALSO FINED.

Patrolman Who Gets In Mixup With New York Policeman Escapes Dismissal from the Force.

Patrolman John Payne and Daniel McDonald, who were suspended from the city police force on February 8 following an escapade in New York in which both figured, were tried by the Police Board of the Common Council last night. They were found guilty on charges of "conduct unbecoming an officer" and punishment was immediately meted out. Payne was fined a month's pay, amounting to $77, and was reduced from Grade C to Grade E in the department. McDonald was fined two weeks' pay, $38.50.

The reduction in grade which Payne undergoes, practically means that he begins as a new policeman and that his pay is reduced from $77 to $66, the amount fixed for Class E officers. There is nothing to prevent his being returned to Class C, however, if his conduct within the near future warrants it being done.

The police committee is composed of Frank Randolph, Robert E. Hall and William L. Gloak, while Mayor Fisk meets with them as ex-officio member. The trial began at 6 o'clock and was finished in a very short time. Chief Kiely preferred the charge against both men and detailed the offense, the facts being admitted by both officers.

According to the chief, Payne and McDonald were given leave of absence on Friday night, February 7, and went to New York. They were making a noise on Sixth avenue near Thirtieth street and when warned by Patrolman Walsh, of the Tenderloin station, to keep quiet, an altercation followed. McDonald withdrew at the first sign of trouble but Payne stood his ground and he and Walsh engaged in a struggle during which both men wielded their fists. Walsh blew his whistle for help and the Plainfielder was taken to the night court at Jefferson market, where Judge Hermann held him in $500 bail for trial. His release was obtained the next day and induced the arresting officer to withdraw his charge after Payne had apologized.

McDonald was not arrested but both officers were suspended until the police board could act. Payne has been a probation officer for three years, during which he has been before the board repeatedly. McDonald's record is practically clean, having stood trial but once before on a serious charge.

INTERRUPTED MAYOR FISK; GETS HUSTLED TO JAIL

Neil Laughlin, a machinist, was one of the crowd of interested Plainfielders that gathered in the Council Chamber, last night, to hear the discussion on the light contract. Powwows of this kind are generally dry, sort of affairs to those not participating and Laughlin fortified himself against any inconvenience by liquoring up before he took his seat in the lobby. The load was light when he entered but the heated argument that waxed over the contract caused it to weigh heavily on him and from an ordinary spectator he became a thirty-third degree disrupter.

Mayor Fisk took the floor and was arguing for the proposition when Laughlin yelled out:

"Aw, shut up."

The interruption nonplused the executive for a moment but thinking it was only one of the opponents to the measure who was unduly excited, he began his argument anew. Once more Laughlin informed him he had better "dry up," or words to that effect, and about that time something happened. Special Officer Dunham, the Council's handy man, and Overseer Aleck Ayres located the cause of the trouble and booze-laden Laughlin was hustled from the room. Out in the hallway he protested strongly against his ejectment and was declaring his rights as a citizen when Chief Kiely took a hand. He tried to get Laughlin to go home but without success, so finally locked him up, the prisoner resisting all the way to headquarters.

In court, this morning, Laughlin demanded a postponement of his trial in order that he might "see some of the friends he was with" and Judge Runyon released him in his own recognizance until tomorrow morning.

COLORED YOUTH HELD FOR THE GRAND JURY

Preston Clay, the colored youth arrested yesterday on a charge of disorderly conduct preferred by women and girls, was arraigned in the city court this morning and pleaded guilty. He was held at $200 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury at the May term. The amount was furnished by Rev. J. T. Diggs, pastor of the Mount Zion church, of which the defendant is a member and a singer in the choir.

Previous to the hearing, several men spoke in Clay's behalf, one of whom was H. C. Krebs, superintendent of the North Plainfield school. Mr. Krebs said that the young man has been an ambitious student and a general favorite in his class. He has always tried hard to learn, he said, and his conduct both in and out of school has been exemplary. Rev. Mr. Diggs, Rev. E. B. Maynard and other citizens spoke in his behalf and the court received letters asking that leniency be shown.

In disposing of the case, Judge Runyon stated for the benefit of Clay's mother and sisters, who were in court, and the interceding friends, that the offense charged against him is a serious one and of such an import that only the higher judiciary could pass upon it.

POLICE CHIEF WITNESSES DRUNK CUTTING UP DIDOES.

Chief Kiely happened to be glancing out of a window at Police Headquarters, yesterday noon, when he noticed a man sagging along under a full load of booze. The fellow was minding his own business, apparently, but while the head sleuth was still looking at him he suddenly made a dive toward two women walking by and attempted to embrace them. The chief started Patrol Driver O'Gorman on the run after the offender and he was resting in a cell five minutes afterward.

When the case was called in the city court, this morning, the prisoner gave his name as John Benjovinski. He had no excuse to make for his conduct and Judge Runyon gave him his choice of $8 or twenty days. His son paid the fine.

Charged With Health Violation.

John Inges, of New Market, was arraigned in the city court, this morning, charged by Assistant Health Officer O'Brien with a violation of the health ordinance by collecting garbage in wooden pails. The defendant is employed by a New Market man and the case was adjourned until tomorrow morning in order to have the latter present.

Complains of Nuisance.

A wide-awake citizen states that an old barrel has stood over a coal hole on the sidewalk on West Second street, near Park avenue, for nearly a month, and adds that theatre-goers cannot understand why this nuisance is permitted to remain for so long a period.

HUNT FOR VANONI FAMILY

Police on Trail of Quartet of Hotel Bill Jumpers Who Register from Plainfield.

ARE THEY THE MATHEWSONS?

If So They Are Wanted For Robbery At Willett's Hotel In Westfield—Skipped from Princeton.

In the class with the De Andersons in their ability to run up bills and dodge payment the "Vanoni" family, known also as the "Mathewsons," has aroused the police of cities and towns in this part of the State by their successful methods of operation. Chief Kiely, of the city police, and Chief Marshal Weiss, of the borough force, have been notified by the Princeton department to look out for them.

It was last Wednesday that the family, consisting of a mother, daughter and two sons, registered at Nassau Inn, Princeton, as "Mrs. E. V. Vanoni and family, of Plainfield, N. J." They were accommodated in the best of style until yesterday, when they departed suddenly, without settling their board bill, which amounted to $35. The Princeton police were at once notified, and warned the police in neighboring cities to be on the lookout for the family. The Trenton police identify the party as the same family which were at the Trenton House some weeks ago, and left without settling their accounts.

The Westfield police say they believe that the Vanonis are the same family as the Mathewsons, who left Willett's Hotel in Westfield two weeks ago without paying board, but taking about $400 worth of clothing belonging to Mrs. J. H. Willett. The descriptions of the members of the Mathewson family is the same as that furnished by the police for the Vanonis.

J. H. Staats, formerly proprietor of the Hotel Kensington, said today that a family answering the description applied to him for accommodations at the Kensington during January. Satisfactory terms could not be arranged and they left town. Aside from this, they are not known in the city or borough.

The party consists of four, who claim to be of one family. From discriptions furnished by the police, one is a woman of about forty-five years of age, tall and slender, with prominent cheek bones. A young woman, about 25 years old, claims to be her daughter. She was known as "Pearly," when the family had their Vanoni alias. The other two members of the "family" are a 25-year-son, and a boy, about sixteen years of age. When the family were known as the Mathewsons, they registered as New Yorkers, and the young man was registered as a nephew of "Mrs. Mathewson."

At Willett's Hotel in Westfield, where they stayed for nearly two weeks, "Mrs. Mathewson" announced that she had come from New York city to look about for a home in Westfield. She said that she was unable to find a house that suited her, but was contemplating having one erected on a site in the residental district of the town.

County G. O. P. Committees.

At the meeting of the Union County Republican Committee at Elizabeth, last night, the standing committees for the year were announced. F. H. Taylor the committee on speakers and hall and Andrew McCardell and Herbert Buxton were made members of the outing committee. Reuben Savidge, of Elizabeth, received the endorsement of the committee for the position of harbor master. The appointment is made by the Governor.

Warner, the rector of the parish, that he will be glad to come here to explain his theories on the reformation of the wayward youth.

Home Rule In Excise.

Assemblyman Whitehead's bill introduced in the Legislature last night authorizes councilmen in incorporated boroughs to have the sole and exclusive power, by a three-fourths vote, to license and regulate the sale of malt, spirituous, vinous and other liquors. Suits to recover penalties for the violation of the act are to be brought before the borough recorder or a justice of the peace.

CAREER A STRANGE ONE.

Jailbreaker Fought for Country, Received Clemency, Was Shot and Now Is in Custody.

Morristown, Feb. 18.—Daniel Batson, of Budd's Lake, who was committed to the Sussex county jail last week for ninety days upon a charge of being drunk and disorderly, has an interesting record. While confined in jail here on a minor charge he on July 4, 1899, overpowered the late Deputy Sheriff Ira Cory and escaped. He soon after enlisted in the United States army and was sent to the Philippines.

He served his term of enlistment with credit, was honorably discharged, and coming back quietly settled at Budd's Lake, married and went to housekeeping. Along in 1905 he was arrested on the old charge of jailbreaking, but when the facts relating to his army service, his marriage and that he had settled down and become a good citizen were brought to Judge Alfred Mills' attention he suspended sentence and Batson was released.

On February 21, 1906, Batson was almost killed by being shot in the abdomen by an Italian known as "Mike," and was taken to a Paterson hospital, where he recovered. Batson, at the time of this incident, was in a buggy with his brother Lawrence, driving near Netcong. "Mike," it was said, became angry, because he was compelled to walk in the mud to make room for the buggy, and after an angry altercation shot Batson. "Mike" was never captured.

DISCOVERS SISTER IN POVERTY.

Wealthy San Francisco Mine Owner Has Not Seen Her in Seven Years.

Atlantic City, Feb. 18.—Parted seven years ago from her brother, then a poor man searching for fortune, Mrs. Georgiana Winn was located here Saturday by the police and informed of the search made for her by the brother, now a wealthy mine owner in San Francisco. Search for the woman was started a week ago, when the brother, who has become a millionaire through mining operations, wired to spare no expense to find his sister, his only remaining relative.

The woman appeared at police headquarters later, from her home in the rear of 22 North Georgia avenue, in the poorest quarter of the town, and wept while she was being placed in possession of her brother's address. She will go to California.

Admits Passing Worthless Check.

Elizabeth, Feb. 18.—Conrad Betenstein was arrested last night, on complaint of Anton Sauerwein, an Elizabeth saloon-keeper, who accused him of passing a bogus check for $15. It was drawn on the People's Trust Company of Brooklyn, and when it was presented there the bank officials said Betenstein never had an account in that institution. The prisoner admitted in court that he had given Sauerwein the worthless check, but said he would make good the money through the assistance of a friend. He was held to see if his friend would come to his rescue.

Rogers Locomotive Works to Close.

Paterson, Feb. 18.—It was stated yesterday that the Rogers Locomotive Works branch of the American Locomotive Company will be shut down March 1 unless there is a revival in the industry before that time. The plant is working on the last order on the shop list—ten locomotives for the Southern Indiana Railroad Company. Eight of these have been completed, and it is said that there is little new business in sight. The weekly pay roll at the works is said to be over $25,000.

The First Steamboat.

The first successful steamboat was built by a man who kept his eyes on Rumsey and Fitch and Symington, and made the best of what he saw, says a writer in St. Nicholas. As all the world knows, this was Robert Fulton. In August of 1807, Fulton's steamboat, the Clermont, made a trip on the Hudson river from New York to Albany, a distance of 150 miles, in thirty-two hours, and returning in thirtyhours. Fulton advertised for passengers and his boat was soon crowded. "The Clermont," says an English writer, "was the steamboat that commenced and continued to run for practical purposes, and for the remuneration of her owners." Here was the boat that was wanted—one that was financially profitable.

He Was Dull.

"Well?"

"Do you know of any fellow who's tired of being a spinster man?"—Kansas City Journal.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

On her way to a boathouse at the foot of Jackson street, Camden, where she resided, Mary Holden, sixty years old, was killed by a train of the Reading Railroad Sunday night. Coroner Fithian gave a certificate.

Pennsgrove Grange, Patrons of Husbandry, was organized Saturday night with forty-two members. State Master G. W. F. Gaunt, of Mullica Hill, made a stirring address, predicting that this will be the banner year in grange work in this State.

The Robbins Reef Yacht Club of Bayonne has elected the following officers: Frederick Miller, commodore; James Harker, vice-commodore; Harry Thompson, rear-commodore; Amos Harker, measurer; Dr. P. F. Stevens, fleet surgeon; "Bert" Guerin and C. D. Stalling, secretaries; Louis Raichlen, treasurer, and J. Beers, Valentine Steinmetz and Louis Raichlen, trustees.

Impressive services Sunday marked the dedication of the new First Methodist Episcopal church, Riverside, which was opened for worship at an early hour. Rev. Dr. Alfred Wagg, presiding elder of the Trenton district, preached in the morning, and Rev. Dr. Frank Moore, president of Pennington Seminary, preached in the evening. A Sunday-school rally was held in the afternoon.

Held as in a vise while a train approached him, Samuel Cox, thirty-five years old, of 1232 Locust street, Camden, would have met a horrible death in the Pennsylvania freight yard yesterday had not fellow-employes freed him. Cox, a brakeman, was walking about the yard when his foot slipped into the switch. After being rescued it was found that the sharp point of the iron key of the switch had pierced his foot. He was taken to Cooper Hospital.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

In "The Shadow Behind the Throne," which comes to the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow afternoon and night, Alice Ramsay and Rudolph De Cordova have collaborated in the production of a new play, which has proved a very acceptable and notable innovation in melodramatic production. It does not involve the assumption that any old thing is good enough for the general public, that the worse a thing may be the better it will please them, and that dramatic chaos let loose, with oceans of "b-lud" and red fire to stain and scorch it, is just what they are always howling for. The authors have more respect for and confidence in the intelligence of the people and results have proved its correctness. They tell a highly exciting and romantic story and in a consistent and culminating credible and sensational plot, the atmosphere of which is saturated with individuality and both the bewitching and heroic incarnation of the greatest of the human passions, contrasted with the despotic and fanatical wiles of Oriental despotism and the slavish craft and cruelty of its dependents. The picturesque and mysterious scene of the play is laid in ancient Pekin, with superbly grotesque and realistic reproductions of its unique structures and pleasure grounds. A notably competent company vitalizes the cast and a lot of sunshine is mingled with the many sobs, shudders and surprises.

Lincoln J. Carter's latest and best masterpiece, "Too Proud to Beg," will appear at the New Plainfield theatre Friday night. The story is one of interest and intense excitement; in brief, telling of the pit falls and snares a young wife is thrown into by a unscrupulous official of the city who uses his office to shield himself and trap her; of the young ambitious husband who is made a tool by the villain, his superior officer in the police department, and who separates and breaks up the happy family; of the two children who are stolen and brutally treated by the villain's gang of hoodlums; and finally the meeting of the happy family and the expose of the criminals. The play's merit is in the strong story itself and doesn't rely upon any exciting scenic effects to help it to the climax. A strong cast is with the attraction and several specialties are given during the performance.

If it be true that "everybody loves a horse," and "All the world loves a lover," then the ultra-sensational conditions under which Theodore Kremer introduces the horse in his new far Western melodrama, "A Race For Life," and the heart-stirring and magnetic manner in which he portrays love and its trials and endearments, will make his latest play even more popular and successful than its many predecessors, which is all that either box office or public can reasonably require. The P. H. Sullivan Amusement Company, who will present the play at the New Plainfield theatre next Saturday afternoon and night, have set, staged and cast it with that liberal and intelligent regard for general effect and realistic detail always so conspicuous in their many productions. The scene of the play is laid in that romantic California coast region buttressed by the lofty and picturesque Sierra Nevada range, and the culminating interest and excitement of the plot centers in the event from which its title is derived.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

The brief dispatch the other day from London to the effect that four of the leading golf professionals of Europe would not compete in the open championship tournament of the United States, to be held next August at Myopia, has interested the devotees of the game on this side of the water. It does not seem to be quite clear who invited the foreigners in the first place.

According to a Boston authority, Arnaud Massy, the Frenchman, present open champion of Great Britain; James Braid, title holder in 1905 and 1906; Harry Vardon, winner in 1895, 1898, 1899 and 1903, and J. H. Taylor, champion in 1894, 1895 and 1900, the quartet named in connection with the proposed visit, have received no invitation from the Myopia Hunt Club people. The "big four," however, would undoubtedly be given a royal reception, and were these experts to come here they would surely be made favorites over the entire field of resident professionals.

The open championhip of Great Britain will be held at Prestwick, Scotland, next June, so that the foreigners would have plenty of time to visit this country fully a month in advance of the Myopia week, if they so desired. The United States open title becomes an honor more difficult to obtain each year. At Hamilton the best players have the best chance, for no course in the country assures a fairer result in the open competition.

While a team of visiting "pros" would not have to hunt for engagements here, their task would be light as compared with the one mapped out for Vardon when he was in this country in 1900. The latter was kept on the run from course to course, up and down and across the country. A certain number of matches would have to be guaranteed so that they might not suffer monetary loss by leaving home at a time when they could play for purses there.

Interest in professional golf increased to a marked degree in various sections of this country last season. Open tournaments and four ball contests attracted large galleries. These crowds of recent seasons are far different from the throngs that watched Vardon eight years ago. Then any put under ten or twelve feet the wizard failed to hole was looked upon as a weakness on his part. That stage has passed and in its place has come a keen and critical appreciation of the master strokes.

Possibly a visit from the foremost foreign professionals would be especially opportune at this time for the reason that the resident "pros" are showing an inclination to boycott Myopia because of alleged shabby treatment during the open championship of 1905. With Massey, Braid, Vardon and Taylor here, the chances are that the Alecs, Jacks and Willies would forget their grievances in a desire to present the strongest kind of front and prove, if possible, that all the professional golf skill and finesse are not confined to Great Britain and the Continent.

It is now said that an effort is to be made to find out just what sort of guarantee would be necessary in order to tempt the foreigners from their native heath.

BASEBALL.

This is what Manager McAleer of the St. Louis Browns has to say about the recent purchase of Pitcher Rube Waddell, the most talked about ball player in the business just now: "We bought Waddell at Connie Mack's price because I believe he will win 60 per cent. of his games for us this year. I had a chance to get him in a trade, but declined Mack's proposition and came back with a counter offer to pay a reasonable sum of money for him. His release is not the result of his decline as a pitcher. Mack expects Rube to work as often and as well for the Browns as he did for the Athletics, but some of the pitcher's team mates in Philadelphia had a grievance against him, and as Mack did not care for trouble he had to let Waddell go.

"I do not expect to reform Rube, but I have always had his friendship and I shall be disappointed if he does not render loyal service. I see that many are figuring how I will handle him. I have never played favorites and I am not going to start that system this year. I want a winning team and I demand honest efforts. Waddell is a baseball enthusiast and when he is right he'll pitch winning ball. If he does the square thing by me he'll never have a kick coming. I wanted him enough to pay good money for him and I hope that he will start right with his new club." As Waddell has made trouble for every manager with whom he has played the opinion prevails that McAleer will have to resort to hypnotism or some other magic power to keep the erratic pitcher under his thumb.

With Clark Griffith and several of his star players already at Hot Springs there is widespread interest in the probable showing of the New York Americans this year. Frank J. Farrell, the owner of the club, like many fans, is particularly enthusiastic. "I am well pleased with the outlook," said Farrell yesterday. "We have made several advantageous deals, but if a chance to secure high class players before or during the championship season presents itself I will take advantage of it. I note with satisfaction that our patrons are enthusiastic over our new players and give our team a high rating in the coming American League race. We have done all in our power to get together a winning combination and can only await results. Manager Griffith has been untiring in his efforts to strengthen weak spots and is confident that he has succeeded."

May Send Out Bridge Committee.

Bayonne, Feb. 18.—Representative Charles N. Fowler, of Union county, is to be asked by the Bayonne Civic Club to use his influence for the passage of the bill introduced in Congress by Representative Eugene W. Leake, of Jersey City, providing for the erection of a bridge across Newark Bay, between this city and Elizabeth. The Civic Club will probably send a committee to Washington to urge Congress to act favorably upon the measure. It is expected also that the Bayonne Board of Orange will also send a committee to Washington.

Plainfield, N. J., February 18, 1908.

CONTRACT IS REJECTED

thing. I don't know whether I want to be Mayor. If a man should tell me tonight that I would be shot on my way home if I signed a contract which I believed to be right, I would sign the contract. I don't know what the Common Council is going to do about the contract. I have purposely refrained from asking the members, but I want them to listen to every word of argument and not to act hastily. I will ask the corporation counsel to explain the law points in the contract. We have no axes to grind and we want the best results. Senator Silzer once said that the salary of a Mayor is abuse, but I do not agree with him. I believe it to be the good will of taxpayers and citizens such I feel that I enjoy. When the time comes that I fell that I can be of no further use I will step down and out and I won't wait for election day, either."

In reply to Mayor Fisk's suggestion that he explain the legal phraseology of the contract, Corporation Counsel Marsh said that he would try to answer any questions as the legal adviser of the Mayor and Common Council, but he declined to address the assemblage or enter into the discussion.

Mr. Depew's Argument.

When the hearing was thrown open to the public, R. Henry Depew, president of the Plainfield Protective Association, was the first person to respond to the invitation. "I came here to talk light contract," said Mr. Depew, "and not personalities. The Mayor suggested at the time the hearing was appointed that remarks be confined to the contract and I am not going to answer personal remarks. Neither I nor any other member of the P. P. A. have any apologies to make for the association. It is comprised of a body of citizens organized to take up questions for the public good. There is no intention of criticizing the city officials. We have made a careful study of the light question during the past two years, and while it is difficult to learn very much about it, we have gained some knowledge which we think may be of benefit to the Mayor and Common Council. It is in this spirit that we take the matter up.

Not Attacking Corporations.

"The Public Service Corporation has engaged trained engineers and lawyers to look after its interests and they are going to do it and I don't think that too much light can be shed on this question. We are not ill-tempered, neither have we any feeling against the P. S. C. The company has treated us courteously and have given us a reduction in the price of light, whether it is due to the efforts of the association or not.

"As to the contract. We seek better light, lower rates, greater safety in the maintenance of wires, etc. If we are going to pay for 25 candle-power light, let us have that and not 20 candle-power. Regarding the frequency of changing lamps. In Mayor Townsend's town the company changes them seven-times a year and yet when we suggest six times it is thought unreasonable.

"Under the provisions of the contract of 1890, of which the Mayor speaks, the price for 25 candle-power lamps was $14.60 within a certain district and $17 outside of that territory. Now $15 is proposed as the price to be charged and under the new contract there is a reduction of 16 2-3 per cent. in candle-power and a loss to the city of about $1,920. The company proposes to cut off two hours of lighting. Why not have a corresponding reduction in price for this. Under the terms of the old contract there was evidently two systems for charging. My bill with the company rendered January 3, 1898, shows a graduated scale of charges tions, yet it is left to the company to do this 'whenever practical.' If we are going to have a contract let us have a good one, one that will be equal and fair to both the city and company. We are told that the company won't spend any money unless they get a contract. They certainly can trust us as we trust them. It is inexcusable to wait three years for the removal of the wires carrying 13,000 voltage. Now most of the wires carry 2,300 volts and yet the contract proposes to give the company the privilege of stringing wires of 5,000 volts and provides that the wires shall be placed underground. The electrical engineer engaged by the city advises the aerial stringing of the wire of 13,000 voltage under improved construction. It seems to me it would be wise to follow the engineer's advice. For if anything should happen by placing the wires underground, the city might be liable. I do not believe the city's best interest will be conserved by a contract that requires the people to pay for only fifty or sixty per cent. of what they should receive."

Mr. McCready's Objections.

"Unfortunately, I am not a member of the P. P. A.," said R. H. McCready, the next speaker, "but I do belong to this class that likes to kick once in awhile. The contract strikes me as being made up of limitations wherein the Public Service Corporation is to suffer for what they do not do. I have confidence in the Mayor and Common Council. We are not obliged to have a contract to remove wires that may be a menace to life and property. An axe is a good instrument. Not many months ago I was called from my home because of the death of a neighbor who had come in contact with a wire of 2,000 volts. As to the required candle-power. If the P. S. C. agrees to furnish 25 candle-power and there is any question about it, let the power be made 30 and the city would be sure to get what it pays for. I agree with the Mayor regarding the price of 12 cents per kilo-watt. Strikes and other labor conditions is quite apt to increase the cost of production and the company is entitled to that lee-way. As to the clause compelling the company to change wiring, that seems to be in the previous contracts. The whole question seems to be a question of what the company agrees to pay for not doing certain things, and suggested that the contract be headed, 'An act to limit the liabilities of the Public Service Corporation and protect them from their sins.'"

At this point Mr. Marsh stated in reply to questions, that he was not present to address the gathering, but that he would be perfectly willing to answer questions.

Others Opposing It.

G. W. V. Moy objected to the leeway permitted in the percentage of candle-power and he wanted to know whether it would be an advantage to the city or not to clip off two hours of lighting at a reduction of fifty cents a lamp. This question remained unanswered. Then David E. Titsworth arose to a question of privilege. He stated that if the corporation counsel was not present to represent the city, but the Mayor and Council, he would like to ask him through Councilman Frank Randolph whether it was true as stated that the city has no right to compel the removal of high tension wires and the company has the right to string wires at will.

In reply, Mr. Marsh explained that the affairs of the city are conducted as a business corporation, and its interests are to be guarded by what might be called a board of directors. It was his duty to advise this board whenever necessary. He had always declined to engage in public debates for this reason. He expressed his willingness to answer Mr. Titsworth's question put to him by Councilman Randolph.

Corporation Counsel Explains.

It was then stated by Mr. Marsh that the act under which the Public Service Corporation was given the right to string wires, etc., was passed in 1896, and that act provided that the city should designate the streets and the place where the poles should be erected. Legislative enactments then gave the company further privileges. When I first drew the ordinance under which the company operates, a clause was inserted giving exercise of certain privileges, all to be governed by the ordinance in question and other ordinances. Under these provisions the city may go on and describe conditions, as I advised Councilmen Mygatt and Tyler. The city may prescribe reasonable provisions. As to high potential wires the Legislature said 'you can string these wires' but it did not name the voltage. One member of this body wanted to take an axe to remove the poles and wires, but I advised against it. If these high potential wires are a menace, the city has redress. It can go before the Grand Jury and have the company indicted, or a bill can be filed with the Attorney-General and obtain a mandamus.

Overhead Wires.

"The doctors of electricity cannot seem to agree as to the danger from the overhead stringing of such wires. We tried to get evidence proving them to be dangerous, but could not. One may measure voltage at will without the consent of the company. As to the question of paying for 25 candle-power lamps, when possibly only 20 is furnished, I would say that we could not get the company to agree to always maintain the 25 candle-power. It was declared to be an impossibility. In the original contract of 1898, the city paid for 25 candle-power lamps with the agreement that the voltage was not to go below 80 per cent. of the maximum. The Mayor tried to obtain lamps for $10, but discovered that it required two to make a bargain.

At the request of Mr. Buxton, Mr. Marsh explained the last paragraph in the proposed contract which relates to forfeiture of rights under failure to keep lamps burning. Mr. Marsh explained that he drafted that paragraph as a substitute for one offered by Mr. Gilmour, of the company. He did not propose to let the company off with a simple fine for the failure to perform its contract, but made a provision that would give the city the right to go to the courts and compel the company to live up to its contract. Both the city and company would have the right to all remedies, still a breach could not abruptly terminate the contract.

Lighting Hours.

"I was a member of the committee, with Former President Leslie M. Daniel, than whom there is no abler man, the object of which was to make the best contract we could. It was not our suggestion to waive the two hours regarding the lighting of street lamps, but I think that a similar ordinance applies to the lighting of lamps on bicycles and autos, although I am not positive about the latter. The company said that if the city insisted on having a 25 candle power lamp maintained throughout the night, it would agree to furnish it at a cost of $25 per lamp."

Speaking on the subject, David E. Titsworth said that if the city could get as good light as that furnished by the corporation counsel it would be all right. He added that he was a member of the executive committee of the P. P. A., an organization not composed of dictators, but open to argument. He objected to the contract as a citizen, a taxpayer, as a member of the P. P. A. and a representative of a local industry.

"Whenever Practical" Again.

"I am glad that tonight we don't have to write the word 'Ichabod, Thy Glory Has Departed,' on the wall. We can go on as at present. Some other company may come here and do what we want. The possible passage of a public utilities bill may be of benefit to us. Although it is stated that it will cost the company so much money to place and keep its wires in good condition, it should do so. At a recent meeting of the P. P. A., a recognized representative of the P. S. C. appeared and stated that within thirty days all of its wires in the city would be in first-class condition and that a new boiler was being installed in the local light plant that would furnish power for electric lighting here independent of Metuchen. Mr. Titsworth believes that a spirit of reciprocity should be shown in the making of a contract, suggesting that the $15 per lamp be paid 'whenever practical.'" This be paid 'whenever practical.'" This caused a hearty outburst of laughter.

F. E. Kinsman, who had not talked to any considerable extent during the evening, wanted to know if the present high tension wires were put in under any existing ordinances. He understood that they had been strung without full and complete knowledge. Personally, he had heard nothing about the wires until they were in position. He explained that there was a difference in high and low tension wires. In reply Mr. Marsh stated that the wires were strung under the act of 1896, after the city had designated the six streets.

Old Contract Good.

In reply to a question from Councilman Hall as to forfeiture of a franchise through merger, Mr. Marsh said that the present company is bound by all the provisions incorporated in the contracts held by previous companies.

Again Mr. Depew was given the privilege of the floor and referring to Mr. Marsh's suggestion about bicycle lamps being lighted one hour before sunrise and one hour before sunset did not in his opinion apply to the light contract.

This closed the hearing and immediately Mr. Montgomery, chairman of the light committee, moved that the Council go into executive session. On the roll call, called for by Mr. Suydam, the motion was lost by a vote of six to four, Councilmen Buxton, Gloak, Frank Randolph and Montgomery voting in the affirmative and Councilmen Hall, Hibbard, Mygatt, Charles C. Randolph, Suydam and Tyler in the negative.

After the regular order of business was returned to Mr. Mygatt introduced a resolution, providing that the committee having charge of the proposed light contract be discharged and that the contract be rejected.

Councilman Frank Randolph replying to the resolution said that many representative citizens had been heard, the hour was growing late, and he moved that the contract be laid on the table. This motion was lost by a vote of six to four, Councilmen Hall, Hibbard, Mygatt, Chas. C. Randolph, Suydam and Tyler voting in the negative and Councilmen Buxton, Gloak, Montgomery and Frank Randolph in the affirmative.

Reject the Contract.

Then the vote was called for on the resolution offered by Mr. Mygatt and it was passed by a vote of six to four, Councilmen Hall, Hibbard, Mygatt, Charles C. Randolph, Suydam and Tyler voting in favor of it and Councilmen Buxton, Gloak, Montgomery and Frank Randolph against. The result seemed to please a majority of those in the lobby, who quickly left the room, satisfied that at least something had been accomplished. There was evident disappointment on the part of those who favored the contract and those who have spent a great deal of time and labor in drafting the agreement.

SENATORS RESCUE BOY.

Unlace His Shoes Caught By Rail Before Train Reaches Him.

Harry, the 12-year-old son of former Senator Robert H. Williams, of Paterson, was saved from death yesterday morning by the quick action of his father and Senator John Hinchliffe at the Market street depot in that city.

The boy, while running across the tracks, got both shoes caught between a rail and the wooden guard. His plight was seen by his father and Mr. Hinchliffe just as a train hove in sight, and each unlaced a shoe, pulled the boy away and rescued the shoes just as the train pulled in.

TO REDUCE SCHOOL TAX.

Avis Puts In Bill In Line of Stokes' Suggestion.

In the Senate at Trenton last night Senator Avis introduced a bill to amend the school law so as to provide an annual appropriation of not less than $100,000 from the treasury and a one-mill tax on all the real and personal property as shown by the last return of tax ratables.

It reduces the State school tax from 2¾ to 1 mill, all that is now considered necessary on account of the increased revenue from main stem railroad tax.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Plans are being made by the members of the Holy Name Society of St. John's church to hold a smoker in the near future, and the date will probably be announced this week. The committee appointed at the last meeting to take charge of the affair consists of E. Robert Wood, Jacob Fern and Terrance Ronayne.

The new gas stove for the Methodist church has been installed and everything is ready for the Washington's Birthday dinner to be served at the parish house on Saturday. The tickets for the dinner are being disposed of rapidly, and many Dunellenites will come to the meal and bring their families.

The trial of Charles Robinson, the young colored man haled before the grand jury for abuses to boys, will be held at Somerville tomorrow. W. S. Angleman, of Plainfield, has been retained as Robinson's counsel, and about a score of local witnesses have been subpoenaed in the case.

Antony Ratti has purchased the business of Paul Ratti on North avenue, and Mr. and Mrs. Ratti and family have returned to Italy, where they will spend at least a year at their old home.

Miss Ethel Garretso has returned after spending the week-end as the guest of Miss Edna Vreeland, of Bayonne.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

On complaint of Isaac Terhune, president of the Clark and Fanwood Townships Game Association, John Peterson, of Westfield, was haled before Recorder Joseph Clark yesterday, charged with unlawful hunting with a gun and trespassing on private grounds. The evidence presented convinced the court of Peterson's guilt and a fine of $10 or 10 days was imposed. The fine was paid.

Excelsior Mook and Ladder Company held its monthly meeting in the company's rooms, last night. Beside the regular routine business the fair committee reported on the arrangements and details of the two days' fair which opens Friday night in the hall.

The B. Y. P. U. of the Baptist church will hold an important business meeting in the church parlors tonight at 8 o'clock. At the close of the business session a social hour will be enjoyed.

Summons has been issued in Justice Clark's court in the landlord-tenant case of Hockey vs. Roniberg. Summons is returnable Friday, February 21.

George Adair, a former resident here, but now of Stelton, has been spending a few days with relatives and friends in town.

Miss Sadie Lee has returned from a visit with her brother, Frankie Lee, who is a student at the Madison (N. J.) school.

Mrs. John Rogers, who has been visiting her father, Alvah Ryno, has returned to her home in Brooklyn.

Thomas Dobbins, of Newark, has been visiting his mother, Mrs. Robert Walpole, of Front street.

KREBS AND TOWNSEND RIVAL BOWLING CAPTAINS.

Accepting the challenge of the "Myrtle Avenues," a bowling team captained by Mayor Samuel Townsend, of North Plainfield, the "All Americans," another team organized from the members of the Park Club, will meet the Mayor's ten on the club alleys tonight to decide the "championship of the borough" in candlepins.

County Supervisor Henry C. Krebs, of the North Plainfield High School, is captain of the "All Americans." In the aggregation will be Hugh F. Fox, Townsend Rushmore, F. H. Ball, Rollin Rice, William Barlow, Jr., Monroe H. Long, T. C. Overton, W. S. Maxwell and Charles L. Nichols.

J. C. Peck and Alston Abbott, who bowled with the "Myrtle Avenues" in the recent match with the "Washington Avenues," will be unable to bowl tonight. Their places will be taken by Charles A. Reed and Herbert Rogers. The rest of the team will be as in the last match.

Park Golf Club House Entered.

The Park Golf Club house was broken into some time within the past few days, and although considerable damage was done in forcing an entrance, nothing of value was stolen. The matter was reported to Chief Marshal Weiss, but no trace has been found of the house-breakers, who are believed to have been small boys. The kitchen of the club house was in a state of great disorder, and it is believed that the would-be robbers have been making it their home for several days.

Dunn Divorce Case.

During the final argument in the divorce proceedings of Mrs. Olive B. Dunn against Wesley J. Dunn, before Vice Chancellor Emery at Newark, yesterday, there was a sudden halt for the purpose of recalling one of the witnesses. It was finally decided that counsel should submit briefs and the vice chancellor announced that he would reserve his decision in the case until after this was done.

PERKINS ACT LESSENS BOROUGH SCHOOL BUDGET

The North Plainfield school budget, as prepared by the various committees and approved by the Borough Board of Education as a whole at a special meeting, last night, in the Somerset School, will total to $14,200, half the amount asked for by the board last year. The figures in detail are: Current expenses, $11,500; manual training department, $1,700; and repairs, $1,000. This totals to $14,200 against last year's appropriation of $24,500, distributed as follows: Current expenses, $21,500; manual training department, $1,900, and repairs, $1,500.

The cut in the budget of the school board for the coming year is due entirely to the Perkins' railway taxation act, from which the borough of North Plainfield receives $7,200 this year. Because of legislation now in course of progress to reduce the railroad taxes next year, it is probable that there will be a reduction in the apportionment. The board is figuring on a total of $14,000 from this source, allowing the share for next year to be $6,800 instead of the $7,200 received this year.

Speaking of the advantages accruing the schools and the tax payers by the passage of the Perkins' law, Tax Assessor J. H. Cooley, a member of the Board of Education, said last night that he was confident that the school tax on next year's budget would amount to but forty-six cents, as compared with the 1.02 rate of last year.

All the members of the board were present at last night's meeting except Nelson A. Miller, who is in Chicago. The various committees went over all the items of expense for the past year and prepared their budget, which was afterwards approved of by the board as a whole.

Securing a special rate from the Plainfield Public Library for North Plainfield school teachers and pupils of the high school, the board decided last night, upon recommendation of Superintendent James R. Joy, to pay to the library $140 a year, so that teachers and pupils might have the privilege of drawing books. There are about 140 pupils at present in the high school, and this means that the rate is half what is regularly charged. The Board of Education will be responsible for the care and return of all books drawn, and a list of those who can claim the circulation privilege will be sent to the library at once, after certification by the board and Supervising Principal Henry C. Krebs.

Dinner for Hartley Mellick.

Covers were laid for eighteen. Mr. Mellick received the congratulattions of the guests and following the dinner dancing was enjoyed.

Y. M. C. A. Lose League Game.

WHEN SOUSA LEADS.

Meeting the Demands of the Average American Taste.

It will please the millions to whom he has given pleasure, directly or indirectly, to learn that John Philip Sousa is recovering from his recent severe illness.

In all our history, strange to say, music-loving people as we are, and generous patrons of music though we be, only two bandmasters have attained to national distinction and popularity in this country. One of them, says the Chicago Inter-Ocean, was Patrick Gilmore, the other is John Philip Sousa; and it is worthy of attention that both won not only their national distinction and popularity, but whatever international celebrity they might claim, mainly by striking the patriotic note and sounding deep and well.

Just as the strains of Gilmore's Band gave a firmer tread to the American citizen in times of war, so have the strains of Sousa's Band given to the American citizen a deeper sense of pride of country in times of peace. No American who has listened to "The Stars and Srtipes Forever," whether performed by the matchless band and under the matchless leadership of its composer or upon a street organ, but has felt the impulse to cheer for the flag and for everything that this emblem of our national liberty stands for.

John Philip Sousa is not only the greatest bandmaster but the greatest march composer of his day. It does not follow, of course, that he is the greatest musician, but it does follow that he is one who has come nearer than any other living composer to meeting the demands of the average American taste and satisfying the longings of the average American heart.

Light and airy, perhaps, is "El Capitan," or the "High School Cadets," or "King Cotton," or "Manhattan Beach," or "Semper Fidelis," but they will not be forever associated in our minds with the "Liberty Bell," with the "Washington Post," and with "The Stars and Stripes Forever," and, furthermore, they cannot be separated in Chicago memories from glorious summer days on the Court of Honor, or glorious summer afternoons by the murmuring sea, or glorious evenings on the mountains, or nights, though wintry without, more glorious still by the firesides, when the piano has run over them all once more, and caused us to think pleasantly again of John Philip Sousa, and to recall him as he looked, say, in the halcyon days of '93, when the plaza was filled with people from every clime under the sun, and all were charmed to see him lead the band.

Chilly London.

"Everything that shouldn't be warm in England is warm," says Samuel G. Blythe, in "An American in London," in Everybody's Magazine, "and everything that should be warm is cold. The houses are catacombs, always excepting those few hotels in London where they have steam heat, which is, of course, due to the advance of American civilization. Englishmen say they do not feel the cold. Everybody else feels it, for it is the meanest cold in the world. Extended observation leads to the conclusion that the reason the English do not feel the cold is that they are desensitized, sort of refrigerator-beefed, so to speak.

"This is not the main point. The reason the English shiver around in cold, damp rooms, trying to make themselves believe a few hunks of connel coal in a grate furnish all the heat required by the most delicate, is that somebody, in ancient days, who couldn't get anything to warm himself by, did the next best thing and declared he didn't feel the cold and didn't need a fire anyhow. Other Englishmen heard of it, and this idea has been a fetish ever since."

A Short Cut to Boston.

William Barclay Parsons, chief engineer of the Boston, New York and Cape Cod Canal Company, says the waterway will be open to traffic in 1910, or before. Thus comes the end of a struggle etending through three centuries, the success of a plan three times defeated by war, and once by the assassination of a President of the United States.

While marine interests of New York, New England, and elsewhere watch the development of the project with keen interest, Cape Cod is fairly shaken to its centre by the promised culmination of the task first suggested in 1630. Sandwich, the northern terminus of the canal, may be said to have been born and brought up with the canal plan. Its founders, who organized the village in 1639, were among the first in their day to look upon the canal with favor. As for the Cape that lies away from the canal, westward, the mention of the idea to almost anyone reveals a disapproval that dates from the seventeenth century.—Appleton's Magazine.

That most useful article of a woman's wardrobe, the hairpin, has been acquiring new elegance. Instead of the ordinary shell or amber two-pronged pin, which long ago supplanted the ancient wire device in well-coiffed heads, the newer hairpin is a trifle so ornamental that it would be a shame not to make it conspicuous among the loose waves and braids of the hair. It is of shell or amber, too, but the head is of gold, set with jewels; and very lovely it looks when used to fasten the loose braids or to fasten the pompadour to the knot of hair.

MEN AND EVENTS.

Two million a month is what 153 railroads claim they are losing on idle cars.

Using swear words has cost four girl clerks in the Denver county clerk's office their positions.

Tunnels under the Hudson river connecting New York and New Jersey will be opened to the public on February 25.

All battleships are to be equipped with a new ammunition turret hoisting arrangement, comprising some 176 turrets.

"England's greatest bore," Algernon Ashton, will quit writing for newspapers, having become weary of being made the butt of paragraphers.

"Shocked to death" was the verdict of the cause of sudden demise of Miss Claudine Abey, of Nyack, N. Y., due to seeing three boy skaters drown in the Hudson.

Bewitching dimple that graced the left cheek of Mrs. W. B. Irons, of New York, was knocked out in a collision on the street railway and she wants the company to pay her $5,000 for her loss.

Non-sectarian religious club has been organized in Chicago with attractive features to offset the Sunday theatres, music halls and saloons in the downtown district as places of Sunday evening resort.

Ice cream is a luxury is the claim advanced by the national ice cream manufacturers before the national pure food conference in Chicago and not a food substitute, and that the 14 per cent. butter fat urged under the law was too high.

"Flunking" by boys in the psychology class of Prof. William Waugh of the University of Chicago is laid by them to the big headgear of the girls cutting off their gaze on the professor. They have petitioned the professor to forbid the girls wearing picture hats in the classroom.

Airship model has been designed by Elura Todd, of New York, which she claims will comply with all the requirements of the signal corps of the army, which recently advertised for bids for the building of such a machine. She estimates that her machine will easily carry two men at the rate of 40 miles an hour.

NATURE'S EGG FORCE.

Exercise on the scratching floor brings eggs.

Straw litter two feet deep for adult fowls, less for young stock, makes a good playground. If moved too easily, run in a few cornstalks and place them around the water vessel to keep away the straw.

Now open the windows; throw in the grain; see the fun. It beats bargain counter cackle, gridiron scrapping or Wall street scrambles and cakewalk stunts. It warms up the Biddies and gives them good digestion in the winter and saves the flock from cholera epidemics in the rainy season of warmer climates. Scratch that down.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

It is nearly time to begin to guess as to what kind of an ex-president Theodore Roosevelt will make.—Birmingham Age-Herald.

This is the time of year for every town represented in the big baseball leagues to feel confident about the future.—Washington Star.

The fattest, if not the fittest, will survive should Taft be the victor in the race for the Republican nomination.—Columbus Enquirer-Sun.

The next president will find but little to engage him in the line of advertising babies, undesirable citizens and Ananias clubs.—Atlanta Journal.

While one swallow does not make a summer, Georgia people are beginning to believe that it would make the winter brighter.—Washington Post.

Half a dozen States were represented. Mrs. Jordan said: "Rooming houses are a poor substitute for home life. Of course there is a great deal said against the sororites and much that it justified. However, under control and in the jurisdiction of the college deans, they offer the best solution of one of the most difficult problems presented in our work."

By KATE AND VIRGIL D. BOYLES

(Copyrighted by A. C. McClurg & Co., 1907.)

CHAPTER IV.
"Maggot."

An hour prior to this little episode Jim Munson had sauntered up to the ticket window only to find that the train from the east was 40 minutes late. He turned away with a little shrug of relief. It was a foreign role he was playing—this assumption of the duties of a knight in dancing attendance on strange ladies. Secretly, he chafed under it; outwardly, he was magnificently indifferent. He had a reputation to sustain, a reputation of having yet to meet that which would lower his proud boast that he was afraid of nothing under the sun, neither man nor devil. But he doubted his ability so to direct the point of view of the Boss or the Scribe or the rest of the boys of the Three Bars ranch, who were on a still hunt for his spot of vulnerability.

The waiting room was hot—unbearably so to a man who practically lived in the open. He strolled outside and down the tracks. He found himself wishing the train had been on time. Had it been so, it—the impending meeting—would now have been a thing of the forgotten past. He must needs fortify himself all over again. But sauntering down the track toward the stockyards he filled his cob pipe, lighted it, and was comforted. He had a 45-minute reprieve.

The boys had tried most valiantly to persuade him to "fix up" for this event. He had scorned them indignantly. If he was good enough as he was—black woolen shirt, red neckerchief and all—for men, just so was he good enough for any female that ever lived. So he assumed a little swagger as he stepped over the ties, and tried to make himself believe that he was glad he had not allowed himself to be corrupted by proffers of blue shirts and white neckerchiefs.

He was approaching the stockyards. There was movement there. Sounds of commands, blows, profane epithets, and worried bawlings changed the placid evening calm into noisy strife. It is always a place interesting to cowmen. Jim relegated thoughts of the coming meeting to the background while he leaned on the fence, and, with idle absorption, watched the loading of cattle into a stock car. A switch engine, steaming and sputtering, stood ready to make way for another car as soon as the present one should be laden. He was not the only spectator. Others were before him. Two men strolled up to the side opposite as he settled down to musing interest.

"Gee!" he swore gently under his breath, "ef that ain't Bill Brown! Yep. It is, for a fac'. Wonder what he's a shippin' now for!" He scrambled lightly over the high fence of the pen.

"Hullo, there, Bill Brown!" he yelled, genially, making his way as one accustomed through the bunch of reluctant, excited cattle.

"Hullo yourself, Jim! What you doin' in town?" responded the man addressed, pausing in his labor to wipe the streaming moisture from his face. He fanned himself vigorously with his drooping hat while he talked.

"Gal huntin'," answered Jim, soberly and despondently.

"Hell!" Brown surveyed him with astonished but sympathetic approbation. "Hell!" he repeated. "You don't mean it, do you, Jim, honest? Come, now, honest? So you've come to it, at last, have you? Well, well! What's comin' over the Three Bars? What'll the boys say?"

He came nearer and lowered his voice to a confidential tone. "Say, Jim, how did it come about? And who's the lady? Lord, Jim, you of all people!" He laughed uproariously.

"Aw, come off!" growled Jim, in petulant scorn. "You make me tired! You're plumb luney, that's what you are. I'm after the new gal reporter. She's due on that low-down, ornery train. Wish—it—was in kingdom come. Yep, I do, for a fac'."

"Oh, well, never mind! I didn't mean anything," laughed Brown, good-naturedly. "But it does beat the band, Jim, now doesn't it, how you people scare at petticoats. They ain't pizen—honest."

Jim looked on idly. Occasionally he condescended to head a rebellious steer shutewards. Out beyond it was still and sweet and peaceful, and the late afternoon had put on that thin veil of coolness which is a God-given refreshment after the heat of the day. But here in the pen all was confusion. The raucous cattle-calls of the cowboys smote the evening air startlingly.

"Here, Bill Brown!" he exclaimed suddenly, "where did you run across that critter?" He slapped the shoulder of a big, raw-boned, long-eared steer as he spoke. The animal was on the point of being driven up the shute.

"What you want to know for? asked Brown in surprise.

"Reason 'nough. That critter belongs to us, that's why; and I want to know where you got him, that's what I want to know."

"You're crazy, Jim! Why, I bought that fellow from Jesse Black t' other day. I've got a bill of sale for him. I'm shippin' a couple of cars to Sioux City and bought him to send along. That's on the square."

"I don't doubt it—s' far as you're concerned, Bill Brown," said Jim, "but that's our critter jest the same, and I'll jest tote 'im along 'f you've no objections."

"Well, I guess not!" said Brown, laconically.

"Look here, Bill Brown," Jim was getting hot headedly angry, "didn't you know Jesse Black stands trial tomorrow for rustlin' that there very critter from the Three Bars ranch?"

"No, I didn't" Brown answered shortly. "Any case?"

"I guess yes! Williston o' the Lazy S saw this very critter on that island where Jesse Black holds out." He proceeded to relate minutely the story to which Williston was going to swear on the morrow. "But," he concluded, "Jesse's goin' to fight like hell against bein' bound over."

"Well, well," said Brown, perplexedly. "But the brand, Jim, it's not yours or Jesse's either."

"'Quainted with any J R ranch in these parts?" queried Jim, shrewdly. "I ain't."

"Well, neither am I," confessed Brown, "but that's not sayin' there ain't one somewhere. Maybe we can trace it back."

"Shucks!" exploded Jim.

"Maybe you're right, Jim, but I don't propose to lose the price o' that animal less'n I have to. You can't blame me for that. I paid good money for it. If it's your'n, why, of course, it's your'n. But I want to be sure first. Sure you'd know him, Jim? How could you be so blamed sure? Your boss must range 5,000 head."

"Know him? Know Mag? I'd know Mag ef my eyes were full o' soundin' cataracts. He's an old and tried friend o' mine. The meanest critter the Lord ever let live and that's a fac'. But the boss calls 'im his maggot. Seems to actually churish a kind o' 'fection for the ornery critter, and says the luck o' the Three Bars would sort o' peak and pine ef he should ever git rid o' the pesky brute. Maybe he's right. Leastwise, the critter's his, and when a thing's yours, why, it's yours and that's all there is about it. By crack, the boss is some mad! You'd think him and that wall-eyed, cross-grained son-of-a-gun had been kind and lovin' mates these many years. Well, I ain't met up with this ornery critter for some time. Hullo, there, Mag! Look kind o' sneakin', now, don't you, wearin' that outlandish and unbeknownst J R?"

Bill Brown thoughtfully surveyed the steer whose ownership was thus so unexpectedly disputed.

"You hold him," insisted Jim. "Ef he ain't ours, you can send him along with your next shipment, can't you? What you wobblin' about? Ain't afraid the boss 'll claim what ain't his, are you, Bill Brown?"

"Well, I can't he'p myself, I guess," said Brown, in a tone of voice which told plainly of his laudable effort to keep his annoyance in subjection to his good fellowship. "You send Langford down here first thing in the morning. If he says the critter's his'n that ends it."

Now that he had convinced his quondam acquaintance, the present shipper, to his entire satisfaction, Jim glanced at his watch with ostentatious ease. His time had come. If all the minutes of all the time to come should be as short as those 40 had been, how soon he, Jim Munson, cow puncher, would have ridden them all into the past. But his "get away" must be clean and dignified.

"Likely bunch you have there," he said, casually; turning away with unassumed reluctance.

"Fair to middlin'," said Brown with pride.

"Shippin' to Sioux City, you said?"

"Yep."

"Well, so long."

"So long. Shippin' any these days, Jim?"

"Nope. Boss never dribbles 'em out. When he ships he ships. Ain't none gone over the rails since last fall."

He stepped off briskly and vaulted the fence with as lightsome an air as though he were bent on the one errand his heart would choose, and swung up the track carelessly humming a tune. But he had a vise-like grip on his cob pipe. His teeth bit through the frail stem. It split. He tossed the remains away with a gesture of nervous contempt. A whistle sounded. He quickened his pace. If he missed her—well, the boss was a good fellow, took a lot of nonsense from the boys, but there were things he would not stand for. Jim did not need to be told that this would be one of them.

The platform was crowded. The yellow sunlight fell slantingly on the gay groups.

"Aw, Munson, you're bluffin', jested the mail carrier. "You ain't lookin' fer nobody; you know you ain't. You ain't got no folks. Don't believe you ever had none. Never heard of 'em."

"Lookin' for my uncle," explained Jim, serenely. "Rich old codger from the state o' Pennsylvaney some'ers. Ain't got nobody but me left."

"Aw, come off! What you givin' us?"

But Jim only winked and slouched off, prime for more adventures. He was enjoying himself hugely—when he was not thinking of petticoats.

CHAPTER V.
At the Bon Ami.

Unlike most of those who ride much her escort was a fast walker. Louise had trouble in keeping up with him, though she had always considered herself a good pedestrian. But Jim Munson was laboring under strange embarrassment. He was red-facedly conscious of the attention he was attracting striding up the inclined street from the station in the van of the prettiest and most thoroughbred girl who had struck Velpen this long time.

Not that he objected to attention under normal conditions. Not he! He courted it. His chief aim in life seemed to be to throw the limelight of publicity, first, on the Three Bars ranch as the one and only in the category of ranches, and to be connected with it in some way, however slight, the unquestioned aim and object of existence of every man, woman and child in the cattle country; secondly, on Paul Langford, the very boss of bosses, whose master mind was the prop and stay of the northwest, if not of all Chirstendom; and lastly, upon himself, the modest, but loyal servitor in this Paradise on earth. But girls were far from normal conditions. There were no women at the Three Bars. There never had been any woman at the Three Bars within the memory of man. To be sure, Williston's little girl had sometimes ridden over on an errand, but she didn't count. This—this was the real thing, and he didn't know just how to deal with it. He needed time to enlarge his sight to this broadened horizon.

He glanced with nonchalance over his shoulder. After all, she was only a girl, and not such a big one, either. She wore longer skirts than Williston's girl, but he didn't believe she was a day older. He squared about immediately, and what he had meant to say he never said, on account of an unaccountable thickening of his tongue.

Presently he bolted into a building, which proved to be the Bon Ami, a restaurant under the direct supervision of the fat, voluble and tragic Mrs. Higgins, where the men from the other side of the river had right of way and unlimited credit.

"What'll you have?" he asked, hospitably, the familiar air of the Bon Ami bringing him back to his accustomed self-confident swagger.

"Might I have some tea and toast, please?" said Louise, sinking into a chair at the nearest table, with two startling yet amusing thoughts rampant in her brain. One was, that she wished Aunt Helen could have seen her swinging along in the wake of this typical "bold and licentious" man, and calmly and comfortably sitting down to a cozy little supper for two at a public eating house; the other startling thought was to the effect that the invitation was redolent with suggestiveness, and she wondered if she was not expected to say, "A whiskey for me, please."

"Guess you kin," answered Jim, wonder in his voice at the exceeding barrenness of the order. "Mrs. Higgins, hello there, Mrs. Higgins! I say, there, bring on some tea and toast for the lady!"

"Where is the Three Bars?" asked Louise, her thoughts straying to the terrors of a 15-mile drive through a strange and uncanny country with a stranger and yet more uncanny man. She had accepted him without question. He was part and parcel with the strangeness of her new position. But the suddenness of the transition from idle conjecture to startling reality had raised her proud head and she looked this new development squarely in the face without outward hint of inward pertubation.

"Say, where was you raised?" asked Jim, with tolerant scorn, between huge mouthfuls of boiled pork and cabbage, interspersed with baked potatoes, hot rolls and soggy dumplings, shoveled in with knife, fork or spoon. He occasionally anticipated dessert by making a sudden sortie into the quarter of an immense custard pie, hastening the end by means of noisy draughts of steaming coffee. Truly, the Three Bars connection had the fat of the land at the Bon Ami.

"Why, it's the Three Bars that's bringin' you here. Didn't you know that? There's nary a man in the hull country with backbone enough to keep off all-fours 'ceptin' Paul Langford. Um. You just try once to walk over the boss, will you? Lord! What a grease spot you'd make!"

"Mr. Gordon isn't being walked over, is he?" asked Louise, finished with her tea and toast and impatient to be off.

"Oh, Gordon? Pretty decent sort o' chap. Right idees. Don't know much about handlin' hoss thieves and sich. Ain't smooth enough. Acted kind o' like a chicken with its head cut off till the boss got into the round-up."

"Oh!" said Louise, whose conception of the young counsel for the state did not tally with this delineation.

"Yep. Miss, this here's the boss's doin's. Yep. Lord! What if that gang look like when we are through with 'em. Spendin' the rest o' their days down there in Soux Falls, meditatin' on the advisability o' walkin' clear o' the toes o' the Three Bars in the future and cussin' their stupendified stupidity in foolin' even once with the Three Bars. Yep, sir—yep, ma'am, I mean—Jesse Black and his gang have acted just like pesky, little plum-fool moskeeters, and we're goin' to slap 'em. The cheek of 'em, lightin' on the Three Bars! Lord!"

"Mr. Williston informed, did he not?"

"Williston? Oh, yes, he informed, but he'd never 'a' done it if it hadn't 'a' been for the boss. The ol' jellyfish wouldn't 'a' had the nerve to inform without backin', as sure as a stone wall. The boss is a doin' this, I tell you, Miss. But Williston 's a goin' on the stand to-morrer all right, and so am I."

The two cowboys at the corner table had long since finished their supper. They now lighted bad-smelling cigars and left the room. To Louise's great relief Munson rose, too. He was back very soon with a neat little runabout and a high-spirited team of bays.

"Boss's private," explained Jim with pride. "Nothin' too good for a lady, so the boss sent this and me to take keer o' it. And o' you, too, Miss," he added, as an afterthought.

He held the lines in his brown, muscular hands, lovingly, while he stowed away Louise's belongings and himself

"Where Is the Three Bars?"

snugly in the seat, and then the blood burned hot and stinging through his bronzed, tough skin, for suddenly in his big, honest, untrained sensibilities was born the consciousness that the boss would have stowed away the lady first. It was an embarrassing moment. Louise saved the day by climbing in unconcernedly after him and tucking the linen robe over her skirt.

"It will be a dusty drive, won't it?" she asked, simply.

"Miss, you're a—dandy," said Jim as simply.

As they dove upon the pontoon bridge, Louise looked back at the little town on the bluffs and felt a momentary choking in her throat. It was a strange place, yet it had tendrils reaching homeward. The trail beyond was obscurely marked and not easy to discern. She turned to her companion and asked quickly: "Why didn't Mary come?"

"Great guns! Did I forgit to tell you? Williston's got the stomach-ache to beat the band and Mary's got to physic him up 'gin to-morrer. We've got to git him on that stand if it takes the hull Three Bars to bol' him up and the gal a pourin' physic down him between times. Yep, Ma'am. He was pizened. You see, everybody that ate any meat last night was took sick with gripin' cramps, yep; but Williston he was worse'n all, he bein' a hearty eater. He was a stayin' in town over night on this preliminary business, and Dick Gordon he was took, too, but not so bad, bein' what you might call a light eater. The boss and me we drove home after all, though we'd expected to stay for supper. The pesky coyotes got fooled that time. Yep, ma'am, no doubt about it in the world. Friends o' Jesse's that we ain't able to lay hands on yit pizened that there meat. Yep, no doubt about it. Dick was in an awful sweat about you. Was bound he was a comin' after you hisself, sick as he was, when we found Mary was off the count. So then the boss was a comin' and they fit and squabbled for an hour who could be best spared, when I, comin' in, settled it in a jiffy by offerin' my services, which was gladly accepted. When there's pizenin' goin' on, why, the boss's place is hum. And nothin' would do but the boss's own particular outfit. He never does things by halves, the boss don't. So I hikes home after it and then hikes here."

"I am very grateful to him, I am sure," murmured Louise, smiling.

And Jim, daring to look upon her smiling face, clear eyes and soft hair under the jaunty French sailor hat, found himself wondering why there was no woman at the Three Bars. With the swift, half-intuitive thought, the serpent entered Eden.

FROM FEBRUARY 19 TO MARCH 1.

There's no use beating around the bush, we can't duck cold facts. The shoe business this season has not been what we imagined it would be, the financial problem and the long uncertainty as to how old "money bags" would jump, has curtailed the buying. It is true that all houses have been affected, but that is poor consolation. As a matter of fact, we have sold more shoes than we ever did in any similar period, and our only fault is that we planned for a much greater business, and right now we find that we have more shoes than we want, while the financial storm is clearing and there is every indication of old time prosperity, but we don't propose to hold this seasonable merchandise, and have accordingly slashed it. There is no thought of profit. The one great truth looms up, and that is, we need the money. If you have a shoe need, or if you will have any in the next few months, supply them at once and benefit by these little prices, don't put it off.

DITRICHSTEIN COMEDY CHOCK FULL OF LAUGHS

For the first time on any stage, Wagenhals & Kemper presented at the New Plainfield theatre, last night, Leo Ditrichstein's latest comedy, "Bluffs.' The author was seen in the leading role and supported by a cast of superior excellence the production was an event in the present season's theatricals. "Bluffs" is as full of laughs as the proverbial egg of meat and there are so many complications the audience is kept on the top-most wave of expectancy wondering how it is all going to end.

Mr. Ditrichstein shared honors with Frederick Bond and Miss Lola LaFollette in individual work and Miss Kenyon Bishop and Miss Florence Huntington acquitted themselves with distinction. Only one set was used for the three acts in the comedy and it was one of the most elaborate in detail that has yet been seen on the stage of the New Plainfield. The presentation was witnessed by Messrs. Wagenhals & Kemper and a party of New York theatrical men and women who came out by special train.

At the close of the second act, Mr. Ditrichstein responded to repeated applause and encores for a speech. He thanked the audience warmly for its hearty endorsement of his work and said he hoped New York would think as well of it when it was produced at the Astor theatre in March.

WOMAN TO PREACH AGAIN.

Brown Blackwell, of Elizabeth, noted as the first woman to be ordained as a "clergyman" in the United States, is preparing to return to the ministry. With the assistance of several adherents she is having built a new Unitarian church on a site she donated near her home in Elizabeth. It will be completed next month, and the Rev. Blackwell will occupy the pulpit every fourth Sunday.

First Drinks Too Much.

James McKenna, a young Irishman, who lives at Mount Bethel, had his first drinks yesterday, and was found by Marshal Kellar, of the borough force, in a helpless condition late last night on Somerset street. He was sick all night and this morning Recorder Dolliver suspended sentence. He has "sworn off."

CELEBRATE THEIR TENTH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Dr. and Mrs. J. Hervey Buchanan, of Duer street, in celebration of their tenth wedding anniversary were given a pleasant surprise at their home, last night, by a number of their neighbors. They were wholly unaware of the intended visit when the company walked in on them about 8 o'clock. Each guest brought a useful gift in tinware, accompanied by an appropriate verse of poetry. After the presentations, T. S. Armstrong made a brief speech congratulating Dr. and Mrs. Buchanan and expressing the fellowship and good will of all for them. Dr. Buchanan responded in a happy manner, thanking one and all, not only for the gifts, but the kind words.

After an informal reception the company spent the remainder of the evening informally playing games, while Dr. and Mrs. Buchanan entertained with several selections on the piano. Everyone had a jolly good time and the event was celebrated in a way that will long be remembered.

Dr. and Mrs. Buchanan were married in the Baptist church at Pemberton, their home, ten years ago yesterday, by the doctor's father, Rev. Dr. J. C. Buchanan. Mrs. Buchanan was Miss Collom, and both families were prominent in Pemberton for many years. Following their wedding trip, the couple visited Plainfield and liked the city so well that they decided to move here which they did on April 1, 1898. Since then they have made a host of friends. The doctor has built up a large and lucrative practice and stands high in his profession. He is a graduate of Peddie Institute, Hightstown; Princeton College and Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia. Aside from the time he devotes to his profession, he is also active as a member of Freedom Castle, No. 42, Knights of the Golden Eagle, and has been honored by the order by the election to the office of Grand Noble Chief. The doctor and his wife are also prominent workers at the First Baptist church, the former being president of the Men's Club.

Those present at last night's celebration included Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Armstrong, Miss Helen Armstrong, Mr. and Mrs. John H. VanWinkle, Sr., John H. VanWinkle, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. James A. Love, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bailey, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Coriell, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lyons, Mrs. Anna Diman, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Swalm, Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Weeks, Mr. and Mrs. John R. Martin, of this city; H. Colby Budd and S. Gilbert Collom, of Pemberton, and Miss Jessie Buchanan, of Trenton.

Ticket Exchange Now On.

Through an error it was stated yesterday that the exchange of tickets for the Major Edwards testimonial had been put over until Wednesday. It should have been explained that the exchange of tickets began yesterday and that the regular box office sale commences Thursday morning. The committee is anxious that the holders of tickets secure their seats as soon as possible.

WANT C. N. FOWLER TO FAVOR BRIDGE

Representative Charles N. Fowler, of Union county, is to be asked by the Bayonne Civic Club to use his influence for the passage of the bill introduced in Congress by Representative Eugene W. Leake, of Jersey City, providing for the erection of a bridge across Newark Bay, between Bayonne and Elizabeth. Th Civic Club will probably send a committee to Washington to urge Congress to act favorably upon the measure.

It is expected also that the Bayonne Board of Trade will also send a committee to Washington, although some of the members have quite given up hope of ever seeing the two cities linked by a bridge because of the opposition from Newark.

ON METROPOLITAN JERSEY

William Jeffery Tells Realty Men of Supremacy of the Suburban District.

AT JERSEY CITY BANQUET.

Former Mayor Fagan, Robert E. Carey and Others Are Among the Galaxy of Speakers.

The fourth annual dinner of the real estate brokers of Jersey City and vicinity was held in the Jersey City Club house, in Clinton avenue, Jersey City, last night. One hundred and fifty persons were present. Mayor H. Otto Wittpenn, of Jersey City, was to have been the guest of honor. Illness prevented him from being present.

State Senator James F. Fielder was to have been a guest and was down for the toast "The Broker and His Rights," but he was detained in Trenton. Ex-Mayor Mark M. Fagan was a guest. The speakers and their addresses were: Former Mayor Francis McCauley, of Weehawken, "North Hudson Towns;" the Rev. Walter B. Greenway, of the Westminster Presbyterian church, Jersey City, "Bargains Good and Bad;" Robert Carey, "The Broker Professionally;" Otto Kempner, "The Value of Organization for the Broker;" Joseph Day, "The Auctioneer and Broker and His Value in the Realty Market;" William Jeffery, of Berkeley Heights and formerly of Plainfield, "Metropolitan New Jersey." Mayor Wittpenn's address was to have been "The Municipality and Its Real Estate Interests."

Mr. Jeffery met with a flattering reception. In discussing "Metropolitan New Jersey" he said incidently:

"Jersey City stands next to the borough of Manhattan in the per capita value of real estate, just think of that. The assessed value of real estate in Jersey City is $1,066 per inhabitant. Newark with $870 assessed value per inhabitant, is $120 per capita ahead of Brooklyn. The five counties in our metropolitan district have a million and a quarter people—and the land value is $540,000,000, exceeding Brooklyn. Our area is much larger and most of it is acreage which can be bought low enough to give homes to all who are being crowded out of the cities. With the increased population sure to come it will not be long until our land values double and then will equal the present per inhabitant values of Greater New York.

"In 1870 Hudson county was behind Essex in population by about fifteen thousand, also behind Essex in value of real estate to the amount of twenty-five million dollars. In 1907 Hudson leads Essex in population by fifty or sixty thousand, and in real estate assessments by fifty-six million dollars.

"Comparisons of assessments per inhabitant:

New York.	Land.	Imps.	Total.
Greater New York (all boroughs)	$828	$500	$1,328
Greater New York (excluding Manhattan).	455	354	809
Bronx Borough	588	364	952
Brooklyn Borough	336	415	751
Queens Borough	574	345	919
Richmond Borough	319	295	614
New Jersey.
Jersey City	$598	$468	$1,066
Newark	433	437	870
County of Hudson	490	467	957
County of Essex	444	470	914
County of Passaic	343	273	616
County of Union	367	456	823
County of Bergen	340	355	695
Five foregoing counties (average assessment)	432	431	863

Five foregoing counties (average population) (1905) 1,252,000

Total Real Estate Assessments (1907) $1,079,547,146
Personal property (1907) 145,994,110

Average ratio of taxation .$1.50 per $100

"What a startling comparison in favor of New Jersey:

Greater New York (all boroughs)—First	$1,328
Jersey City, N. J.—Second	1,066
Hudson County, N. J.—Third	957
Borough of Bronx—Fourth	952
Borough of Queens—Fifth	919
Essex County, N. J.—Sixth	914

Passaic County, N. J.—Thirteenth	616
Borough of Richmond—Fourteenth	614

"You don't seem to worry your citizens about the personal property assessment. That is wise. Some towns have been making great efforts—or at least threatening—to get all personal property on the rolls. This is a shortsighted policy and besides doesn't work. All countries have tried without success to tax the elusive personalty. Ask any assessor

CHINA AS WORLD POWER

Rev. Mr. Stuchell at First Presbyterian Men's Club Banquet Forcasts This.

A MISSIONARY A STATESMAN.

Rahway Pastor Declares That Righteousness Is Not To Be Learned In An Art Gallery.

Rev. William T. Stuchell, of Rahway, was the chief speaker at the First Presbyterian church Men's Club banquet last night. "The Church and the Changing Order" was his topic and incidently he made the declaration that Japan's power is now declining and that China is destined to become a world force.

The minister declared that there is today a great yearning on the part of church people for a development of the social side. In the changing order of the day emphasis should be laid on the social features. "People are not finding in the church what they are looking for," said Mr. Stuchell. "There is a great change going on. The Church of Christ is more triumphant today than ever. Although it may be fashionable to stay away from church, it is not desirable. You cannot learn righteousness in an art gallery and the spiritual uplift is not found in a soup kitchen.

"The present day combination of capital and labor has got beyond us, hence the disturbance. The church has made mighty progress and we have reached that point where the individual must be educated for society. We are beginning to recognize something of the duty before us. There is no government that can make a man free. True freedom is a matter of the heart. The progress of Christianity shows that there is something doing in the world today for God. The awakening of China indicates that she is destined to become the Latin race of the Orient. Japan has lost her day and her star will decline. China is the sleeping giant with her 400,000,000 of people. She has progressed more in the last five years than during the previous 3,000 years. With her great wealth of coal and iron she is destined to be a world power.

"Missions is a man's job, the crowning of women's efforts. The missionary who goes abroad today becomes an international statesman and will live in the white light of the hour. He will not be a statesman as politicians view the term, but a statesman of a higher order for Christ."

Mr. Stuchell's remarks were listened to attentively and at the close long applause greeted him. He was followed by Dr. F. A. Kinch, president of the Men's Club of the Westfield Presbyterian church, who made a few remarks congratulating the club upon its attainments. It was announced that owing to a previous engagement of great importance, S. S. Swackhamer was unable to be present.

S. W. Duning, as president of the club, was in charge of the program, introducing the speakers. During the evening the men enjoyed several bass solos by F. C. Iglehart, Jr., accompanied by Clifford A. Braider.

The committee in charge of the banquet comprised Dr. N. H. Currie, Joseph C. Allen and George A. Ballentyne. The women who assisted in the serving of the excellent dinner prepared by Demolli, were Mrs. John S. Johnston, Mrs. N. H. Currie, Mrs. C. M. Hummer, Mrs. George A. Ballentyne, Miss Alice Miller, Miss Georgia Ricker, Miss Ella Lounsbury, Miss Bessie Bond and Miss Beatrice Miner.

Notable Production Booked.

One of the most notable casts of the present season will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre next Monday night, when Henry B. Harris will present Dustin Farnum in "The Rector's Garden," a new play of American life by Byron Ongley, author of "Brewster's Millions." In support of the star are Miss Grace Elliston, who is the original Shirley Rossmore in "The Lion and the Mouse;" William Courtenay who appeared for a number of years under the direction of Charles Froham in leading roles; Eileen Errol, Thomas Findley, Edward N. Ellis, Robert Roberts, Chas. Abbott, Al Roberts, Alice Keife and A. H. Simmons.

"Glorious and Inglorious India."

The services at the First Baptist church Sunday night will be under the auspices of the Young People's Association and Rev. Milnor Wilbur, who has just returned from a trip around the world will deliver an illustrated lecture on "Glorious and Inglorious India." The views were taken by Mr. Wilbur.

ALL HALL WITH FANWOOD

Mayor Hall Buys a Hall for Borough Which Has Tired of Hiring a Hall.

PURCHASE BRICK STRUCTURE.

Building To Be Remodelled For Municipal Purposes—Work To Be Begun At Once.

Having outgrown its swaddling clothes, the progressive borough of Fanwood has arisen to the dignity of a Borough Hall, which will include a central point for the police station, borough offices and Council chamber. The deal was closed yesterday, when Mayor Burton P. Hall and the Council purchased the large brick building, which stands near the railroad station, from the Central New Jersey Land Improvement Company. While the consideration is not stated, it is said that the borough has a bargain.

Negotiations for the purchase of this property have been underway since the first of the year, when Mayor Hall took office. The real need for suitable quarters for all the borough offices and various departments was so apparent that no time was lost in closing the deal. A considerable sum will have to be expended in putting the building in condition for occupancy and the work of remodelling was started today.

The plan is to locate the police station and borough offices on the first floor, where they will be easy of access. The police station will be equipped in a modern manner and there will be a place reserved for the holding of court. The second floor will be devoted to the Council chamber and it is proposed to make it attractive and up-to-date. The new property is especially desirable because of its proximity to the railroad station and at the same time being almost at the central point in the borough. The work of remodelling the building will be hastened so that the borough officials may be able to take possession at the earliest possible date.

ALIENISTS TO EXAMINE COUNTESS DE ANDERSON

Whether Mary De Anderson, the swindler of tradesmen, also known as "the countess," who created a scene yesterday in the Essex county Court House in Newark and afterward raised another fuss in police headquarters, is shamming insanity, or whether she is really insane or on the verge of insanity, is an open question. Mrs. De Anderson during her operations here was known as "Mrs. Col. Wheeling." It is quite likely, however, that steps will be taken shortly to find out through experts if she is more fit for an asylum than a penitentiary.

According to the authorities, there is a "record as long as a man's arm," against her, gathered from various parts of the country, and yesterday, when she was brought down from the county jail, where she is held, together with her daughters, Bessie and Helen, charged with obtaining goods under false pretenses from Nutley merchants, she acted queerly.

The woman was taken later to police headquarters for the purpose of having her picture taken for the rogues' gallery.

"I will not allow it," she shouted. I am innocent and I have never been in Baltimore, Washington, Boston, or other places in my life, and my husband was a cripple, not a crook."

Jacob Ruhl, messenger at police headquarters, was finally compelled to hold the woman in a chair while the photographer squeezed the bulb.

While the camera man managed to get a picture, Superintendent Schwartz, of the Bertillion system, was unable to get her finger prints.

The daughters were also photographed, though they protested, wept and refused permission for a time.

When led into court, the "Countess" screamed: "My God! My God! Everybody knows that I am an innocent woman! I never intentionally wronged anybody in my life!"

Then she said that a lawyer had advised her to plead guilty, but that she could not conscientiously do it. The fact is that a lawyer has been engaged by her and he expected to plead for her, but she obstinatly refused to take the advice.

Local Bill in House.

Senate Bill No. 84 has passed the Senate and is now before the House, where it will probably come up for passage next Monday. This bill is for the purpose of validating the Plainfield sewer bond issue where a slight error was made by the printer in not publishing the advertisements for the full period of 15 days. Through an oversight the advertisement appeared for only 14 days.

POLICEMAN RUN OVER BY BOROUGH CHEMICAL

Marshal Charles Keller, of the North Plainfield police force, had his right foot painfully crushed last night as he was trying to climb to the side step of the borough chemical engine. The accident happened as the aparatus was running to the second fire late last evening. Keller, who is on night duty on Somerset street, was riding on the back step of the engine to the fire. At Hudson lane, the apparatus slowed down and he jumped off, thinking the team would stop there. The truck started up again, and in attempting to climb to the side step of the engine, Keller fell off and the rear wheel passed over his foot.

The injured officer was removed to Dr. A. H. Dundon's office, where an examination showed that no bones were broken. He will be "off the job" for several days, however, as the foot is badly crushed. During his absence from duty, Special Officer John Reinmann has been detailed to his beat by Chief Marshal Weiss. Keller is the second regular borough policeman who is now off duty, for Marshal Pope is confined to his home with inflammatory rheumatism.

TWO NIGHT ALARMS KEEP BOROUGH FIREMEN BUSY

North Plainfield firemen were kept on the jump last night as the department was called out for two fires in as many hours, and the first one, a chimney blaze for which two alarms were turned in, was sounded while the men were testing the recently repaired steamer in Green Brook. The first blaze was at the home of H. B. Tapscott, at 68 Willow avenue, and a burning chimney was extinguished without loss. This was at about 7:30, and at shortly after 9 o'clock the department was again called out for a blaze at the end of Watchung avenue, near Coddington avenue. The fire was in a boys' bungalow, built of boards at the edge of the woods on the Meyers' property, and the little shack was entirely destroyed by the flames.

Accompanied by Chief Howard Woolston, of the borough department, the men hitched up the steamer at shortly after 7 o'clock for a "wash." They proceeded to Brook avenue, where a satisfactory test was held. While the firement were at work at the brook, an alarm was sounded from box 153. The engine was working, and the idea of hitching up to return to the house was given up, Firemen William Gaub and Callman James De Camp mounting the team and riding back to headquarters for the chemical. On his way back to the house, Gaub, who riding "Tuck," was thrown off near Lincoln place, when the animal balked, so that he was a few minutes late in getting back with the horse.

Excited by the delay in the apparatus, which really amounted to but five minutes, Tapscott sounded a second alarm from the same box a few minutes after turning in the first one. The apparatus made a quick run and two extinguishers were used. The damage was slight.

After the Tapscott fire, the firemen returned to Green Brook for the steamer, and had scarcely got it back to the house, and the horses unhitched, when an alarm was sounded from box 145, at about 9 o'clock. The department made a quick run, and found a small 8 by 10 shack at the edge of the woods near the end of Watchung avenue in a mass of flames. A chemical stream was used, but the little place was burned to the ground. It was built by a party of small boys who live in the vicinity and used it as a club house. Members of the club are Joseph Flack, Jr., and Jacob Weiss. The fire started from an overheated stove.

Too Late to Attend Funeral.

Wesley Randolph, formerly a telegraph operator at the North Avenue station, who with his brother has been enjoying an extended trip through the West, has been visiting relatives in town for a few days. They were in the West when their father, George Randolph, himself a noted telegraph operator, died at his home in Brooklyn, and despite every effort it was impossible to get word to the sons so that they could reach home in time for the funeral. They first learned of their father's death while in Denver. Although taking a limited train from that city soon after receiving the telegram they did not reach Brooklyn until a day after the funeral.

BOROUGH PLAN DEFEATED

Taxpayers of South Plainfield Decide Incorporation Would Be too Expensive.

THE BENEFITS TOO SLIGHT.

After a Full Discussion at Largely Attended Meeting the Scheme Is Voted Down.

The taxpayers of South Plainfield at a largely attended meeting in Washington Hall, last night, decided by a vote of thirty-six to twenty-eight against the proposed action of establishing a borough. The vote was taken with a view to ascertaining the sentiment of those present and it is the general opinion that the result kills the proposed old borough bill.

Peter McDonough was chairman of the meeting and Thomas Linabury was secretary. Mr. McDonough presented the question of debate, stating that in accordance with a carefully prepared report a substantial sum would be available under borough conditions which now goes to the township. The taxes paid by the whole of the proposed borough district and the amount received back from the State as well as the township were included in the report.

In the discussion which followed it was shown that the amount in excess of present revenue would be about $1,400, and this was considered a very small amount for improvements that would be desired should a borough be established. According to the old bill the territory to be included in the proposed borough would aggregate about 6,000 acres, extending as far south as New Durham and as far west as the Dunellen line. It was argued that there would be so much vacant and unimproved land that with the higher rate of assessment, which would follow under borough conditions, the taxpayers would have to pay more money than at present and the returns would not be correspondingly as large. It was further argued to show that the action would be unwise, that it would be several years before this improved land would be developed so that a fair and proportionate return in taxes could be expected to support the borough government.

It seemed to be the sense of a majority of those present at the meeting that very good progress is being made as a town and that while the suggested improvements would be welcome, the ultimate cost would be so great that it would prove more of a burden than a blessing to the taxpayers. The greatest harmony prevailed throughout the discussion and while there were many different opinions everyone was good natured and agreed that the discussion had been a benefit in advancing the interests of the community.

AUTO BUS IN FLAMES; OWNER'S LOSS $2,000

The large Reo auto-bus, used in the passenger service between this city and South Plainfield, caught fire on the 4 o'clock trip out yesterday afternoon and was totally destroyed within a few minutes. The driver, George Nichols, of West Sixth street, noticed the flames through an opening in the floor barely in time to hustle a half-dozen passengers out of danger before the gasolene tank exploded. The burning occurred on Plainfield avenue at Wolf's hill, just over the city line, and nothing could be done to save the vehicle.

The service between the city and the suburb was established by Edward B. Ryder, of Central avenue, and the bus was his property. It was worth about $2,00 and had only recently been refitted with a new engine and a top with glass sides.

According to Nichols, he had just climbed the hill when the driving chain broke and one end tore a hole in the gasolene tank. The fumes ignited instantly and began spreading across the bottom of the bus and he realized that the tank might explode. The men passengers were inclined to adopt some plan to put out the blaze but the explosion took place before they could act and there was nothing to be done after that. Only a heap of twisted iron was left.

The destruction of the machine once more cuts South Plainfield people off from regular transportation to the city and the loss will be greatly felt. The line had proved to be a great convenience and the passenger traffic was increasing daily.

MISHAP; THEN ROMANCE

Accident to Maze Edwards Unites Borough Girl and Wealthy Hotel Man.

MARRIED AT ATLANTIC CITY.

Bride Formerly the Major's Nurse and the Groom a Friend Who Came to Visit Him.

Subsequent events that have followed the accident to Mr. and Mrs. Maze Edwards at Block Island, last August, and as a result of which the former is still under a doctor's care, once more substantiate the adage that "It's an ill wind that blows nobody good." The disablement of the genial Major led to the meeting of Miss Anna Hoagland, of North Plainfield, who has acted as his nurse and attendant for the past four months, and D. A. Mitchell, a wealthy farmer, owner of the Highland House and Pequet House, Block Island, and well known New Englander. Dan Cupid became interested and the busy little fellow with the bow and arrows added two more victims to his unerring aim. Miss Hoagland and Mr. Mitchell were married in Atlantic City, last night, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Dr. J. O. P. Lowry, pastor of the First Baptist church at the shore resort.

It has been the custom of Major and Mrs. Edwards to spend a portion of each summer at the Highland House, Block Island, and it was while on a drive near the hotel grounds last year that the carriage was upset and both were hurt. Mrs. Edwards recovered quickly but her husband was badly hurt and when he returned to Plainfield Miss Hoagland was engaged as nurse. Mr. Mitchell came to the city Christmas week to visit his two friends and there for the first time met the young woman in charge of the sick room. It was a case of "love at first sight" on the part of the New Englander and he paid great attention to her. When he left for home it was with Miss Hoagland's promise that they would be married as soon as the patient no longer required her services, probably in April or May.

Mr. Edwards' sickness and ailment became such that a change to Atlantic City was determined upon and carried out three weeks ago. Without sending any previous notice, Mr. Mitchell put in an apparance at the resort last Saturday and pressed his suit for an immediate marriage with so much ardor that Miss Hoagland consented. A new nurse was provided for Mr. Edwards and the ceremony took place at the Chester Inn, where the party have been stopping, in order that the disabled man might be in attendance and confer his blessing. Mrs. Edwards was also a witness.

Mr. Mitchell is fifty-five years old and was a widower, while his bride has just turned twenty-two. She is a sister of John Hoagland, of Somerset street, and has numerous relatives in the West End. She has been a practicing nurse for the past two years and is a decidedly attractive young woman. The couple will remain at Atlantic City for a few days and then go to Philadelphia for a brief visit, after which they will leave for New York, prior to their return to Block Island, their future home.

BONIFACE STILL MOURNS

Princeton Inn Owner Fails to Locate Vanonis Who Left Unpaid Board Bill.

THEY REGISTERED FROM HERE.

Mrs. E. Vanoni Not Known In Plainfield But Family Description Answers to Former Local Residents.

As told in yesterday's Daily Press The Nassau Inn management in Princeton have expressed anxiety as to the whereabouts of a family of four who arrived at the hotel last Wednesday and left town Monday. According to the boniface they neglected to pay a bill of $35. They registered as Mrs. E. Vanoni, Miss Pauline Vanoni and J. and L. Vanoni, all of Plainfield.

The Nassau Inn proprietor inquired about them at the Trenton House, Trenton, and was told that that hostelry had had a similar experience with patrons believed to be the same persons.

Mrs. E. Vanoni is not known here but a Mrs. Eugenia Vanoni resided at No. 950 Park avenue until November last. She had a daughter, Miss Pauline Vanoni and two sons, one of whom was Frederick L. Vanoni. Miss Vanoni was an accomplished and attractive young woman. She was employed at the office of a local electrician and after giving a day's notice quit her position early in November.

F. L. Vanoni represented himself, it is said, as the treasurer of the Francis Bacon Piano Company and is alleged to have told his friends that the family had a $5,000 share in the concern which was left to them by the father, John Vanoni. Young Vanoni before leaving town gave it out, it is reported, that the family had withdrawn from the piano business and intended to invest in a traveling vaudeville company.

MERCHANTS TO OBSERVE WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY

The agitation on the part of several merchants to obtain the closing of the local stores on Saturday, Washington's Birthday, is meeting with success. At a meeting of those interested on Monday night a committee was appointed to call on the merchants of the city and obtain their signatures agreeing to close on the coming holiday. As a result a majority of the store-keepers have agreed to observe the day by a suspension of business. It is understood that the stores will remain open Friday night.

No effort was made to get the cooperation of the grocers and butchers, for it is said that they all have decided to keep their places of business open as usual. They argue that it would prove a great inconvenience to their customers if they should close from Friday night until Monday as in many cases it might be difficult for some to stock with provisions for that length of time. Those who have agreed to close their stores are as follows:

A. E. Force & Co., Woodhull & Martin Company, James R. Blair, M. C. Van Arsdale, M. & A. Tepper, F. A. Dutterhofer, Martin Hertz, George J. Finger, A. M. Griffen, S. H. Whitney, H. E. Gayle Hardware Company, L. B. Van Camp, Joseph W. Gavett, A. L. Giddes, M. M. Gassner, Mathushek & Son Piano Co., M. B. Overlark, Christopher Thorp, Weinberger & Co., Jacob Skiarew, M. Others who will close, but who did not sign the petition for various reasons include I. W. Woolworth, Putnam & DeGraw, Morris Abrams, Germain & Co., S. C. Peck, Waldorf Shoe Company and Joseph Sattels.

YOUNG MAN HAS NEW THEORY

Human Life Seems Centered In Stomach. All Else Is Secondary.

The immense success which has followed L. T. Cooper during the past year with his new preparation has exceeded anything of the kind ever before witnessed in most of the leading cities where the young man has introduced the medicine. Cooper has a novel theory. He believes that the human stomach is directly responsible for most disease. To quote his own words from an interview upon his arrival in an eastern city: "The average man or woman cannot be sick if the stomach is working properly. To be sure, there are diseases of a virulent nature, such as cancer, tuberculosis, diabetes, etc., which are organic, and are not traceable to the stomach, but even fevers can, in nine cases out of ten, be traced to something taken into the stomach. All of this half-sick, nervous exhaustion that is now so common, is caused by the stomachic conditions, and it is because my remedy will and does regulate the stomach that I am meeting with such success.

"To sum the matter up—a sound digestive apparatus that is doing its full duty, getting every particle of vitality out of all food by transferring it to the bowels in a perfectly digested state—this above all else brings health."

Mr. A. C. Brock, chef of the Brock Restaurant, Market District, Boston, Mass., who is a staunch believer in Mr. Cooper's theory and medicine, has this to say: "I had chronic indigestion for over three years. I suffered terribly, and lost about thirty pounds. I was a physical wreck when I started this Cooper medicine, a month or so ago. Today I am as well as I ever was in my life. I am no longer nervous, my food does not distress me in the least, and I have a splendid appetite. I am gaining flesh very rapidly—in fact, at the rate of a pound a day. I would not believe any medicine on earth could have done for me what this has done. It is a remarkable preparation and Mr. Cooper deserves all his success."

We recommend the Cooper preparations as being remarkable medicines.

BRYAN AND THE PRESIDENCY.

Bryan may feel that if the element in his party that opposed him is not strong enough to stop him, it has no right to appeal to his generosity.—Washington Star.

Bryan would accept the presidential nomination if drafted, but will not volunteer. And would he like to have the draft presented on a silver waiter?—Columbus Enquirer-Sun.

The solid south may suceed in nominating Mr. Bryan at Denver, but the solid south cannot elect anybody in November. This is a point worth while remembering. If Mr. Bryan shall be nominated, he will not carry a single state outside the south.—Charleston News and Courier.

Mr. Bryan is quoted as having said that he has no fears of being able to beat Taft, Hughes or Cannon should either of that trio be nominated for president by the Republicans. One of that trio is pretty apt to be nominated, and it will be up to Mr. Bryan to make good his assertion.—Athens Banner.

What is the matter? At least one Democratic opponent is shamelessly frank enough to say that "suppose Bryan should win in November, what influence would I have at the White House if I should tell Bryan now that I think that he cannot be elected and ought to withdraw.—Lynchburg Advance.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Rev. William T. Stuchell, pastor of the Rahway Presbyterian church, who lectured last night at the First Presbyterian church, Plainfield, got so absorbed in collecting his thoughts for his address on "The Church and the Changing Orders" in a main line trolley car last night that he went through Plainfield, and only "came to himself" when the car arrived at Dunellen. Leaving the car, he stood on the corner by the postoffice until an east bound car came along, when he went back to Plainfield, arriving there late for his lecture. His remarks were excellent, and perhaps he got much of his inspiration during his wait for a car out of "Doubtful Dunellen."

The fire department made its first run since last June Monday afternoon, when the apparatus was taken to the house of Henry Kirchner to extinguish a chimney fire. In the absence of Chief Whyuskey, Assistant Chief Walter G. Runyon was in charge, and a team of horses belonging to the telephone company were used to pull the engine. The firemen had little to do, for the blaze was entirely confined to a sooty chimney. There was no damage.

Charles W. Smith, Jr., of Front street, was pleasantly surprised at his home Monday night, when about a score of his friends "dropped in" together for a call. The evening was spent with music and games, and refreshments were served at a late hour. Guests came from Bound Brook and Plainfield, and the affair proved a complete surprise.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

If the weather holds clear the Country Club of Lakewood may be in line with an open competition on Friday, and Saturday to celebrate Washington's Birthday, but no details have been fixed. Doubtless there will be handicaps unless snow prevents on several nearby links on the holiday. In the South there will be tournaments on every side, those at Palm Beach being the first little events of the year. On Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday the amateur championship of south Florida will be played there and on February 24 the annual open championship. Both are competitions with long records back of them, the amateur now being held by Harold B. Fenn, of Apawamis and the open title by Aleck Smith, of Nassau.

John Duncan Dunn, who had charge of Arsdley and other American links before becoming golf manager of the Hardelot Country Club near Moulogne-sur-Mer, France, has nominated for honorary membership there Walter J. Travis, J. Hamilton Gillespie, the Nestor of Florida golf, and Gaylord Wilshire. During a vacation trip in England last month Dunn had a one at the Tunbridge Wells course, the first of his long career on the links.

To bar stimies had been decided on by the Intercollegiate Golf Association at Nassau in October, but wiser counsels prevailed before the start of the match play. As long as stimies are in the game they must be played at tournaments and no personal agreement may nullify this obligation. A case at the Lahinch Club just decided by the St. Andrews rules committee establishes this fact and embodies a situation often met with here. Two members of the club arranged to play a hole tournament at the same time as a medal competition.

Both players agreed to bar stimies in order that this feature of the match game should not interfere with their strokes in the scoring competition. The attempt to play a medal round at the same time as a hole and hole match is rarely successful to the players concerned and is always productive of some embittering controversy. A series of complications was the result in this Lochend case, and in respect of the contracting out of the stimy rule it is impossible to read with frank approval the condemnation of the rules committee that "if the arrangement to bar stimies had official sanction this hole tournament was not conducted under the rules of golf; if it was a private arrangement, both players are disqualified for the hole tournament." Yet at American tournaments the committee frequently orders that to play stimies is not mandatory if the opponent consents. The reverse is the rule printed on the Garden City tournament notices that stimies must be played.

BASEBALL.

Manager Griffith of the New York Americans, who is a member of the rules committee, says the American League will adopt a measure prohibiting the soiling of a new ball.

Manager Chance of the National League rules committee is not in favor of lowering the pitcher's box to the level of the rest of the diamond. He says the rule is satisfactory as it is and that there is enough batting.

It is now stated on good authority that H. C. Pulliam has decided not to resign from the presidency of the National League at the meeting in this city next week and has so assured the various club members. It is possible, however, that there will be a runin between Pulliam and Garry Herrmann of Cincinnati because of personalities which were permitted to creep into the recent controversy over the minor leagues blacklist resolution. Herrmann says he will come to the meeting prepared to demand a retraction, which, if true, may cause Pulliam to resume his rhetorical tactics. The National League magnates say they do not want any internal wrangles and that neither Pulliam nor Herrmann will be encouraged.

William D. Mansfield, owner of the McKeesport franchise in the P. O. M. League, brought a stormy meeting of that organization to an end the other night by suddenly remembering that he had to be married. He bolted the meeting, raced five blocks to a church, and the ceremony was performed just one hour after the time set for it. The meeting was adjourned until after the honeymoon.

Of the ten batsmen with records of .300 or better for ten years in major league baseball, four will manage ball teams in New England this year: Joe Kelley in Boston, Jesse Burkett in Worcester, Hugh Duffy in Providence and Billy Hamilton in Haverhill. They are still in harness and can hit the ball almost as well as ever.

When Mrs. Anna Dixon, fifty-eight years old, of 1818 Van Buren street, Camden, failed to respond to a call for dinner yesterday afternoon a relative investigated and found her dead in bed.

Suffering terrible pain by biting his tongue as he fell downstairs, John Walters, three years old, of 618 South Fifth street, Camden, was hurried to the Cooper Hospital. His speech will be only temporarily affected.

At the meeting of the Paterson Graded Union of Sunday-school Workers in the First Baptist church last night, Rev. Dr. Thomas J. Villers, of Peddie Memorial church, Newark, delivered his second lecture on the subject, "Through Palestine with a Kodak."

From a rupture of a blood vessel near the base of the brain, caused by running a sewing machine, Mrs. Jennie Elliott, aged forty-five, wife of Edward Elliott, of Florence, died yesterday. The rupture occurred while she was sewing last week and she never regained consciousness.

While the funeral of Henry Heinz, the Pomona farmer who was found dead in the woods last week, was proceeding to the cemetery yesterday afternoon, the hearse suddenly sank in the mud to the hubs. A third horse was quickly secured and attached to the hearse, and after a half hour's delay the funeral proceeded.

Mrs. Addie L. Perkins, wife of Luther W. Perkins, of Beverly, has begun suit in the Court of Chancery for maintenance. In 1898 Mrs. Perkins was awarded separate maintenance and alimony on the strength of a suit, which she instituted, charging her husband with neglect. In 1905, she avers, her son brought about a reconciliation, but the happy relation continued only a short time.

Because he thought the combination had a suspicious appearance, Patrolman Marter, of Burlington, yesterday arrested John Britton, who was parading the streets with a fat Dominick rooster under his arm. A woman told the police she had given Britton the rooster to sell, but the prisoner's release was thwarted by a charge of theft lodged against him by the proprietors of the Diamond Ice Company, who accused him of stealing horse feed with which to fatten a flock of chickens he has been tending.

Special Chancery Master Barton B. Hutchinson has recommended that Mrs. Annie Brown, of Hightstown, be granted a divorce from her husband, Mark W. Brown, of the same place. The Browns were married in 1903, and according to Mrs. Brown her husband promised to make a home for her as soon as he could make enough money. In the meantime she has been living in the home of Joseph H. Black as a servant. She claims that Brown has shown no disposition to provide for her.

After thieves had twice looted the grocery store of H. K. Harris, in the uptown cottage section, Atlantic City, Harris decided to keep nightly watch for their further return. After the owner had spent the night on duty and left for his breakfast yesterday morning the thieves backed a wagon up in front of the place, opened the door with a false key and calmly carted off a load of goods. When Harris returned and discovered his loss he found a facetious note from the thieves in which they promised to make their next visit in an automobile.

Plainfield, N. J., February 19, 1908.

While our junior United States Senator is entertaining Fairbanks and Foraker at dinner tonight, our Governor and the Right Arm Man of the State Administration will be eating a meal with no less a personage than the distinguished and courageous—President of these United States. In other words Mr. Briggs will be host for a pair of disgruntled "has-beens," while the Nation's Man of the Hour will have as his guests two men, either of whom might well fill his shoes should the opportunity knock at their doors.

As told in yesterday's issue, an opportunity will be given the local public early in April to hear Judge Ben Lindsay, of Denver, Col. The Westerner has become famous since he put into successful practise his theories of reformation for wayward youths and is now known in every part of the country as "The Kids' Judge." Love, kindness, help and advice are the only forms of "punishment" meted out by him in the administration of his duties as judge of a juvenile court.

The biggest crowd on record is anticipated by Manager Counihan at the New Plainfield theatre on the occasion of the Major Maze Edwards testimonial performance on Wednesday night, February 26. "The Heir to the Hoorah" will be the attraction. If you have any desire to see this great Broadway success, it will be necessary to purchase your seats this week.

DRINKS BAY RUM AND DIES.

James Clark, Inmate of Rahway Reformatory, Got Stuff in Institution's Barber Shop.

James Clark, aged twenty-two, a slave to liquor and an inmate of the Rahway Reformatory, who came of a respected family in Somerville, died last week in that institution of paralysis of the heart brought on by drinking bay rum.

He was a barber by trade and being left alone very much during the prevailing epidemic of diptheria he indulged in bay rum. It was the second term in the reformatory and he had been there a week.

Bayonne After Mosquitoes.

Bayonne, Feb. 19.—Following out the suggestions of State Entomologist John B. Smith, the Board of Health at a meeting Monday night decided to take steps to exterminate mosquitoes and their breeding places. In a communication read to the board Monday night, Mr. Smith said he had personally inspected the meadows near here and found but one place where mosquitoes breed. He suggested filling in the meadows before summer and the digging of ditches for drainage. The total cost, he wrote, will not exceed $500. Mr. Smith sent to the board a sketch showing where one of the places is. This work will be begun in the near future.

SPY ON INJURED MAN FROM BEHIND SCREEN.

While Michael O'Malley, who was injured when two trolley cars crashed at Jewett and West Side avenues, Jersey City, lay in bed in the City Hospital two physicians employed by the North Jersey Street Railway Company alternated in watching him through the cracks in a screen to ascertain whether he was as badly injured as he seemed to be.

This was brought out when O'Malley's suit for damages was heard before Judge Vail, in the Circuit Court, Jersey City, yesterday. O'Malley contended an injury to his back practically made him a cripple. Dr. Hart and Dr. Blum, who were retained by the trolley company, suggested to the hospital physicians that they place a screen around the patient's cot. This was done and Dr. Hart and Dr. Blum took turns in watching him.

Both testified that O'Malley, believing himself free from scrutiny, would relieve the strain on his muscles by stretching, rolling about and sitting up, and that on one occasion he even got out of bed unassisted.

Dr. Parker, who attended O'Malley after he left the hospital, was equally positive the man had been seriously injured. The jurors evidently accepted the contention, for after being out a short time they returned a verdict for $1,750 damages.

ANGRY MAN BIT CAPTORS.

Westfield Gateman Sank His Teeth Into Hands of Foreman and Policeman.

Section Foreman James Hannon and Policeman Stamets, of Westfield, were both badly bitten on their hands Monday night by Jacob Michaels, a night gateman at the Broad street railroad crossing, that place. Michaels appeared unfit for duty because of too much drink, and Hannon told him not to go on duty. Michaels became abustive, it is claimed, and when Hannon seized him he bit the foreman severely on the left hand.

Hannon summoned the policeman and the two attempted to take Michaels to the lock-up. In the scuffle that ensued Michaels, it is claimed, again sank his teeth into the palm of the policeman's right hand, causing it to bleed profusely. Michaels was hurried to a cell, and the two bitten men had their wounds dressed.

They Did.

Maximilian Foster, whose short stories are familiar to readers of Everybody's, happened to notice the little sign above our desk that reads:

DO IT NOW!

"Do you find that that works well?" he asked us.

"It's very effective," we told him.

"That isn't what I asked you," said Mr. Foster. "I heard of a case just the other day that will show you the difference.

"The head of a large business house bought a number of those 'Do it now' signs and hung them up around his offices. They were effective beyond expectations, and yet it can hardly be said that they worked very well. When, after the first few days of those signs, the business man counted up the results, he found that the cashier had skipped out with $20,000, the head bookkeeper had eloped with the stenographer, three clerks had asked for a raise in salary, and the office boy had lit out for the West to become a highwayman."—Everybody's Magazine.

Quartet in Trouble.

In the city court, this morning, Charles Redd, Eleanor Redd, his wife; Lizzie Brighton and "Doc" Oliver, all colored, were arraigned on a charge of disorderly conduct preferred by Special Officer John King. The four became involved in an altercation at Third street and Plainfield avenue last night, through Redd inferring that Oliver was playing too much attention to Mrs. Redd. Judge Runyon gave all four a scolding and they went away promising to be real good in the future.

and he will tell you that it takes much longer to conscientiously try to list up personalty, than to make his real estate assessments, and that the result is grossly inequitable, and a nuisance. Besides we want to attract people of modest means, on whom such taxes fall heaviest—the rich who wish to know how to escape. The amount obtained through personal property taxes is so little that it is ridiculous, yet the assessor is annoyed, and so is everybody else. Evasions of every kind are indulged in, when business should be as free as the air we breathe.

"You all know that a liberal exemption of industries attracts capital and business, increase production, and that real estate in consequence thereof increases in value.

"The money invested in Jersey City today in factories is over eighty millions of dollars; fifteen years ago it was only about twenty millions of dollars. This is a result of liberal treatment. Yet every once in a while someone starts a cry for a strict enforcement of the antiquated personalty tax laws.

"Don't bottle up the McAdoo tunnels with a personal property tax cork. Proclaim it abroad, that Jersey City at least holds out inducement to capital. Realize once and forever the tremendous advantages of your city and county, and see to it that other Jerseyites are enlightened, for they do not begin to understand the wealth, population, resources and advantages of New Jersey any more than do our New York friends. I must now conclude not wishing to tire you further and trusting that in the near future it may be my privilege to address some of you and others on this important subject which strikes at the very vitals of the business interests of the country."

The Sulky Brute.

The quarrel about his broken New Year resolution, having reached its climax, began slowly to decline.

"Come, dear," she said at last—and she touched her rosy dimple with her slim finger—"come, kiss my cheek, dear, and make it up."

"Humph," he retorted, "I'll kiss it, but do you think it needs any more making up?"—Exchange.

At the Play.

"Talk about realism!" exclaimed Mr. Housekeep.

"Well?"

"That housemaid making dabs at the furniture and never hitting it looks awful natural to me."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

PARK AVE. BAPTISTS IN LEAP YEAR PARTY

Presenting an attractively arranged program, including a novel exhibition of living pictures, musical selections and recitations, the leap year social given at the Park Avenue Baptist church last night proved an entire social success. The affairs was arranged by a committee of the women of the Sunday-school, assisted by a sub-committee of the men, and was attended by about a hundred members of the school and their friends.

A feature of the affair was the exhibition of living pictures in which sixteen people of the church took part. This part of the program was referred to as "an art collection of up-to-date pictures, exhibited by Madam Von Brakle," and some of the subjects were especially clever in conception. The "pictures" were exhibited in a frame at the end of the room, behind which the subjects posed. "Mr. Fondparent's little scheme for retaining his daughter," was especially clever, and Miss Marie Pullinger posed in the frame, wearing a placard inscribed "Disinherited." S. H. George appeared in the frame carrying a toy donkey in his arms when he represented the subject "What would happen if William Jennings Bryan was elected President?" The donkey replaced Teddy Bear. Other subjects follow: "St. Valentine," Herbert Henry; "Cupid," Master Wesley Johnson; "The Only Person Immune from Cupid," Miss Marion Hall; "The Yellow Peril," Mrs. Gary;" "The First Inhabitant," Fred P. Goodwin; "Samantha Allen and Her Husband Josiah," Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Henry; "The Emperor, dressed like a policeman," Jeremiah Van Winkle; "Buster Brown," Mrs. S. A. George; "The Leading Feature of a College Education—the Football Player," Harry Johnson; "The American Heiress and What She Picked Up," Miss Lillian Hardcastle and Nelson Van Winkle; "The Modern Nimrod," Earl Harmon; "One of Uncle Sam's Protectors," James Sutton. Following this came three recitations from Eugene Field, "Seein' Things at Night," Mrs. Charles Dayton; "The Limitations of Youth," Miss Marie Pullinger, and "Picnic Time," Mrs. Charles Steiner.

When it came time for refreshments, numbered red cardboard keys were distributed among the women, and the partners were found among the men who had numbered hearts. Each of the hearts and keys bore verses, and when all had found partners, there was a leap year march around the room, led by F. V. Goodwin, with Miss Marjorie Brown. After the marching, refreshments, consisting of ice cream, cake and coffee, were served.

An orchestra of fourteen pieces, led by George W. V. Moy, rendered several selections in the course of the evening, and furnished the music for the marching. Mrs. Harry Johnson also played a piano solo. The committee in charge of the affair included Miss Mary Giles, chairman, Miss Lillian Hardcastle and Mrs. S. H. George. The men's committee was composed of G. W. V. Moy, Harry C. Runyon, William M. Hopler, Albert L. Henry and George Cratsley.

Stole an Invalid's Bread.

Charlie Williams appeared in the city court, this morning, charged by Patrolman Sweeney with repeatedly stealing bread from a North avenue hallway. The loaves he took were baked especially for an invalid and the cop stated that it was about the same thing as appropriating his medicine. Charlie gave a gentle hit that he would like to go to jail until the storm blows over and Judge Runyon made it twenty days.

FORT AND COLBY DINE WITH ROOSEVELT TONIGHT

Governor Fort and Senator Colby left Trenton last night for Washington, where they will be the guests of President Roosevelt at dinner tonight.

At the same time United States Senator Briggs will entertain at a dinner in the New Willard Hotel Vice-President Fairbanks, Speaker Cannon and Senator Foraker, rival candidates to Taft for the Presidential nomination; Senators Bulkeley and Hemenway, Congressmen Wood and James E. Watson, E. G. and F. W. Roebling, of Trenton, and personal associates of Senator Briggs from New York.

CONVINCED THAT PASTORS OUGHT TO WAKE UP.

Rev. W. T. Stuchell, of Rahway, nearly missed connections with the First Presbyterian Church Men's Club banquet last night and his experience he says convinces him that "ministers ought to wake up."

The minister, who prides himself on his knowledge of New Jersey and especially Union county, left his home on the 5:45 o'clock trolley, planning to reach his destination about 7 o'clock, the hour for which the banquet was called, and he could see no reason why the distance of eight miles should not be covered in that time. During the trip over he occupied himself making notes for his speech. Being intently absorbed he only glanced up once, as he said, when he saw a dozen scattered electric lights and recognized the place as Westfield. On sped the car and the minister was unmindful of its progress. Finally looking at his watch he noticed that he had been more than an hour on the road, and growing uneasy he rushed to the rear platform and anxiously inquired of the conductor:

"When do we get to Plainfield?"

"Plainfield?" replied the collector of nickels, "why we passed that place long ago. This is Dunellen."

Quickly leaving the car, the exponent of the Gospel first thought he would walk back to Plainfield, but hurried inquiry brought him the information that he would be able to catch a car in the course of fifteen or twenty minutes and he decided to wait. They were anxious minutes for he realized that the banquet would be on and he might arrive too late to take part. The car finally came along and at the end of another half-hour Mr. Stuchell found himself in Plainfield. Hastening to the church he was heartily greeted by the committee in charge, which was on the anxious seat, and had about given up hope of his coming. Although the dinner was well along toward the close, the guest was escorted to the seat of honor and soon forgot his unpleasant experience.

When introduced later in the evening and explaining his trip to Plainfield, Mr. Stuchell declared that he thought it was about time that "ministers wake up."

Y. W. C. A. Officer to Speak.

GOT HIS OMELETT.

Why One Man Ceased Trying to Be Funny With Waiters.

"I've never tried to be funny with a waiter," the traveler was saying, "since the time when I had a little experience with one in California. It was several years ago, and I was rather 'fresh.' I stepped into a restaurant one morning and ordered an omelet.

"'What kind?' asked the waiter.

"'Why, are there more kinds than one?' I said.

"'Oh, yes, sir,' he answered me; 'there are several.'

"'Well, bring me an ostrich egg omelet.'

"'All right, sir,' he said, 'but you'll have to wait quite a while. It takes a long time to make an ostrich egg omelet.'

"I told him I had plenty of time. He went away and was gone fully an hour. Then he came back with a big covered dish.

"'There you are, sir,' he said, placing it before me and uncovering it.

"Well, it was an omelet, all right, and big enough for half a dozen men. Whether there was an ostrich farm in the neighborhood and he got a real ostrich egg or whether he made it from a couple of dozen of hens' eggs I don't know, but I distinctly remember that it cost me $2—and I learned a valuable lesson."—Youth's Companion.

The Only Perfect Couple.

She was a widow and her second venture was a widower, relates Lippincott's Magazine. He was a gentle soul and hadn't much to say in response when his wife had a great deal to remind him of, especially when she compared him with her former, but when he did speak it counted. One night he went to sleep while she was telling him the old, old story. She followed him shortly. Along in the middle of the night she was awakened by his uneasy turning.

"John," she said, "are you awake?"

"Yes Susan," he replied softly.

"What's the matter?"

"Oh nothing, Susan; I was just thinking if your first had married my first they would have been the only perfect couple on earth."

Then he went to sleep again—while she was talking.

Parties and Pumps.

The late Francis Murphy, well known as a temperance advocate, had many an adventure in the course of his very useful life, says Harper's Weekly.

He once told of a case in which a man got a little the better of him in an argument.

The man was a clubman, a generous liver, famous for his wine cellar, and Mr. Murphy read him a strong lecture on the drink evil.

But the bon-vivant only smiled, shook his head and said:

"Well, Mr. Murphy, I have seen many a pleasant party around a table, but I have never seen one around a pump."

Keep On.

The First Cyclist (much upset by a motor car)—Well, if the punishment fits the crime, wonder what bounders like that'll come to when they die?

The Second Cyclist—Oh, they'll just go on scorching.—Spelch.

Jumping at a Conclusion.

"I have just swallowed a couple of —of—what are these things that work while you sleep?"

"Gas meters! Great Scott, you've never swallowed a couple of those!"

FROM A PASTOR'S DIARY

Rev. Dr. Geo. B. Shaw Writes of His First Impressions of North Loup.

A VERY INTERESTING LETTER.

Former Plainfield Pastor Addresses Religious Editor Whom He Succeeded in Nebraska.

From his new home at North Loup, Nebraska, Rev. Dr. George B. Shaw, until recently pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, this city, has written an interesting letter to the Sabbath Recorder, which is herewith reproduced, with the remarks made by the editor of that paper, Rev. Mr. Gardner, who was his predecessor at North Loup:

"I remember making a promise to some one at Plainfield that as soon as we were settled in Nebraska I would write something for the Recorder. I have forgotten to whom the promise was made, but it must be kept. Usually one wonders what to write, but this time it is what not to write. There are so many things of interest that I hardly know where to begin, and certainly would not know where to end.

"Suppose I give you an outline history of two days in the life of the pastor of North Loup church. Of course, there are hundreds of Seventh-day Baptist people in this village whose lives are equally interesting, and there are three hundred and sixty-six days in this year.

"Last Sabbath was the pastor's birthday (1865). The sun rose bright and late—as bright as usual and as late as usual. The sun has shone bright every day that I have been in Nebraska, and it has been thirty minutes later than my good watch all this time. It is all right at evening, but in the morning! Yes, it seems like a waste of good coal oil. The sunsets and sunrises in this country are very beautiful; but as Frank Robbins said one cold morning last week, 'We won't have the sun-dogs here that we used to have in Minnesota.

His First Sunday.

"The Sabbath of January 25 was a beautiful day. The church was filled with people very soon after 10:30. Considering the fact that so many families come so great a distance, they are very prompt. (It evidently is not a case of distasce, as one could tell by a little study). Geographically it is like having in one congregation the churches of Alfred, 2d Alfred, Hartsville, Hornell, Andover, and Independence. [Mr. Editor, if I have that too large, suppose you cut off a few churches. You will know.—Well, brother Shaw, we will let it stand.—Ed.]

Two hundred and fifty people will fill the room here. [This is pretty small. Could you not crowd in another fifty with chairs?—Ed.] Mrs. Grace Clement Hutchins is our chorister, and Mrs. Esther Davis Babcock is our organist. We have a chorus choir. The Sabbath-school comes immediately after the preaching service. There were one hundred and seventy-seven present. The superintendent is Charles Thorngate. A class of boys calling themselves the 'Bereans' (See Acts 17:10-11), and who have the pastor for their teacher, go to the parsonage for thirty minutes given to the lesson study. This week Elder Oscar Babcock reviewed the lesson for the school.

The Day's Routine.

The Junior Christian Endeavor Society meets at 3 p. m., with Mr. Walter Rood as superintendent. This week there were present one hundred and fourteen Juniors and sixteen visitors,—a very few more than usual. The class of Mrs. Raymond Bee had charge of the opening exercises for the day. I wish the readers of the Recorder could look in some Sabbath afternoon on this crowd.

"The Senior Society meets at 4 o'clock, immediately after the dismissal of the Juniors. I will have to guess at the attendance here, will venture to say fifty. Ray Thorngate is president. Dr. G. M. Burdick was leader that day, and the subject was 'Home Missions.' Fred Green led the singing and Mrs. Green played the organ. There was special msic by five small girls, Edna Lewis, Ena Lewis, Gladis Hutchins, Helen Lewis and Maude Green. The interest was so great that after the meeting was dismissed, a group of about twenty stayed for half an hour in earnest discussion of what we could do to spread the knowledge of Christ in Nebraska and elsewhere. It was already dark when farmers, who had come to attend Junior Endeavor meeting, started back to their farms and chores.

The Pastor's Surprise.

"The pastor hurried home to find that his family had surprised him by having company to supper, Mrs. Mary Badger and the family of our cousin, Dr. Burdick. As soon as supper was over and the candles (birthday) blown out, the Doctor and I had to hurry back to the church, for a special meeting had been called to consider what we could do to help toward paying the debt of the Tract Society. Brother Burdick, who is the son of Eld. George W. Burdick, of Welton, Iowa, is church clerk. Many friends at Milton, Chicago, Little Genesee and elsewhere will remember him. The moderator is Mr. E. J. Babcock, a son of Rev. Oscar Babcock. He is a lawyer and will be remembered at Alfred and elsewhere. At this meeting a committee was appointed, consisting of Raymond Bee, Herbert Green, John Goodrich and Ray Thorngate.

After this meeting the pastor goes home again and is surprised to find the place occupied by a crowd of Bereans who had not forgotten that it was their teacher's birthday. The speech that Ross Davis made when he gave to the pastor a bouquet of flowers and a nicely bound and illustrated copy of the 'Deserted Village' was very short, but very much to the point. I don't know why Mrs. Dr. Hemphill (Cora Hurley) came with these boys. She said they belonged to her class in Junior. I do know that she kept the pastor's wife so busy talking or listening that she forgot to pass the cake till after the boys had gone. The pastor fell asleep that Sabbath night saying over this passage of Scripture: 'In it thou shalt not do any work.'

His Calling List.

"Sunday forenoon was spent in the pastor's study with Mr. C. J. Rood in making out from the church books, an alphabetically arranged, vest-pocket directory of the congregation. This list, when completed, will have about five hundred names, including, of course the non-resident members. This was the second half-day thus spent, and the work is about completed. The pastor is making good headway in mastering the names and faces of the new congregation.

After this work was done we went for a short drive with Roy Lewis, after a span of ponies that a man from Ord wanted to sell.

"At noon the pastor's family all went out to dinner at the home of Elder Oscar Babcock. Elder Babcock was by a chance of good fortune, the first Seventh-Day Baptist that I saw when I came to North Loup, and it is a matter of curious interest, as Professor Whitford would say, that we ate our last meal in Plainfield in the home of Rev. A. H. Lewis (of his son-in-law, J. E. Kimball), and that our first meal by invitation here was in the home of Mrs. Lewis' sister, Mrs. Babcock. She reminds us of Mrs. Lewis. In making these observations we do not count the home of Merton and Bertha Burdick, where we were welcomed from the train, dusty, tired and car-sick. The skating was good on the creek Sunday afternoon, and I can think of no good excuse for my mentioning that fact, unless it be that when the pastor went home and sat down with his Bible to prepare for an evening service, he was glad the girls were having such a good time down on the ice back of the parsonage meadow.

In Myra Valley.

"As evening drew on, the telephone began to ring with preparation for the Young People's Endeavor meeting at the Baker schoolhouse. This is in Myra Valley, two miles south and four miles west of this village. Those who went over from here were Mr. and Mrs. Claud Hill, Mildred Green, Esther Rood, Mamie Van Zant, Chloe Green, Marcia Rood, Maude Davis, Celia Hoshaw, Fern Barber, Hazel Crandall, Myra Thorngate, Lora Black, Charles Rood, Ezra Bennett, Walter Rood, James Johnson, Archie Moulton, Orson Davis and the pastor. If there are names omitted, it is because I have forgotten to put them down and not because I did not know this company. They were about fifty in attendance, including the families of Charles White and Herbert Thorngate. It was a good meeting. Walter Rood led the prayer service at the opening and the testimony meeting at the close. Claud Hill led the singing. The organ was carried along with us from North Loup and the books used were Pentecostal Hymns No. 3. Mrs. Hill played the organ. There was a solo by Myra Thorngate and a duet by Mr. Hill and Maude Davis. The pastor went on this trip with Mr. Hill. The stars have not shone so bright since I was a boy. It was late when we got home, but the pastor's wife said she had actually written three letters.

"Do you ever think about Plainfield? Yes, every chance we get.

"I wish I could remember who made me promise to write to the Recorder. It might not now be safe for people generally to know."

Griggs for Taft.

Former Attorney General John W. Griggs was in Trenton Monday night seeing old acquaintances and strengthening his fences for election as a delegate-at-large to the Republican National Convention. Mr. Griggs said his choice for the nomination for President was Secretary Taft, and that if chosen a delegate he would vote for him in convention.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Sparkling in humor, thrilling in situations, picturesque in atmosphere, magnificent in rich Oriental scenic setting and pervaded with a delicate romance of heart interest the great melodramatic masterpiece, "The Shadow Behind the Throne," which will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre this afternoon and tonight, will be without doubt one of the strongest theatrical attractions of the local season and one that will leave an impression that will make it welcome should it return this season of next.

To anyone who takes any particular interest in mystery and detection (and few there are indeed who are not interested in either), Lincoln J. Carter's latest detective drama, "Too Proud to Beg," will be the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre next Friday night, it is said can be recommended without hesitation for the story has a liberal sprinkling of both. Mr. Carter wrote this drama on an incident in the career of a detective who was for years connected with a metropolitan detective bureau. Aside from some of the thrilling climaxes and realistic situations ever seen on the stage, the play abounds in a goodly supply of gentle sentiment and solicitous humor. Prominent in the cast presenting "Too Proud to Beg" are Ritchie and Vivian Follis, Will. T. Rogers, LeRoy Lewis, C. A. Mitchell, L. Taub Brixton and many others of prominence.

In the four act melodrama, "A Race For Life," booked for a return date at the New Plainfield theatre next Saturday afternoon and night, Theodore Kremer has conspicuously and ingeniously elevated the horse to the full dignity of a star, and the way that "man's best friend," in the shape of "Our Jessie," a splendid and spirited thoroughbred racer, gets there, from start to finish, is a joy and inspiring sensation to behold. The play abounds in many scenes both startling and sensational to the extreme.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Mr. Fowler's Latest.

To judge from the break by Representative Fowler before his audience at Indianapolis, on Friday evening, the comments on his methods made to the News by a prominent New York banker some weeks ago were not without foundation. The banker in question was asked by a representative of this paper what he thought of the New Jersey Representative's latest outgiving as to currency reform, and his reply, in substance, was that Mr. Fowler was too far in advance of the rest of the country in his studies of the currency problem to enable him to present anything practicable in the way of financial reform; that while he was one of the best posted men on monetary subjects, he was inclined to be so impatient of others for not following him promptly and implicity, both the public and legislators, that his usefulness as a member of Congress in that direction was much restricted; that another man who did not know so much more about it than any one else would be likely to accomplish a great deal more. He referred as well to what he was pleased to call Mr. Fowler's unfortunate manner in discussing financial or currency reform topics, and expressed regret that the New Jersey Representative from the Fifth District could not stand by one of his own good suggestions for a whole session and so enable all to catch up with him before he rushed off with some new plan for a still more radical solution of a matter which so keenly demanded conservative as well as immediate treatment.

Nothing, so far as we are aware, has so completely vindicated this criticism as the reported remarks of Mr. Fowler to the audience addressed by him at Indianapolis last Friday. Had he confined himself to recommending his latest plan for preventing national bank failures by a species of government insurance based on an assessment on the banks, it would have been extreme enough; but to make another long leap into the future of recommendation, at a time when the great need is for a law which will be effective without demanding the impracticable in the matter of legislative corporation—the forcing of the trust companies and State banks into the ranks of national institutions—was to do as much to prevent anything in the way of currency reform by his efforts at this time as may be imagined.

And, as if to make a bad matter worse, the Congressman from this State, in defiance of all that savors of fact, or diplomacy, or anything else that goes with those necessary methods, seems to have lost his head completely when, as reported, he took it upon himself to throw discredit on his legislative associates. When one reads that he wound up with the statement, "It is for you to settle this question, gentlemen, and not Congress, for Congress doesn't know enough to settle it," one knows what he could say in comment, but hesitates to do so.—Newark News.

The Difference.

"When a man's engaged to a girl," said Miss Singleton, "his idea of good hours' is to stay from 8 o'clock until any time after midnight."

"Yes," replied Mrs. Bridey, "and even after marriage the hours are the same. The only difference is that one case they are hours 'with her' and in the other 'away from her.'"—Philadelphia Press.

By KATE AND VIRGIL D. BOYLES

(Copyright by A. C. McClurg & Co., 1907.)

CHAPTER VI.

"Nothing but a Hoss Thief, Anyway."

The island teemed with early sunflowers and hints of goldenrod yet to come. The fine, white, sandy soil deadened the sound of the horses' hoofs. They seemed to be spinning through space. Under the cottonwoods it grew dusky and still.

At the toll house a dingy buckboard in a state of weird dilapidation, with a team of shaggy buckskin ponies, stood waiting. Jim drew up. Two men were lounging in front of the shanty, chatting to the toll-man.

"Hello, Jim!" called one of them, a tall, slouching fellow with sandy coloring.

"Now, how the devil did you git so familiar with my name?" growled Jim.

"The Three Bars is gettin' busy these days," spoke up the second man, with an insolent grin.

"You bet it is," bragged Jim. "When the off'cers o' the law git to sleepin' with hoss thieves and rustlers, and take two weeks to arrest a bunch of 'em, when they know prezactly where they keep thirselves, and have to have special deputies app'inted over 'em five or six times and then let most o' the bunch slip through their fingers, it's time for some one to git busy. And when Jesse Black and his gang are so desp'rit they pizen the cheif witnesses——"

A gentle pressure on his arm stopped him. He turned inquiringly.

"I wouldn't say any more," whispered Louise. "Let's get on."

The hint was sufficient, and with the words, "Right you are, Miss Reporter, we'll be gittin' on," Jim paid his toll and spoke to his team.

"Just wait a bit, will you?" spoke up the sandy man.

"What for?"

"We're not just ready."

"Well, we are," shortly.

"We arn't, and we don't care to be passed, you know."

He spoke indifferently. In deference to Louise, Jim waited. The men smoked on carelessly. The toll-man fidgeted.

"You go to hell! The Three Bars ain't waitin' on no damned hoss thieves," said Jim, suddenly.

His nervous team sprang forward. Quick as a flash the sandy man was in the buckboard. He struck the bays a stinging blow with his rawhide, and as they swerved aside he swung into the straight course to the narrow bridge of boats. In another moment the way would be blocked. With a burning oath Jim, keeping to the side of the steep incline till the river mire cut him off, deliberately turned his stanch little team squarely and crowded them forward against the shaggy buckskins. It was team against team. Louise, clinging tightly to the seat, lips pressed together to keep back any sound, felt a wild, inexplicable thrill of confidence in the strength of the man beside her.

The bays were pitifully, cruelly lashed by the enraged owner of the buckskins, but true as steel to the familiar voice that had guided them so often and so kindly, they gave not nor faltered. There was a snapping of broken wood, a wrench, a giving way, and the runabout sprang over debris of broken wheel and wagon-box to the narrow confines of the pontoon bridge.

"The Three Bars is gettin' busy!" gibed Jim over his shoulder.

"It's a sorry day for you and yours," cried the other, in black and ugly wrath.

"We ain't afraid. You're nothin' but a hoss thief, anyway!" responded Jim, gleefully, as a parting shot.

"Now what do you suppose was their game?" he asked of the girl at his side.

"I don't know," answered Louise, thoughtfully. "But I thought it not wise to say too much to them. You are a witness, I believe you said."

"Then you think they are part o' the gang?"

"I consider them at least sympathizers, don't you? They seemed down on the Three Bars."

In the Indian country at last. Mile after mile of level, barren stretches after the hill region had been left behind. Was there no end to the thirst-inspiring, monotonous, lonely reach of cacti? Prairie dogs, perched in front of their holes, chattered and scolded at them. The sun went down and a refreshing coolness crept over the hard, baked earth. Still, there was nothing but distance anywhere in all the land, and a feeling of desolation swept over the girl.

The moon came up. Then there were miles of white moonlight and lonely plain. But for some time now there has been a light in front of them. It is as if it must be a will-o'-the-wisp. They never seem to get to it. But at last they are there. The door is wide open. A pleasant odor of bacon and coffee is wafted out to the tired travelers.

"Come right in," says the cheery voice of Mary. "How tired you must be, Miss Dale. Tie up, Jim, and come in and eat something before you go. Well, you can eat again—two suppers won't hurt you. I have kept things warm for you. Your train must have been late. Yes, dad is better, thank you. He'll be all right in the morning"

CHAPTER VII.

The Preliminary.

Very early in the morning of the day set for the preliminary hearing of Jesse Black the young owner of the Three Bars rode over to Velpen. He identified and claimed the animal held over from shipment by Jim's persuasion. Brown gave possession with a rueful countenance.

"First time Billy Brown ever was taken in," he said, with great disgust.

Langford met with no interruption to his journey, either going or coming, although that good cow-puncher of his, Jim Munson, had warned him to look sharp to his pistols and mind the bridge. Jim being of a somewhat belligerent turn of mind, his boss had not taken the words with seriousness. As for the fracas at the pontoon, cowmen are touchy when it comes to a question of precedence, and it might well be that the inflammable Jim had brought the sudden storm down on his head. Paul Langford rode through the sweet early summer air without let or hindrance and looking for none. He was jubilant. Now was Williston's story verified. The county attorney, Richard Gordon, had considered Williston's story, coupled with his reputation for strict honesty, strong and sufficient enough to bind Jesse Black over to appear at the next regular term of the circuit court. Under ordinary circumstances the state really had an excellent chance of binding over; but it had to deal with Jesse Black, and Jesse Black had flourished for many years west of the river with an unsavory character, but with an almost awesome reputation for the phenomenal facility with which he slipped out of the net in which the law—in the person of its unpopular exponent, Richard Gordon—was so indefatigably endeavoring to enmesh him. The state was prepared for a hard fight. But now—here was the very steer Williston saw on the island with its Three Bars brand under Black's surveillance. Williston would identify it as the same. He, Langford, would swear to his own animal. The defense would not know he had regained possession and would not have time to readjust its evidence. It would fall down and hurt itself for the higher court, and Dick Gordon would know how to use any inadvertencies against it—when the time came. No wonder Langford was lighthearted. In all his arrogant and unhampered career he had never before received such an affront to his pride and his sense of what was due to one of the biggest outfits that ranged cattle west of the river. Woe to him who had dared tamper with the concerns of Paul Langford of the Three Bars.

Williston drove in from the Lazy S in ample time for the mid-day dinner at the hotel—the hearing was set for 2 o'clock—but his little party contented itself with a luncheon prepared at home and packed neatly and appetizingly in a tin bucket. It was not likely there would be a repetition of bad meat. It would be poor policy. Still, one could not be sure, and it was most important that Williston ate no bad meat that day.

Gordon met them in the hot, stuffy little parlor of the hotel.

"It was good of you to come," he said to Louise, with grave sincerity.

"I didn't want to," confessed Louise, honestly. "I'm afraid it is too big and lonesome for me. I am sure I should have gone back to Velpen last night to catch the early train had it not been for Mary. She is so—good."

"The worst is over now that you have conquered your first impulse to fly," he said.

"I cried, though. I hated myself for it, but I couldn't help it. You see I never was so far from home before."

He was an absorbed, hard-working lawyer. Years of contact with the plain, hard realities of rough living in a new country had dried up, somewhat, his stream of sentiment. Maybe the source was only blocked with debris, but certainly the stream was running dry. He could not help thinking that a girl who cries because she is far from home had much better stay at home and leave the grave things which are men's work to men. But he was a gentleman and a kindly one, so he answered quietly, "I trust you will like us better when you know us better," and, after a few more commonplaces, went his way.

"There's a man," said Louise, thoughtfully, on the way to McAllister's office. "I like him, Mary."

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Feb. 23, 1908.
By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—The foreign mission work of our denomination; a survey.—Rom. x, 5-15.

The argument of Paul the apostle to the gentiles in this portion of his greatest epistle is clearly in favor of foreign missions. In the opening part of the chapter he expresses his deep interest in the salvation of his countrymen. "Brethren, my heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is that they might be saved." He then goes on to show that the salvation of the soul may be accomplished through faith in Christ and confession of Christ, and, since salvation is "to every one who believeth," it is equally efficient both for the Jew and the Greek. "There is no difference between the Jew and the Greek, for the same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon Him, for whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved." But the Greek or gentile world had not had the opportunity of believing on Christ and calling upon Him because they had not heard of Him; hence arises his series of questions, ending with "How shall they hear without a preacher?" and again, "How shall they preach except they be sent?"—sent of God through His church. God calls missionaries to their work, but the church, at least today, must send them to their places of labor and support them in their work.

The plain duty of the church, therefore, is to send missionaries unto the foreign as well as to the home field. Up until a little over a century ago the modern church neglected this plain duty, but then the modern movement in foreign missions began. It began, like most successful movements, in "the day of small things." Those who were in favor of the worldwide movement were few in number compared to those who were opposed to it. The difficulties in the way were almost insurmountable. Some countries were closed to the entrance of Christian missionaries. The difficulties and dangers of travel to distant shores can scarcely be appreciated today, when the Atlantic is crossed in a little over five days and a trip around the entire world is no longer a novelty. Months were required for communications between home and foreign lands. It required stout hearts in those days to undertake such arduous toils and labors, to make such sacrifices and to run the risks of treacherous climates, deadly diseases and frequent native opposition and persecution. But God picked His men, His disciples sent them, and the result today is that every country and clime is open to the gospel messengers. In every land "the gospel's joyful sound" has been heard, and every great Christian denomination is putting forth tremendous efforts to win the world for Christ.

In the early years of this great movement much confusion and lack of progress resulted from the overlapping of denominational labors. Indeed, until very recent years this was sadly the case. But today the world is practically divided among the various Christian denominations, and even where they occupy the same fields co-operation and not competition exists. Denominational differences are minimized, and the aim of all is that all men everywhere may hear the gospel and through hearing believe in Christ and, believing in Him, call upon Him and be saved.

This modern arrangement of foreign mission work makes it possible for the members of each denomination to become familiar with the work of its denomination. Christian Endeavorers especially should be thoroughly posted upon all subjects concerning the missionary fields and laborers of its church. In such a meeting as the topic suggests the various fields should be reviewed in connection with the names and the lives of the missionaries and the features of their work surveyed, such as evangelistic, educational and medical work. To know all that is being done by the entire church may be impossible, but no intelligent Endeavorer need lack full information concerning his own denomination's work. Such information will inspire a new interest in and zeal for missions. It will make our prayers more definite and therefore more prevailing before God. It will increase our gifts to missions through our denominational agencies, and it is through these that we should give to this great cause. Moreover, it will increase our joy in giving and multiply the blessings that return to us as a result of our efforts to win the world for Christ.

C. E. Greetings to Sankey.

Sixty-seven years ago Ira D. Sankey, the world famed evangelist in gospel song and coworker with D. L. Moody, was born. Bedridden and stricken with blindness, but with firm faith and a buoyant, confident spirit, he celebrated his sixty-seventh birthday in his Brooklyn home, receiving the greetings and congratulations of his worldwide army of friends. Among the messages sent him is this one from an army of admiring Christian Endeavorers:

Kirkwood, N. Y., Aug. 28.
To Mr. Ira B. Sankey, 148 South Oxford street, Brooklyn, N. Y.:
Greetings and wishes for happy birthday. I Peter i, 7, 8.

Feb. 23: "The power house of faith." "If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth."
By REV. WALTER J. YATES, D. D.
Passages for reference—Mark xi, 20-25; Rom. iv, 1-9.

Faith is not foolishness, nor is it even remotely related to it. It is not even credulity. It is not independent of evidence, as some have seemed to think, nor is it ever irrational. The idea some have entertained that the holding to an absurdity was a sign of great faith has no basis in the Christian Scriptures and should have no place in Christian thought. Faith does not and cannot make the incredible to be credible, the irrational to be reasonable. Nor can either one ever become matter of faith.

Faith is assurance of a fact. It is more than intellectual assent to the truthfulness of an idea. It is confidence in its accuracy. It has an element of feeling in it, of personal warmth of emotion toward it. But there is still more than this to faith. There is in it a distinct element of personal choosing. There is evidence which appeals to the whole man—intellect, sensibility and will. It may not be sufficient to convince another, but it does appeal efficiently to this one.

This is not nearly as mysterious as many would have us think. Most of our knowledge is not such as will admit of true demonstration, yet we are not less certain of it on that account. We believe vastly more than we can prove. Nearly all of the higher things of our nature are subjects of faith rather than of demonstrable certainty. The realm of personal life is particularly the sphere of faith. Who ever thought of asking a demonstration of love, as one would perform a mathematical problem? We take it on trust.

Religion in its true nature is loving confidence in God. This is far from mere intellectual assent to the truth of any doctrine or system of truth. It has a basis in some sort of knowledge of God and self and the world. Abram had a very definite idea of God and of his own relation to God and His world. Very likely he did not greatly differ in this respect from many others around him, except in one small particular. He had a glimpse of a truth which others did not see and so might be called a seer among men. He thought of God as a friend. Does that seem a small difference? It had mighty consequences.

He not only thought. He felt also. He felt that God was a friend, and then he felt friendly toward God. This being so, he went a little further. He put all to the touch of that thought and feeling. He ventured all, risked all. What he knew to be God's thought he accepted as true, was glad in it and acted upon it unwaveringly.

Did God say get away from native land into a strange land? He went, believing God would lead him and take care of him. That was faith. Did God promise him an heir, a son, when it seemed unnatural? He did not pit his ignorance of nature against God's knowledge, as so many now do, but in his simplicity believed God could do as He promised and just expected the son and was not surprised when he was given.

When God demanded the sacrifice of that same son he did not withhold him, but believed God could raise him from the dead if necessary to keep His word and purpose. In fact, the faith of Abraham was a childlike confidence in God which led him into simple obedience to His commands.

"Have faith in God," not so you can curse some barren fig tree, but so you can heave mountains of evil into oceans of oblivion. Have faith so you may discover new truths of God, as have all the prophets through all the ages, so your heart may rejoice and all your powers may do His bidding.

True Beauty.

That is not the most perfect beauty which in public would attract the greatest observation, nor even that which the statuary would admit to be a faultless piece of clay kneaded up with blood. But that is true beauty which has not only a substance, but a spirit, a beauty that we must intimately know justly to appreciate, a beauty lighted up in conversation, where the mind shines, as it were, through its casket, where, in the language of the poet, "the eloquent blood spoke in her cheeks, and so distinctly wrought that we might almost say her body thought." An order and a mode of beauty which the more we know the more we accuse ourselves for not having before discovered those thousand graces which bespeak that their owner has a soul—this is that beauty that never cloys, possessing charms as resistless as the fascinating Egyptian for which Antony wisely paid the bauble of the world—a beauty like the rising of his own Italian suns, always enchanting, never the same.—Rev. C. C. Colton.

Happiness Makers.

Great hearts are those whose presence is sunshine. Their coming changes our climate. They oil the bearings of life; they make right living easy. Blessed are the happiness makers! They represent the best forces of civilization.—Newell Dwight Hillis.

The Happiest Heart.

Who drives the horses of the sun
Shall lord it but a day;
Better the lowly deed were done
And kept the humble way.

The rust will find the sword of fame,
The dust will hide the crown;
Aye, none shall nail so high his name
Time will not tear it down.

The happiest heart that ever beat
Was in some quiet breast
That found the common daylight sweet
And left to heaven the rest.

MAYOR'S TEAM DEFEATED

The "Myrtle Avenues", Captained by Borough's Chief Executive, Bested.

SOCIETY BOWLED AT CLUB.

Victories by 43 and 35 Pins Give Captain H. C. Krebs' Team the Title In Cocked-Hat Bowling.

Mayor Townsend's "Myrtle Avenues," the aspirants for the Park Club title in cocked-hat competition, were decisively defeated at the club alleys last night, when the "All Americans," captained by County Supervisor Henry C. Krebs, took two straight games by scores of 204-161 and 232-197. The "All Americans" challenged Mayor Townsend's team after the "Myrtle Avenues" had trimmed a team called the "Washington Avenues," about a week ago. Their line-up included some of the most prominent members of the club, and Hugh Fox, Townsend Rushmore and Rollin Rice, along with Monroe H. Long, a member of the club's Central Journal team, took smash after smash at the three pins as members of H. C. Krebs' team. With Mayor Townsend's "Myrtle Avenues" were former Senator Charles A. Reed, Superintendent James R. Joy, of the North Plainfield schools, and Augustus VanDeventer.

The Mayor did not bowl with his record-breaking form of a week ago, and the best score he made was a 27, the highest of the night for his team. For the "All Americans," Rollin Rice did the best, taking the evening's honors with a 39 in the second game. The summaries follow:

BISMARCKS BEAT GRANTS; TIED FOR FOURTH MONEY

The victorious Grants and the hard-working Bismarcks met in their final tourney series at Campbell's alleys last night, the latter team winning two out of the three games. By so doing the Bismarcks tied the Brian Borus for fourth place and once more have a chance for some of the prize money soon to be handed out. It would have made no difference in the Grants' standing if they lost all three games as they cinched first position by defeating the Brian Borus last week.

The Bismarcks went into last night's series with the determination of taking all three tallies but their hopes were dashed to the ground at the outset. The Grants had it handed to them on a platter by the bare margin of four pins. Captain Britton was the last man up and a one pin spare was all that was necessary to win for his side but he blew it. In the second try the Grants were buried under a surplus of seventy-three pins and the third by seventy. If the Bismarcks had taken the first game they would have tied the Napoleons for third money.

Chauncey Stout was last night's star roller and walloped the timber for an average of 198.1, being the only man on either team to go over the 200 mark. Chief Kiely, who was crowding him for average by three points, dropped away from his usual game and went on the board for 177 for the three chalk-ups. Stout is accordingly certain of first average money. "Bill" Kiely made a hit with the gallery by cracking the sticks for 193 and then dropping down to 112 and 122. Tom McInerney was unable to get in the game and his average less ten was rolled against.

SMASHES FOUR RECORDS

R. J. Lawrence, of Leal's, Betters A.L.N.A. Figures in Events of Duel Meet.

23D ST., 43; PLAINFIELD, 19.

Local Association Makes Record Score Against Crack Metropolitan Athletes at New York.

Breaking four A. L. N. A. records by bettering the figures made by Y. M. C. A. eastern athletes in the 12-pound shot put, the standing broad jump, and three standing broad jumps, Russel J. Lawrence, of Leal's School, won three firsts in the duel indoor meet between the Twenty-third street Y. M. C. A. and the local association at New York last night. The Plainfielders were defeated 43-19, but have the record of scoring the most points ever made by an association team against the Twenty-third street branch athletes.

Lawrence's jump of 10 feet 4½ inches in the standing broad jump, is 1¼ inches better than the Y. M. C. A. National A. L. N. A. record held by N. Shubett, of New Orleans, and also beats the Y. M. C. A. Eastern A. L. N. A., which was 10 feet 2½ inches. Aside from these two records, Lawrence put the shot 48 feet 8½ inches, beating A. B. Gunn's jump of 46 feet 8 inches, and thus establishing new figures for the Eastern A. L. N. A. record of the association. In the three standing broad jumps, the young Plainfielder again broke a record, clearing 31 feet 8 inches by his jump, and bettetring C. R. Toothhacker's record jump of 30 feet 6¾ inches by a good margin. Murphy, a Twenty-third Street man, broke the national record for the 220-yard run, clipping three-fifths of a second off the former titleholder's figure.

The Plainfield boys added a point to their score in the 25-yard dash, when W. S. Schoonmaker took third place. Schoonmaker also showed up well in the 220-yard dash, finishing a quarter of a second worse than the record broken by Murphy. William Banks got fourth in the standing broad, clearing 9 feet 9½ inches. The relay team of the local association won second place in the twentieth century relay race between the two teams of the dual meet.

P.H.S. TRACK MEN TO BEGIN RELAY PRACTISE

Having received invitations from the University of Pennsylvania, Princeton, Rutgers and Trenton to enter relay teams in the scholastic games to be held by the various colleges in the spring, athletes of the Plainfield High School have begun training in running with the idea of entering relay teams in these meets. At a recent meeting of the school athletic association, it was decided to organize a track team as a department of the athletic activities of the school. Lindsey Best, of the school faculty, will act as track coach for the school boys and a big string of promising candidates is impatient for good weather to come so that they may begin practise. The out-door running practise will be on the Driving Park track, but several of the candidates, who belong to the Y. M. C. A., will use the indoor track for preparatory work.

The candidates who have responded to the call for track material include Guion Fountain, Chauncey Murphy, Charles Loizeaux, Marcus Dey, James Mauger, Pierre Beken, Thomas Ricketts, Cornelius Schenck, Stanley Parsons, Howard Runyon, C. Stanley Robins, Russel Morris, Albert Hardcastle, Stanley Karner, LeRoy Woodhull, Moses Rubenstein and Orlando Lounsbury.

Nebraska's Sentiment.

F. A. Truell, of Lincoln, Nebraska, in a letter to his brother, John R. Truell, of this city, yesterday, stated that the Republicans of that State had endorsed Mr. Roosevelt for another term, and that among the Democrats the sentiment was solid for the nomination of Mr. Bryan. Mr. Truell is a Republican but he predicted that the Peerless One would sweep that State if named by the Democrats.

FRENCH COLONIZATIONS SUBJECT OF HER PAPER

French Colonies in the United States and French Missions were treated in an admirable manner by Mrs. Robert Lowry in a paper read before the Women's Home Missionary Society of the First Baptist church at their meeting held yesterday afternoon in the lecture room. The seventeenth century when the French colonized in Canada was described by Mrs. Lowry as Canada's heroic age, Champlain, La Salle, Du Lac and others accomplishing wonderful deeds of energy and persistence. The early days of St. Croux, Port Royal and the founding of the city of Quebec preceded Mrs. Lowry's story of Acadia, the poetic country described by Longfellow in his poem Evangeline, an extract from which was read by Mrs. Lowry.

La Salle's explorations of the Ohio and Mississippi rivers as told by Mrs. Lowry were full of interest, as well as the colonization of Louisianna by the French and some incidents of the Louisianna purchase by the United States in 1803.

The work of the French Jesuits in Canada was referred to and the statement made that the church of Rome shaped the character and destiny of the French colonies. The labors of Protestant missionaries among the French population of this country concluded the paper and a plea made for the evangelization of foreigners as they come to this country.

The connection of the First Baptist church with French missions in the past was shown by a brief account, given by Mrs. B. J. Shreve of the first woman's missionary society established in the church nearly a half century ago in aid of the Grand League Mission in Canada. The depaper was led by Mrs. J. A. Chambliss.

AUTO OWNERS' CONFERENCE WITH STATE AUTHORITIES.

Governor Fort and Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen were in conference at Trenton Monday with a delegation of automobilists who called upon the Governor to protest against some of the provisions in the amendments to the automobile law introduced last week by Senator Frelinghuysen. Among those in the delegation were W. C. Crosby, of East Orange; W. H. Green, of Newark; F. B. Moore and Wilbur F. Sadler, of Trenton, and Dr. Frank Ard, of Plainfield, J. B. Smith, Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, was also present.

The delegation entered a protest against the schedule of licenses and registration fees in the Frelinghuysen bill, which they contended were prohibitive in several instances. Senator Frelinghuysen at first held his ground, but when he discovered that the Governor was not favorable to such rates as his bill proposed he consented to a compromise. It was agreed that a new schedule should be prepared and passed upon later. It was also decided to amend the bill by providing for a manufacturers' license of $25 a year entitling a manufacturer to five license tags.

The question of tourist licenses was taken up, but both the Governor and Senator Frelinghuysen were of the opinion that while New Jersey wished to extend all the courtesies possible to other States it could not under present circumstances agree to recognize their licenses.

The Frelinghuysen automobile law will be put up to a test if the conclusions reached by the New Jersey Automobile Trade Association in Newark Monday afternoon bear fruit.

The dealers met in the rooms of the New Jersey Automobile and Motor Club, and decided to call upon every member of the trade in the State to contribute $1 to a fund which is to be used in a friendly suit intended to test every clause of the measure.

PERSONAL.

Dr. George S. Unpuy, formerly of Woodland avenue, who has been living at White Plains, N. Y., for some time and who has been seriously ill, is reported as improving slowly. While a resident here he was the senior warden at St. Stephen's church.

Miss Mary Steiner, of Somerset street, returned yesterday from St. Paul, Minn., where she has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Charles G. French, since last June. The trip was a delightful one and the change of climate proved beneficial to Miss Steiner.

Silver Company to Move Away.

The W. H. Rogers Silver Company, of Plainfield, N. J., is preparing to move its business to Munice, Indiana, and the plant on North avenue, which has been used for the manufacture of silver during the past two years will be sold. The reasons given for the change are said to be that certain materials used in the business are more easily obtained at Munice than in this part of the country.

PUTTING IN SHAPE TEMPORARY HEADQUARTERS OF POLICE.

Employes of the W. T. Kirk Company today began the work of removing the steels cells at police headquarters on East Front street to the temporary quarters in the Boys' Club building on Sycamore street. They will be kept there and court will be held in the building until the city provides other accommodations.

The removal is made necessary because of the present police building being bought by Henry Haurand, who proposes to remove his saloon business there. The city has planned to erect a police station and court building at East Fourth and Sycamore streets. The site has already been acquired but the amount needed for the structure has not yet been appropriated. The plans drawn by Tracy and Swartout as approved by the police board and will be submitted to the Common Council for approval at the special meeting Monday night.

PRESIDENT HONORS JERSEY

Governor and Apostle of Reform are Roosevelt's Guests of Honor.

BRIGGS DINES "HAS-BEENS."

Brilliant Affair at White House—"Great Conspiracy" at the Willard House.

Governor J. Franklin Fort and State Senator Colby, of New Jersey, were guests of President and Mrs. Roosevelt at dinner at the White House at Washington, D. C., last night. Governor Fort was accompanied by Mrs. Fort. The dinner was in the state dining room and the table was handsomely decorated with cinerais and white carnations. Mrs. Roosevelt wore a handsome gown of yellow satin, trimmed with white lace. After dinner the guests were entertained by Miss Beatrice Herford, who was heard in several monologues.

Those present at the dinner were: The President and Mrs. Roosevelt, the German ambassador and Baroness von Sterberg, Senator and Mrs. Crane, Senator and Mrs. Warner, Governor and Mrs. John Franklin Fort, Representative and Mrs. Hepburn, Representative and Mrs. Townsend, Representative and Mrs. Cockran, Representative and Mrs. Washburn, the Hon. Benito Legarda, the Hon. Pablo Ocampo de Leon, Professor and Mrs. Rudolph Leonhart, Civil Engineer and Mrs. Robert E. Peary, Dr. and Mrs. Nicholas Murray Butler, former Governor and Mrs. John L. The Taft managers have been worried over conditions in Governor Fort's constituency. The idea of having Governor Fort on the ticket with Taft had been under consideration ever since the governor made some remarks about regulating corporations in his inaugural address, but according to what was said in political circles in Washington yesterday one of the main reasons why he is wanted on the Taft side is to obtain his influence in an effort to have the Jersey delegates to the Republican national convention instructed for Taft. That Governor Fort can do this work is doubted by politicians at Washington who are familiar with the New Jersey situation.

At midnight last night it was learned that the diners at the Briggs dinner were holding a conference, the nature of which could not be ascertained.

MRS. HAND'S BROTHER KILLED IN LANDSLIDE

Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Hand and Mrs. Hand's sister, Mrs. McClellan, returned this morning from New Bedford, Mass., where they attended the funeral service of Mrs. Hand's brother, James Gourley, who was killed last Saturday in a landslide at Sullivan's quarry in that State, where he was employed as a foreman.

The unfortunate man was buried beneath fifty tons of rock and earth that were jarred loose by a blast. The man was alive when taken out, but he expired within a few minutes, never regaining consciousness. He was terribly crushed by the falling stone. William Barriteau, who was working with Mr. Gourley at the time, had a narrow escape from death. Mr. Gourley had been employed at Sullivan's quarry for fifteen years. He leaves a wife and three daughters.

Judge William Newcorn was counsel for Adams.

M'GINNISS IS ARRAIGNED

Alleged Forger Takes Advantage of That Convenient Plea of "Non Vult."

HIS SENTENCE IS DEFERRED.

John Kennedy's Trial Now on—Negro Found Guilty of Assault and Battery.

"Kid" McGinnniss, alias William Browning, who was arrested here recently charged with passing forged checks, was arraigned in the Union County Court, this morning and through his counsel, A. A. Stein, changed his plea from not guilty to that of non vult. Mr. Stein asked that the prisoner be sentenced at once. This Judge Atwater declined to do, stating that he wished to ascertain more about the case. McGinniss may be sentenced tomorrow.

BAKER VOEHL SUES NEWARK FLOUR FIRM

Suit has been started in the New Jersey Supreme Court by George Voehl, a baker of this city, against the firm of Cornelius Smith and Harry W. Morehouse, of Newark, for $540. In the declaration filed Voehl states that he entered into an agreement with Smith & Morehouse to purchase from them 1,000 barrels of first spring flour. Only 600 barrels he alleges were delivered and the firm has refused to deliver the other 400.

Mr. Voehl alleges that he was compelled to purchase 400 barrels elsewhere and that they cost him $2,280, and if they had been delivered by the defendants the costs under his contract would have been but $1,740. He claims that the difference of $540, that he had to pay in excess should be paid by the defendants. Morehouse and Smith are represented by Attorney R. S. Terhune, of Newark, and he has filed a plea denying all the statements made by Voehl.

The case will be tried before Judge Swayze at Elizabeth.

REGRETS LEADERS' WAR

Martine "Views with Alarm" the Controversy Between Smith and Davis.

LAUDS ROBERT HUDSPETH.

"Farmer-Orator" Would Be Tickled to Death If Named As Delegate to the Denver Convention.

"Farmer-Orator" James E. Martine, the past grand master of New Jersey Democracy, "views with alarm" the growing discontent with the army of the party in New Jersey and from his home at Cedar Brook farm, where he is confined by a severe attack of grip, issued a proclamation for peace, perfect peace. He declares that he has no knowledge of the merits of the war of words between former United States Senator James Smith, Jr., of Newark, and Commodore Robert Davis, of Jersey City, the two leaders of Jersey Democracy, but "has hopes" for harmony.

"I am not in politics for place, pelf or favor," said Mr. Martine today. "Democracy to me is a religion and until I pass unto the great beyond, I shall remain steadfast in my advocacy of its principles. I know of no factions in our party and I hope to be charitable to my colleagues in the fight for the supremacy of Democracy whether it be Robert Davis or James Smith, Jr.

"It is certain that Mr. Davis admires Mr. Bryan and I respect Mr. Davis for his correct estimate. He is a bright politician and a great organizer. Mr. Bryan's nomination is inevitable. Only an act of Providence can prevent it. As for the controversy between Mr. Smith and Mr. Davis I do not know anything about the argument and neither do I care to. Personally I cannot be drawn into their dispute. I have the greatest esteem for Mr. Smith. It has never been my aim to fight my friends in the Democratic ranks. My battle is with the Republican party.

"I want to add," said Mr. Martine, "that I much oppose the removal of Robert S. Hudspeth as State chairman. He has made a splendid chairman and I know of no man who could do better than he has done. In my opinion Hudspeth is a fine fellow and a man of great executive ability."

In conclusion, Mr. Martine said: "As to this talk of my being named as a delegate at large, all I have to say is that it would be a great pleasure to me if I were so honored. Should I be selected to go to Denver, you may depend upon it that I will use my voice, vote and influence in behalf of William Jennings Bryan. What I want to see in the New Jersey Democracy is the best of harmony."

Martin Automobile Company, a suit resulting from a dispute over an auto repair bill; and Dunham against the Public Service Corporation, in which the defendant company has demurred to the declaration. The action is brought by Garret Dunham to recover damages for injuries which he sustained by being thrown from a trolley car on West Front street. Leonard J. Tyman represents the Public Service Corporation and George W. V. Moy is handling Dunham's interests.

In the Ellis-Martin Automobile Company suit, the plaintiff is represented by Senator Silzer, of New Brunswick, and the defendants by former State Senator Charles A. Reed.

WIDOW DEMANDS $15,000

Mrs. Jenkins Asks Damages from Railroad for Her Husband's Death.

IN THE SUPREME COURT.

Jersey Central Fights Claim—The Trial Will Take Place Before Judge Swayze.

Papers have been filed by Craig A. Marsh in the Supreme Court in the case of Carrie J. Jenkins against the Central Railroad of New Jersey, his client seeking to recover $15,000 for the loss of her husband whom she claims was killed by the cars of the New Jersey Central Railroad in the freight yard at Elizabethport while in the performance of his duty as brakeman.

Mrs. Jenkins alleges that he was ordered to unfasten a chain connecting two cars and that the cars were apart enough for him to go between the tracks and that he did so. There was no timber or draw back on the car, it is alleged, and the cars came together without notice to him. Because of the alleged absence of the timber or draw back, it is claimed, the two trains crushed him and he was instantly killed. Mrs. Jenkins states that she has two children.

The Central Railroad through George Holmes has filed a plea denying the allegations. The case will have to be heard before Judge Swayze at Elizabeth.

NEAR-DRUNK PRISONER GETS A RUNYONIZATION

James Donnolly, an employe of a West End shop and living on Evona avenue, got about the most scathing lecture that has been handed out in the city court in a long time, this morning. The ordinary prisoner generally prefers to take a fine or sentence in preference to a mild Runyonization and the one Donnolly stood for was a triple dose.

There was no particular charge against the defendant as he was brought in by Patrolman Kelley as he put it, "to keep him from getting drunk." Donnolly got loaded up last night and started out before 6 o'clock this morning to repeat the dose. He went from saloon to saloon, a sad-faced little wife with a few-months-old baby in her arms following him about in an effort to get him home. She appealed to the cop to help her and Kelley ran him in while he was still sober. The baby's face at the time was swollen with the cold.

Donnolly was arraigned for a talking to and got it. He was hauled over the coals until his knees shook and every time he attempted to say a word in defense he was told to "shut up" in tones louder than the banging of the men removing the steel cells in the rear. The verbal volley lasted ten minutes and when it subsided Donnolly looked like a whipped cur.

"You can go now," the magistrate said in conclusion; "but if you come here again for any reason I'll make it so hot for you, you'll wish you had never seen Plainfield."

FIGHTING MAXIMUM TAX

Townsend Makes Principal Speech at Meeting of Mayors of Small Municipalities.

DEMAND REPEAL OF THE ACT.

Conference at State House in Trenton Yesterday—Arrangements Made in Favor of Radical Action.

Mayors and representatives of mayors of a few of the smaller municipalities, including Samuel Townsend, of North Plainfield, got together at the State House yesterday and decided to appeal to the governor for the relief of municipalities of a burden which they allege has been imposed upon taxing districts in the form of the maximum tax acts, one enacted in 1903 and the other in 1906.

The titles of the acts referred to are: "An act to amend an act for the collection and assessment of taxes," of April, 1903, and "An act for the reduction and legislation of the rate of taxation in the several taxing districts of this State," of April, 1906. Mayor Townsend was the principal speaker. The mayors will frame up a petition and present it to the governor. They ask for the repeal of so much of the acts as shall leave the various municipalities of the State free to impose such a tax rate for local government and improvements as may be deemed advisable by the governing bodies of the same.

In the petition reasons are set forth for the repeal of the acts. It is argued that no requirement limiting a tax rate should be made in view of the fact that it cannot be complied with. It is further contended that assessments have been jacked up higher than the true values of the properties under these laws in order that the expenses of improvements begun before the enactment of the statutes can be met.

The petitioners say that the county boards have already cut down appraisements and therefore it will be impossible to increase the assessments to pay the expenses of improvements, and under the law the rate cannot go upwards. They argue that the problem can only be solved by repealing the acts in order that a governing body can fix a rate which it believes will meet the municipality's requirements.

TWO SUITS AGAINST NEWARK REALTY CO

Suit has been started in the New Jersey Supreme Court at Trenton by Kenyon Messick, of Cranford, on an assigned claim to him from Browne & Farrand, of New York, against the Metropolitan Realty Company, of Newark, and the plaintiff asks for a judgment of $500.83 for goods sold and delivered by Browne & Farrand. Isaac P. Runyon represents the plaintiff.

DR. PARSON'S SUCCESSOR

Presiding Elder Recommends Cranford Dominie to Grace M. E. Church People.

THE BISHOP MAY APPOINT.

When Newark Conference Ends, Rev. O. J. Shoop Probably Will Take Charge of Methodism in North Plainfield.

A committee of the elders of Grace M. E. church will present the name of Rev. Orra J. Shoop, of Cranford, as successor to Dr. Charles Wesley Parsons, former pastor of the North Plainfield church, at the Methodist Conference to be held in this city April 1. Dr. Shoop is pastor of St. Paul's church at Cranford, and it is reported that he will accept the call, if it is approved by Bishop Spellmeyer.

Dr. Shoop has preached at Grace M. E. church but once. That was three or four months ago, when he was the speaker at the evening service. This was before the death of Dr. Parsons, and it was not believed that he would come permanently to this city. After the death of Dr. Parsons, Rev. Daniel Halleron, presiding elder of the Newark district, recommended Dr. Shoop's name to the elders of the church as his successor.

The official board of the church, composed of about twenty members, received the recommendation several weeks ago, and since that time, several members have been present at services in the Cranford church, hearing Dr. Shoop preach. Three days ago, the formal recommendation for the Cranford minister as pastor was sent to Bishop Spellmeyer and his cabinet. The matter will be decided by the church government officials in conference at the First M. E. church here.

BOYS GIVE TESTIMONY AT ROBINNSON HEARING.

Details of shocking crimes, which, if substantiated, make Charles Robinson, the young colored man against whom charges have been brought by parents of small boys in Dunellen and New Market, a man of abject depravity, were developed in the hearing at the New Brunswick court house yesterday afternoon and this morning. Judge Booream presided at the hearing, and up to 2 o'clock this afternoon four witnesses had been called. These were Raymond Rockefeller, aged 8; Harold Rockefeller, aged 16; James Greenhoid, aged 6, and William Marienschenk, whose father brought Robinson's alleged crimes to justice. William Huson, an 8-year-old witness, did not put in appearance, claiming that his mother would not let him come. Judge Booream has issued a bench warrant for his appearance and it will probably be served by Constable C. Wesley Blaine today.

Because of the nature of the testimony, Judge Booream cleared the court-room of those who had no interest in the case, but several people from New Market and Dunellen were present at the hearing, which will be continued tomorrow.

Colored Youth Goes to Jail.

He also acted in an unruly way when the dominie attempted to talk to him. Mr. Diggs accordingly instructed the police to rearrest him as the youth would probably forfeit the bail.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

A good-sized delegation of Dunellenites, aside from the witnesses subpoenaed from the borough, were at New Brunswick yesterday at the hearing of Charles Robinson, the colored man charged with outrages on small boys of the town. W. S. Angleman, of Plainfield, is Robinson's attorney.

The New Market Field Club is planning for a masquerade ball in the near future, and the entertainment committee in charge of the affair consists of John Thornton, Claude Penrose, Michael Evans, Richard Cooke and George W. Corriell, Jr. The date has not yet been announced.

The rubber boot proved the ark of salvation to many a Dunellenites yesterday, and there are several acrobatic tumbles reported on the ice this morning. Property owners covered their icy sidewalks with sand and ashes this morning to make the walking safer.

WOMAN FATALLY BURNED FROM LIGHTED MATCH.

Bayonne, Feb. 20.—Mrs. William Perkins, of 108 Prospect avenue, was so terribly burned last night that she died in the hospital this morning.

She had occasion to light a lamp last night, and threw the match to the floor supposing it extinguished. Unknown to her the match still flickered and set fire to the bottom of her skirt. She did not know of her danger until the flames flared up about her waist. Unable to beat out the fire, Mrs. Perkins ran to the street screaming. Several men tore off their overcoats and wrapped them about her body, smothering the flames.

The woman was terribly burned and was hurried to the hospital, where she lingered through the night in great agony. She is survived by a husband and six children.

Death in Infected Bank Notes.

New York, Fev. 20.—John McD. Hopkirk is dead as the result of handling poisoned money. Mr. Hopkirk was manager of Mills' Hotel No. 2, and from the money he handled he contracted malignant scarletina. Mr. Hopkirk acted as cashier of the hotel, in which cheap lodgings are given to the poor, and in that capacity handled hundreds of dirty, germ-laden bills coming from the slums of the city. The physicians say there is no doubt that the disease was communicated by means of these dirty bills. Mr. Hopkirk was well known in charitable work throughout the city.

One should be cautious about entering a sickroom in a state of perspiration, as the moment you become cool your pores absorb.

STOPS DRINK SALES ON PULLMAN CARS.

Philadelphia, Feb. 20.—Responding to the spreading sentiment for local option and State prohibition, and as a means of disengaging itself from many perplexities, caused by local option and prohibition laws, the Pullman Company has decided to discontinue the sale of liquor on its buffet, parlor and sleeping cars in every part of the United States, the order to go into effect as soon as the liquors now on hand can be disposed of without loss.

An order to this effect was sent out from Chicago several days ago, to various district superintendents throughout the United States. It is expected to begin in the East and to work westward, and the order may become operative in New England and the Middle States about March 1.

It is admitted by officers of the company that this step is being taken because of the direct effect the anti-saloon laws in the several States have had upon their business. Not only have the changed conditions of the last twelve months cut deeply into the profits formerly derived from this source, but on long runs liquor can be sold for only portions of the distance, and the company is constantly in danger of prosecution for law-breaking through carelessness of employes.

The trip from Philadelphia to New York furnishes an example of the problem which confronts the parlor car company. A law only recently effective in New Jersey forbids the sale of liquor on trains in that State. From Philadelphia to Morrisville the company may sell, but when the Jersey line is reached the beer and liquors must be put under lock and key.

TWENTY-YEAR-OLD HORSE SOLD FOR $1.25.

An auction was held at the old Isaac Lambert farm in Willow Grove, Tuesday afternoon. For many years a whiskey still was conducted on the property, and Auctioneer John M. C. Marsh, of Westfield, had no trouble in selling a large number of barrels. The barrels went for fifteen cents each, and the majority of the purchasers hoped to find applejack therein. All were doomed to disappointment, as only one barrel contained anything, and that was half full of vinegar. A Plainfield man bought it.

A 20-year-old horse, with but one eye, was purchased for $1.25 by the son of a Westfield butcher, who hopes to be able to dispose of the animal in the spring for at least $10. The horse is now being fed and cared for at a nearby farm. The butcher declares he will be worth more than $10 in the spring. A cow and a calf went for the small sum of $7. A hay wagon sold for $5 and a mowing machine worth at least $35 was knocked down for $4.50. An oak table, said to be over 200 years old, was sold to a collector of antiques for $5. There was a large gathering at the sale, and it was a jolly crowd. Although the prices bid were not high, Auctioneer Marsh declares the sale came out all right, and that the articles brought more than he expected.

For the first time in the history of the Church of the Heavenly Rest the rector is giving the instruction in the school instead of the superintendent. There is increased interest in consequence.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Detection as pictured in story books has to thousands of people seemed the most fascinating occupation that a man could engage in and no doubt has led to the determination on the part of many a youthful reader to firmly make up his mind that when he should reach his majority he would choose detection as a profession. The old detective stories is kept as a favorite book in the corner in many a library. Those have been superceded by Canon Doyle's "Sherlock Holmes," which William Gillette dramatized and made himself a great stage personage. It has remained for that clever author, Lincoln J. Carter, to evolve a detective play in "Too Proud to Beg" that for originality of theme and locale compares favorably with the novels of Doyle, Poe and Collins. Local theatre goers will be eager to judge Mr. Carter's correctness of theme and story when "Too Proud to Beg" is given at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow night. It is said that Mr. Carter has introduced a love interest into his drama which is an engrossing one. Especial attention is called to the fact that every bit of scenery for the production is carried by the company intact, requiring a special baggage car for its transportation. The cast, which is a capable one artistically, is also strong numerically, numbering twenty people, including the clever Follis children who do a neat specialty aside from their clever reading roles.

"A Race for Life," Theodore Kremer's melodramatic success, which the P. H. Sullivan Amusement Company will present at the New Plainfield theatre Saturday afternoon and night, is warranted to contain enough varied and intense interest and excitement to fairly satiate all comers, from the oldest members of the Jockey Club to the sucker who doesn't know the difference in points between a thoroughbred racer and a clothes-horse. Besides, thousands who never gamble on the races like to read about them and to learn something of the inside workings appertaining to the game. Kremer has got it all down fine, and will show you for the price of a ticket more than you could learn by losing a thousand dollars in the books.

Grace Elliston, leading woman for Dustin Farnum in "The Rector's Garden," the new play by Byron Ongley, which Henry B. Harris will present for a single performance at the New Plainfield theatre Monday night, was last seen in New York as Shirley Rossmore in "The Lion and the Mouse," which part she created in 1906, and in which she scored an emphatic hit. Miss Elliston, while being one of the most important leading women in America, has appeared since her advancement to leading roles, almost exclusively in New York city. It is said that in the new play she has one of the very best roles of her stage career.

David B. Gally will appear at the New Plainfield theatre next Tuesday night in Walker Whiteside's great comedy success, "We Are King." This play has been the most successful romantic comedy of many seasons, and the theatre-going public of this city will be delighted to hear the announcement of its coming.

Oberhoff declared to a jury that he is permanently injured. He said his eyes are effected, his hearing is bad and that he has been suffering from nervous prostration.

Extensive alterations are being made to the Inlet pavilion, Atlantic City, by the Pennsylvania Railroad. The railroad has plans out for the erection of a building following the scheme of the Cliff House, San Francisco, at a cost of half a million, but it looks, from temporary improvements now being made, as if this operation will not be made for the coming summer.

Mayor Lincoln, of Gloucester City, yesterday, while walking down Market street, discovered two able-bodied men under the influence of liquor and unable to navigate. There being no officer in sight at the time, he hailed Batzel's ice wagon and loaded the two men into it, and they cooled out while being taken to the city hall, where they were locked up for a hearing.

Thieves broke into the Lochiel Hotel, Atlantic City, William Muhrad, who is an active member of the Leeds Club, Philadelphia, proprietor, and while they were engaged in looting the place were surprised by Muhlrad and were put to rout. SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

According to foreign advices Stewart Maiden is the latest Scotch golfer who has decided to seek fame and fortune in the United States. Maiden is a Carnoustie amateur and a good player. It is said that he intends to become a professional over here. Carnoustie is the native heath of such well known "pros" as Alec Smith, Willie Smith and George Low.

Jerome D. Travers, the national amateur champion, has refused an invitation to play at Pinehurst. He also had a chance to go to Mexico recently with Archie Graham, of Paterson, and Harry Osborne, of Newark, but had to decline that offer as well. Travers had a round of the Montclair links on Saturday, the first in several weeks.

Judging by the action of the United States Golf Association in the election of links for their women's championship tournaments, missionary work is necessary. Following the former's award to Chevy Chase came the announcement that the Western body had decided to give its women's tournament to the St. Louis Country Club. There are comparative few women golfers of prominence in the St. Louis section.

The United States Golf Association has ordered printed for distribution 1,500 copies of the two hundred various rulings made by the St. Andrews rules of golf committee in answer to queries put to it by players who were in a quandary as to the meaning of the rules.

One of the lowest eighteen hole records returned in many months was recently credited to Willie Anderson at the Florida Country Club. Anderson went out in 34 and home in 30. The feature of the round were two 2s, the last being at the fourteenth hole, which is 211 yards long.

BASEBALL.

Within less than two months the barrier will be sprung on the long baseball race of 1908, the final heat bringing together the winners of the American and National leagues for the championship of the world. Since the curtain was rung down on the season of 1907 many changes have been made in the sixteen teams composing the two leagues. The Chicago Cubs start the year with nearly all the same men who captured the world's championship last fall, but that is only natural, because Frank Chance is satisfied that they can't be improved upon. There are many new faces, however, on all the other teams. Every city is already rooting for its own team and telling how it will win the pennant.

President Ebbets of the Brooklyn Baseball Club said yesterday that he wanted a first class fielder, and wanted him so badly that he was willing to pay $5,000. The infield and pitching staff suit him to perfection, and Harry Lumley and Billy Maloney fill the bill, but there is a bad hole to be filled in the other outfield position. The Superbas' infield will be made up something like this: Tim Jordan, first base; Whitey Alperman, second base; Lewis, shortstop, and Tommy Sheehan, the old Pirate, in Casey's place at third base. The pitchers include Scanlon, Strieklett, Rucker, Bell, Pastorious and two or three others.

James J. Corbett, who likes to talk baseball when pugilism and the stage are not under discussion, says that Roger Bresnahan is not only the best catcher in the country but he is also a better ball player in every way than the late Buck Ewing. But veteran ball fans who remember Ewing in his prime will probably take exception to Corbett's statement, for they will insist that Ewing, in the first place, was a steadier catcher and a better thrower than Bresnahan, while as a leader he was in a class by himself. Ewing was also a phenomenal batsman and base runner, also a fine general player. Bresnahan is a great ball player, but few will be willing to place him above Ewing in baseball's hall of fame.

Catcher Street, who will be with the Washingtons this year, has a world's record for catching games in the Pacific Coast League. He played with the San Francisco club last year, and in eight months he caught 179 championship games. The previous record was 178 games. When Street made his record there was a week of playing left, but he was satisfied to quit then and there. He was tried out by Cincinnati several years ago, but went back to the Coast.

Hugh Sweeney, of Liberty street, who recently underwent an operation is steadily regaining his strength. He expects to return to the Plainfield Business College on March 1.

The Women's Relief Corps will hold a lunch-box social and entertainment in G. A. R. Hall tonight.

Plainfield, N. J., February 20, 1908.

Mr. Smith ought to understand that such fine irony is all lost on the Hudson statesman. Personalities appear to be Mr. Davis' limit.

It is quite certain that Senator Philander Knox's press agent is earning his salary if not producing the desired results in New Jersey.

After all it doesn't matter much whether the Nebraskan gets the Jersey delegation, or for that matter the nomination, for he will never be President.

FINE SILVER LOVING CUP FOR WARREN'S ORGANIST

After nineteen years' continuous service as organist at Warren chapel, Charles D. Wheeler resigned his position on January 1 and in recognition of his faithful work the members and friends presented him with a handsome solid silver loving cup, last night, following the weekly prayer meeting. The affair was a complete surprise to him.

Although Mr. Wheeler has not been organist since the first of the year, Mrs. J. O. McKelvey having taken his place, he has been assisting in the choir. It was planned to have him at the chapel last night and despite the stormy weather a company of thirty people was present. Immediately following the prayer service, Rev. J. O. McKelvey made a few remarks referring to the long and faithful service of Mr. Wheeler, to whom he presented the loving cup. He said that its sterling composition was typical of Mr. Wheeler's qualities and that the cup expressed the affection and regard on the part of all members of the chapel for him. Mr. Wheeler made a graceful response.

The cup is of good size and is suitably engraved.

HENRY VANDER VEER HODGE DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS.

Henry Vander Veer Hodge, a well-known resident of Somerville, who had many friends in this city, died yesterday at his home in the former place. He was thirty-seven years old and had been ill a long time.

Mr. Hodge was born in Somerville and always lived there. He was at one time employed by the Laire Hardware Company here and afterward was a travelling salesman. He is survived by a wife and daughter, his father, one sister and four brothers. The latter are Peter B. Hodge, the local druggist; G. T. and Meyers Hodge, of Somerville, and Charles P. Hodge, of Point Pleasant.

The funeral will be held at his late home on Cliff street, Somerville, Saturday afternoon at 2:30.

Arranging for Pastor's Reception.

It was decided to hold the affair on Tuesday night, March 10. Mrs. S. St. John McCutchen was made general chairman of all committees. KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS IN ANNUAL SESSION

The opening of the forty-first annual meeting of the New Jersey Grand Lodge, Knights of Pythias, at Trenton yesterday, was attended by almost 400 delegates from all parts of the State, including some from this city. The annual session of the Pythian Sisterhood, the women's branch of the order, is also being held in that city. Perseverance Lodge is represented by Asa Pope and George Clark. A. E. Causebrook is Unity Lodge's delegate.

Grand Chancellor W. T. Hillard, of Salem, called the meeting of the Grand Lodge to order yesterday morning. He reported that the past year had been a prosperous one for the order and he told of the establishment of a periodical entitled "The Pythian," made possible by the assistance of Grand Representative De Witt C. Cobb.

Among the recommendations made by the grand chancellor was that all lodges cease the practise of paying continuous benefits. He declared this could not be done without injustice to younger members, who might expect benefits some time in the future, when funds were not available. His report showed that applicants for insurance in the insurance department of the order had increased from 14,654 in 1906 to 35,446 in 1907.

Grand Keeper of Records and Seals Elmer E. Margerum, of Trenton, announced that there had been a gain of forty-nine in the membership during the year, there being at present 13,236 members in good standing. The order paid $80,809.09 for the relief of the sick and the burial of the dead during the year.

John Patrick, grand master of the exechequer, reported that the receipts had been $167,744.12, and the total disbursements $54,482.21.

These officers were elected last night:

Grand chancellor, Abram Klenert, of Paterson, Democratic leader of the Assembly last year; grand vice-chancellor, Henry A. Heinrichs, of Paterson; grand keeper of records and seals, Elmer E. Margerum, Trenton; grand master of exchequer, John Patrick, Rutherford; grand prelate, A. Lewis Drucker, Elizabeth; grand master-at-arms, Henry C. Keeler, Newark; grand inner guard, William D. Quick, Somerville; grand outer guard, Samuel C. Dobbins, Mount Holly.

The only contest was over the office of grand outer guard, as there were eleven nominations. One vote decided the contest. Fraternal greetings last night were received by the knights from their sisterhood, the women's branch of the order. The annual session of the Grand Lodge will be concluded today.

BILL GIVING ELECTION OFFICERS $30 PASSES.

The State Senate has passed Senator Ackerman's bill to amend the election law so as to remove all doubt as to the right of election officers to draw at least $30, in cities of 30,000 or more, for their services on primary, registration and election days, was passed. Last year, owing to some changes in the law, election officers received only $25.

The effort of Senator Gebhardt, of Hunterdon, to amend Senate bill 7 when it came up for second reading precipitated a brisk debate. The bill requires the consent of inrividual property-owners and municipal consent in writing for the erection of wires or conduits for telephone, telegraph, or electric light companies.

Mr. Gebhardt wanted the words "in writing" stricken out. He explained that he was interested in a telephone company and while little difficulty was experienced in getting verbal permission for the work mentioned, property-owners were inclined to shy at anything that had to be put in writing. The proposed amendment was lost by a vote of 14 to 1.

STATE FIREMEN'S ASS'N. PLANS FOR LEGISLATION.

Campaign Started to Preserve Funds of Old Volunteers.

At the call of its president, General Bird W. Spencer, of Passaic, the executive board of the State Firemen's Relief Association, convened in that city on Tuesday to take action on measures the association intends to have introduced into the Legislature.

Two amendments to the act of 1885, pertaining to the funds of the association, will be advocated. One is that in case a small municipality is annexed to a larger one the Firemen's Relief Association of the small municipality shall be retained, and the pro rata distribution from the State shall be distributed to the old volunteers who are entitled to it. The other provision is that in case a paid department succeeds a volunteer organization the old volunteers shall control the association funds and the paid men shall create a fund of their own.

Among those at the meeting was S. Rusling Ryno, of Rahway, clerk of the Union County Board of Freeholders.

Y. M. C. A. Entertainment.

J. Watley Gangloff, the well-known story teller, will be at the Y. M. C. A. tomorrow night under the auspices of the boys' department of the association. There will be music by the Y. M. C. A. orchestra.

DAVIS A GREAT MAN SAYS SMITH IRONICALLY

The report that Robert S. Davis, leader of Hudson county, was to be boomed for leader of the party's forces in New Jersey and former United States Senator James Smith, Jr., "deposed" from the high office seemed to please Mr. Smith yesterday, at least that part of the story referring to Mr. Davis met with his approval.

"Admirable in every respect," Mr. Smith said when he heard that Mr. Davis was being urged as State leader. "He is a fine man for the place, an able, great man. Mr. Davis is a practical organizer, and I can think of nothing that would tend more to harmonize the party and prepare it better for the coming campaign. As for my being State leader, I am sure I am not, so it would be hard to depose me, wouldn't it?"

Mr. Smith's apparent repoicing was regarded in some quarters as sarcasm. Mr. Davis recently denounced Mr. Smith as a traitor to the party.

Reception and Dance a Success.

Under the auspices of the Men's Club of St. Stephen's church, an enjoyable reception and dance was held at the parish house, last night. There were about sixty members and friends of the club present. The music for dancing was furnished by G. H. Staats, and during the intermission refreshments were served. The affair was a success socially and from a financial standpoint.

FORDYCE IS OUT FOR CONGRESS IN THIRD.

Colonel Alexander Fordyce, Jr., former head of the people's lobby, wants the congressional nomination in the Third District, comprising Middlesex, Monmouth and Ocean counties, against Congressman Benjamin Franklin Howell. Colonel Fordyce bases his hopes for the nomination on the direct primary act, which Governor Fort is asking to have applied to the nomination of congressmen. Colonel Fordyce said of his candidacy yesterday:

"Any candidate for public office this year will be compelled to clearly define his attitude on the great political issues of the day, and will not be allowed to hide behind party regularity and general statements meaning nothing.

"Should I become a candidate, I would stand for the progressive policies of the Roosevelt administration."

RICH FARMER SUED.

Accused of Selling Milk Not Up to Standard.

Matthew Suydam, Jr., son of Matthew Suydam, the wealthy farmer of Three Mile Run, and a director in the National Bank of New Jersey, of New Brunswick, has been sued by the State Board of Health for a penalty. Inspectors of the board took samples of milk which he was bringing into town some time ago, and found that the milk was below standard.

The case has created a sensation, owing to the prominence of the Suydam family. They are the richest farmers in that part of the State, and are interested financially and deeply in several local industries. Suydam declares that the inspectors did not take samples of the milk from his farm, but that they took them from a can of milk belonging to a neighbor, which he was carting into town for him.

M. M. Ritchey with Missouri Pacific.

M. M. Ritchey, formerly of Elizabeth and an official of the New Jersey Central, but more recently connected with the Southern Railway, has been appointed division superintendent of the Missouri Pacific, with headquarters at Little Rock, Ark. Mr. Ritchey is considered one of the ablest railroad men in the country and during his long career has held several very responsible positions.

Direful Prediction.

In a speech before the parliament of New South Wales, Australia, E. W. Sullivan said: "The present ministry may blunder along for a few months, but while gazing at the stars they will stumble over the pebbles and then the ambulance will take them to the hospital where the grinning skulls of their predecessors are stored."

Sinner's Confession.

A very real test of a man's intrinsic honesty comes when he receives a letter through the mails on which the stamp has not been cancelled. Preventing Electrolysis.

Electrolysis of pipes is now prevented by insulating from the ground. The pipes are covered with a specially prepared asbestos paper, coated with a waterproof insulating compound, and joints are made tight by strips and insulating cement. The protection is claimed to be permanently durable.

To Extract Splinter.

Take a wide-mouthed bottle and almost fill it full of hot water, then put the part with the splinter over the mouth of the bottle and press tightly. The suction will draw the flesh down and in a minute or two the hot steam will make the splinter come out and draw the soreness out immediately.

Beasts All Left-Handed.

Livingston, the great explorer of Africa, who had more chances than most men have to learn the habits of wild beasts, says in his books that they are all left-handed, so to speak, or left-pawed, if you like that way of putting it better. The lion, he says, always strikes with its left paw.

As Genius Affects Women.

A reviewer in one of the recent publications, calling attention to Mr. Gribble's book about George Sand, says that "we still believe that genius, however it may palliate the crimes of a man, aggravates the wickedness of a woman."

Milk is suggested as a good extinguisher for burning petroleum. It forms an emulsion with the oil and, by disturbing its cohesion, attenuates the combustible element, as water cannot.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

The man who has a certified meal ticket good for the next year is about the only man who is wearing his hat jauntily these days.

Perhaps the reason that it is so hard to live up to New Year's resolutions is because in doing so it carries with it the added task of living down the past.

It is doubtless true that we are all more or less crazy, and the point of difference seems to lie in the question of who has the more and who the less.

Having a short measure of brains ought not to militate against a man if he was thoughtful enough to have inherited the price of an expert lawyer.

Judging by the progress that airships are making, life on the ocean wave will soon be superseded by life on the billowy blue.

As the Wall street men seem to be the only people it is popular to consider in the money question, high finance might be defined as a state of strain which certain individuals undergo during a stock juggling contest.

Enthusiasm is ever the portion of the newest convert and conservatism the portion of the seasoned radical.

Some one time promising candidates begin to look like the end of a hard winter.

When Lincoln Swore.

It is said that the only time Lincoln was ever heard really to swear was on the occasion of his receiving a telegram from Burnside, who had been ordered to go to the relief of an attack from Bragg. Burnside telegraphed from Jonesboro, farther away from Rosecrans than he was when he received the order to hurry toward him. When Burnside's telegram was placed in Lincoln's hands he said, "Damn Jonesboro!" He then telegraphed Burnside as follows:

Sept. 21, 1863.

If you are to do any good to Rosecrans it will not do to waste time in Jonesboro.

A. LINCOLN.

Neatly Put.

Homer Folks, the secretary of the State Charity Aid Society of New York, referred in a recent address to the awkwardness that charity workers feel in making public appeals for funds.

"And few charity workers," Mr. Folks added, "can carry off that awkwardness with the neatness of the colored preacher who reminded his congregation that:

"'Brudren, Ah kain't preach hyah an' board in heb'n.'"—Lo Angeles Times.

No Exceptions to This Rule.

"Willie," said a fond mother, "you should go to bed early. 'Early to bed and early to rise makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise,' you know. You should go to bed with the sun. The chickens go to bed with the sun."

"Yes, I know they do, mamma, but the old hen—she always goes with 'em!"

TELL OF AGE OF EARTH

Earthquake at Frisco Establishes Thickness of Crust According to Expert.

TELL OF AGE OF THE EARTH.

Geologist Makes Calculations—Scientist Figures That Age of It Is 5,262,170 Years.

The assumption of an original uniform temperature for the earth is only a first approximation to the true condition, not justified by a closer examination of the subject. The mathematical theory of the heat distribution in a gaseous globe shows that the temperature increases rapidly toward the centre, and hence falls off correspondingly near the surface. Relatively to the average temperature of the whole mass, that of the surface is very low, and that of the centre quite high. This is the condition in a gaseous sphere, and it seems certain that it cannot be greatly modified by the surface cooling which leads to incrustation. This latter arises mainly from resisted circulation, and retarded supply of heat from the under layers, as the surface density increases. Prior to the beginning of surface cooling the planet passes through a stage of maximum temperature, and heat is both radiated and conducted through to the outer layers; but eventually the resistance to propagation of heat becomes so great that a fall of temperature is inevitable. In the case of the earth there is excellent reason to conclude that the surface temperature never much exceeded 2000 degrees Fahrenheit.

The experiments of Professor Rucker and Roberts-Austen at the Royal College of Science, London, on basalt or dolerite, showed that this rock was completely fused at 1688 degrees Fahrenheit. Basalt is a typical rock of the earth's crust, prevalent in nearly all volacnic districts; and it seems probable that a temperature of 2000 degrees Fahrenheit would therefore not only fuse all the principal rocks of the earth's surface, but also reduce many of them to a stath of vapor.

The fact that the other planets of our solar system are not at present self-luminous, though the larger masses are known to have high internal temperature, tells against the theory of a very high surface temperature also in the case of the earth. For although we view the other planets at only one stage of their existence, and therefore cannot fully judge of their conditions at other cosmical epochs, yet the absence of self-luminosity when so much heat is known to be stored up within these planets can only indicate that a great lowering of temperature always takes place near the surface, as is also true in a sphere of monatomic gas. Thus, it is not probable that even at the maximum the surface temperature of such masses would be very high. Lord Kelvin has estimated the temperature of 7000 degrees Fahrenheit, but there are clear indications that this is much too great, and in all probability we shall not be far wrong in using 2000 degrees as the most acceptable value in all calculations on the secular cooling of the terrestial globe. The temperature will increase with the depth, but for a shallow layer we may take it to be uniform; the temperature of 2000 degrees then would not correspond exactly to the surface, but rather to the average of a thin sheet forming the boundary of the molten mass. As the outer layer was no doubt agitated from beneath, it would both lack in uniformity of temperature, and also be constantly changing, so that a mean temperature of 2000 degrees Fahrenheit seems to be the closest approximation we can make to the true conditions.

Considering the earth to be a sphere of the same conductivity as ordinary rock, we can mathmeatically calculate its age since its crust first formed. Lord Kelvin, on an assumption of a crust of 7000 degrees Fahrenheit, calculated the age of the earth as 101,673,000 years. Following his calculations, but estimating the crust heat at 2000 degrees Fahrenheit—which is now agreed on as a more probable figure—we get an age of 8,302,210 years. Accordingly, we conclude from this that the age of our incrusted planet can scarcely exceed ten million years, which accords well with the duration inforred from the theory of the sun's heat.

Rev. O. Fisher has developed another method for calculating the age of the earth, based on a consideration of the thickness of the crust and its gradual loss of heat. Considering the thickness of the crust as 17.5 miles, which is very near the thickness indicated by the San Francisco earthquake, the age of the earth appears as 5,262,170 years. Fisher, however, calculates the crust as not exceeding 21.91 miles. Taking this latter figure, the age of the earth is found to be 8,248,280 years.

This agreement with Lord Kelvin's figures is the more interesting since Rev. O. Fisher cannot reconcile it with what he has hitherto thought the approximate age of the earth, and he endeavors to explain it away. He says:

"This is a far shorter period than geological phenomena appear to require, for, although it is not possible for them to assign any definite limit to the world's age, we can form some idea of an inferior limit which it must have exceeded. Sir A. Geike thinks that the stratified rocks alone, which contain organic remains, cannot have taken much less than 100,000,000 years for their formation."

He then proceeds to examine the hypothesis of an energetic substratum, and by this process reaches a greater age for the world. But the hypothesis of an inert substratum is obviously the proper one. For the substratum is shown to move only under the throes of an earthquake, and no circulatory movement of lava exists even just beneath the crust. Hence we adhere to the result there obtained, and must consider the significance of the small age of the earth. It will be seen that for a thickness of twenty-two miles the age of the earth's consolidation is almost exactly the same as that reached by the use of Lord Kelvin's formula.

The result found by Lord Kelvin's method rests upon the observed rate of increase of temperature downward; namely, 1 degree Fahrenheit for 51 feet, which is about the same as the value used by Fourier nearly a century ago, and not improved upon by the deep borings made in recent years. It also rests upon the assumed surface temperature of 2000 degrees Fahrenheit, which probably is comparatively near the truth. It is purely an accidental coincidence that with these data one is led by the Fourier-Kelvin formula to an age of 8,302,210 years, while by Fisher's formula, depending on the thickness of the crust essentially verified by earthquake phenomena, one finds the almost identical age of 8,248,280 years. Modemrate variations of the data might derange this excellent agreement somewhat, but probably no change of the contestants within admissible limits would produce extreme discordance in the resulting ages of the earth. It seems, therefore, difficult to escape the conclusion that these figures really approximate the true age of our encrusted planet. At least the period since the consolidation is of the order of ten million years.

Different investigators will naturally form different estimates of the age of the earth as found by the several different methods of approximation; but it is difficult to see how the larger values formerly cufrent can be justified by physical research based on the propagation of heat involved in the secular cooling of the globe. The writer has not the geological learning requisite for the use of the methods based in sedimentary rocks and their deposits of organic remains, but it seems very doubtful if these methods can lay claim to even approximate accuracy; and to most minds the conclusions drawn from the much greater weight.

POINTS FOR THE BUYERS

A. M. Griffen, the hardware merchant, carries a full line of hardware and housefurnishing goods. Contracts are also made for first class sanitary plumbing and heating work.

Harry K. Lister, of North avenue, is daily receiving the latest records for the Edison phonograph and Victor talking-machine and he invites all interested to stop in and hear them. He sells both machines at popular prices.

The Woodhull & Martin Company is offering an attractive line of goods in every department and an inspection cannot fail to interest shoppers. You will find the white goods, laces, embroideries, dress goods, housefurnishings, men's furnishing goods of the best quality and the price will meet with your approval.

BEAUTY HINTS.

For the complexion which is too ruddy, the following lotion is splendid and also a good bleach. Elderflower water, six ounces; eau de cologne, one and one-half ounces; tincture of benzoin, one dram; cucumber juice, one ounce.

For freckles use the juice of one lemon in which sulphur has been rubbed. It should be covered with one pint of water, left over night and strained. Keep away from the eyes.

Prudence.

A tall man, impatiently pacing the platform of a wayside station, accosted a boy of about twelve.

"S-s-say," he said, "d-d-do y-you know h-h-how late this train is?"

The boy grinned, but made no reply. The man stuttered out something about kids in general and passed into the station.

A stranger asked the boy why he hadn't answered the old man.

"D-d-d'ye wanter see me g-g-get me fa-fa-face punched? D-d-dat big g-guy'd t'ink I was mo-mo-mocking him."—Everybody's.

For the Bread.

Use a large stone jug for holding bread during the summer and you will have no dry, musty bread. Even sliced pieces will be fresh when kept in this manner. The jar should be thoroughly scalded once a week with soda water and dried in the sun. It is much better than keeping bread or cakes in tin vessels.

May Have Succeeded at Home.

A physician went rabbit shooting and returned, tired out and empty handed, telling his wife he hadn't killed a thing. Thereupon she remarked: "I told you so. If you had stayed at home and attended to your legitimate business, you might have been more successful."

By KATE AND VIRGIL D. BOYLES

(Copyrighted by A. C. McClurg & Co., 1907.)

"And yet there are men in this country who would kill him if they dared."

"Mary! what do you mean? Are there then so many cut-throats in this awful country?"

"I think there are many desperate men among the rustlers who would not hesitate to kill either Paul Langford or Richard Gordon since these prosecutions have begun. There are also many good people who think Mr. Gordon is just stirring up trouble and putting the county to expense when he can have no hope of conviction. They say that his failures encourage the rustlers more than an inactive policy would."

"People who argue like that are either tainted with dishonesty themselves or they are foolish, one of the two," said Louise, with conviction.

"Mr. Gordon has one stanch supporter, anyway," said Mary, smiling. "Maybe I had better tell him. Precious little encouragement or sympathy he gets, poor fellow."

"Please do not," replied Louise, quickly. "I wonder if my friend, Jim Munson, has managed to escape 'battle, murder and sudden death,' including death by poison, and is on hand with his testimony."

As they approached the office the crowd of men around the doorway drew aside to let them pass.

"Our chances of worming ourselves through that jam seem pretty slim to me," whispered Mary, glancing into the already overcrowded room.

"Let me make a way for you," said Paul Langford, as he separated himself from the group of men standing in front, and came up to them.

"I have watered my horse," he said, flashing a merry smile at Mary as he began shoving his big shoulders through the press, closely followed by the two young women.

It was a strange assembly through which they pressed; ranchmen and cowboys, most of them, just in from ranch and range, hot and dusty from long riding, perspiring freely, redolent of strong tobacco and the peculiar smell that betokens recent and intimate conpanionship with that part and parcel of the plains, the horse. The room was indeed hot and close and reeking with bad odors. There were also present a large delegation of cattle dealers and saloon men from Velpen, and some few Indians from Rosebud agency, whose curiosity was insatiable where the courts were concerned, far from picturesque in their ill-fitting, nondescript cowboy garments.

Yet they were kindly, most of the men gathered there. Though at first they refused, with stolid resentment, to be thus thrust aside by the breezy and aggressive owner of the Three Bars, planting their feet the more firmly on the rough, uneven floor, and serenely oblivious to any right of way so arrogantly demanded by the big shoulders, yet, when they perceived for whom they way was being made, most of them stepped hastily aside with muttered and abashed apologies. Here and there, however, though all made way, there would be no red-faced or stammering apology. Sometimes the little party was followed by insolent eyes, sometimes by malignant ones. Had Mary Williston spoken truly when she said the will for bloodshed was not lacking in the country?

But if there was aught of hatred or enmity in the heavy air of the improvised courtroom for others besides the high-minded counsel for law and order Mary Williston seemed serenely unconscious of it. She held her head proudly. Most of these men she knew. She had done a man's work among them for two years and more. In her man's work of riding the ranges she had had good fellowship with many of them. After to-day much of this must end. Much blame would accrue to her father for this day's work among friends as well as enemies, for the fear of the law-defiers was an omni-present fear with the small owner, stalking abroad by day and by night. But Mary was glad and there was a new dignity about her that became her well, and that grew out of this great call to rally to the things that count.

At the far end of the room they found the justice of the peace enthroned behind a long table. His honor, Mr. James R. McAllister, more commonly known as Jimmie Mac, was a ranchman on a small scale. He was ignorant, but of an overweening conceit. He had been a justice of the peace for several years and labored under the mistaken impression that he knew law; but Gordon, on short acquaintance, had dubbed him "Old Necessity," in despairing irony, after a certain high light of early territorial days who "knew no law."

The prisoner was brought in. His was a familiar personality. He was known to most men west of the river—if not by personal acquaintance, certainly by hearsay.

Then came the first great surprise of this affair of many surprises. Jesse Black waived examination. It came like a thunderbolt to the prosecution. It was not Black's way of doing business, and it was generally believed that, as Munson had so forcibly though inelegantly expressed it to Billy Brown, "He would fight like hell" to keep out of the circuit courts. He would kill this incipient Nemesis in the bud. What, then, had changed him? The county attorney had rather looked for a hard-fought defence—a shifting of the burden of responsibility for the misbranding to another, who would, of course, be off somewhere on a business trip, to be absent an indefinite length of time; or it might be he would try to make good a trumped-up story that he had but lately purchased the animal from some Indiana cattle-owner from up country who claimed to have a bill-of-sale from Langford. He would not have been taken aback had Black calmly produced a bill-of-sale.

The absoluteness of the surprise flushed his clean-shaven face a little, although his grave immobility of expression underwent not a flicker. It was a surprise, but it was a good surprise. Jesse Black was bound over under good and sufficient bond to appear at the next regular term of the circuit court in December. That much accomplished, now he could buckle down for the big fight. How often had he been shipwrecked in the shifting sands of the really remarkable decisions of "Old Necessity" and his kind. This time, as by a miracle, he had escaped sands and shoals and sunken rocks and rode in deep water.

A wave of enlightenment swept over Jim Munson.

"Boss," he whispered, "that gal reporter's a hummer."

"How so?" whispered Langford, amused. He proceeded to take an interested, if hasty, inventory of her charms. "What a petite little personage, to be sure! Almost too colorless, though. Why, Jim, she can't hold a tallow candle to Williston's girl."

"Who said she could?" demanded Jim, with a fine scorn and much relieved to find the boss so unappreciative. Eden might not be lost to them after all. Strict justice made him add: "But she's a wise one. Spotted them blamed meddlin' hoss thieves right from the word go. Yep. That's a fac'."

"What 'blamed meddlin' hoss thieves,' Jim? You are on intimate terms with so many gentlemen of that stripe—at least your language so leads us to presume—that I can't keep up with the procession."

"At the bridge yistidy. I told you 'bout it. Saw 'em first at the Bon Amy—but they must a trailed me to the stockyards. She spotted 'em right away. She's a cute'n. Made me shet my mouth when I was a blabbin' too much, jest before the fun began. Oh, she's a cute'n!"

"Who were they, Jim?"

"One of 'em, I'm a thinkin', was Jake Sanderson, a red-headed devil who came up here from hell, I reckon, or Wyoming, one of the two. Nobody knows his biz. But he'll look like a stepped-on potato bug 'gainst I git through with him. Didn't git on to t' other feller. Will next, you bet!"

"But what makes you think they are mixed up in this affair?"

"They had their eyes on me to see what was I a doin' in Velpen. And I was a doin' things, too."

Langford gave a long, low whistle of comprehension. That would explain the unexpected waiving of examination. Jesse Black knew the steer had been recovered and saw the futility of fighting against his being bound over.

"Now, ain't she a hummer?" insisted Jim, admiringly, but added slightingly, "Homely, though, as all git-out. Mouse-hair. Plumb homely."

"On the contrary, I think she is plumb pretty," retorted Langford, a laugh in his blue eyes. Jim fairly gasped with chagrin.

Unconcerned, grinning, Black slouched to the door and out. Once straighten out that lazy-looking body and you would have a big man in Jesse Black. Yes, a big one and a quick one, too, maybe. The crowd made way for him unconsciously. No one jostled him. He was a marked man from that day. His lawyer, Small, leaned back in his chair, radiating waves of self-satisfaction as though he had just gained a disputed point. It was a manner he affected when not on the floor in a frenzy of words and muscular action.

Jim Munson contrived to pass by Jake Sanderson.

"So you followed me to find out about Mag, did you? Heap o' good it did you! We knew you knew," he bragged insultingly.

The man's face went white with wrath.

"MEASURES" WHICH THE COOK WILL ADOPT.

Here are answers to every "how much" question that can arise on baking day:

One cup of sugar will sweeten one quart of any mixture to be served chilled or frozen.

One teaspoon of extract will flavor one quart of custard or pudding.

One tablespoonful of extract will flavor one quart of mixture to be frozen.

One level teaspoon of salt will season one quart of soup, sauce or vegetables.

The ordinary French dressing (three tablespoons oil, one and one-half tablespoons vinegar, one-fouth lever teaspoon salt, one-eighth level teaspoon pepped) will moisten one pint of salad.

One tablespoon of water or milk should be allowed for each egg in an omelet.

Allow four eggs to each quart of milk in making cup custards.

Allow from four to six eggs to each quart of milk in making a custard to be turned from the mold.

Rice will absorb three times its measure of water and a larger quantity of milk or stock.

One ounce of butter and one-half ounce of flour are used to thicken one cup of liquid in making a sauce.

Allow two level teaspoons of baking powder to each cup of flour when no eggs are used.—Exchange.

What the Beauty Specialists Do.

They will bleach the finger nails with peroxide of hydrogen and use finely powdered pumice stone to clean the nails underneath and along the sides. They use the little sandpaper boards for shaping the nails, and soak one hand in warm water while working upon the other.

If your face is sensitve, the beauty specialist makes a note of this, uses little friction, only tepid water and mostly grease and not alkali for removing the dirt. A soft soothing cream is rubbed into the face and neck and removed with a soft towel, and it is wonderful how much dirt this will remove. Then the face is washed with tepid water in which there is a little alcohol, the face then dried and cold cream applied the second time. This is gently worked into the face, and is more of a food than a cleanser like the first which was applied. Then the face is covered with powder which is wiped off with a towel, leaving the face clean, white and free from red blotches produced by irritating face massage. If the face can be more vigorously treated, strong soap is first used, then some soothing lotion and powder. All skins are not alike and must be treated in various ways.

The Useful Sewing Apron.

The woman who does her own sewing will find that if she will make a sewing apron with a pocket across the bottom about ten inches deep, and wear it when using the sewing machine she will be saved much time. She may let all the small clippings fall into the pocket and thus keep the floor clean.

At a heart party given for a bride, the tally cards bore pictures of the bride, the pasters being placed on the reverse side. At the close of the game there were no prizes awarded, but each guest received a hand-painted heart-shaped frame exactly fitted over the tally card, and after being tied in place, made a pretty souvenir of the occasion.

Bowling and General Sports

BOWLING.

As a result of the tie for fourth place in the five-man tourney at Campbell's alleys, the Bismarck and Brian Boru teams will roll an extra series next week. The team taking two out of three games will be declared the winner. Both fives have been rolling good pins lately and the match is awaited with much expectancy by the fans.

Entries for the new tourney which Johnny Campbell will conduct are coming in fast and include a large number of the bowlers who took part in the five-man contest now about to close. The entries will close on March 1 and the schedule will be made out within a week afterward.

In a recent trial game at Campbell's alleys, Chauncey Stout, winner of average prize in the tourney, put up a 277 score. He hit the wood for eight straight strikes but in the ninth frame the ball poked the head pin in the nose and left a rank split. All of Stout's scores have been top-notchers of late and he is getting back in the form that astonished the gallery at the opening of the five-man contest.

Several Plainfielders have entered the tourney soon to start on the Star alleys at Elizabeth. It will be a two-man team contest and the entries include crack shots from Elizabeth, Newark, Bayonne and other places. The prize money aggregates $500.

LOCAL SUNDAY SCHOOLS TO COMPETE IN ATHLETIC MEET.

The annual track meet of the Sunday-school Athletic Association will be held at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium Thursday, April 2, and entries are now being received from the members of the six church teams to contest for the second leg of the President's Cup. This trophy is offered by C. W. McCutcheon, president of the association, and at the track meet last year the first year it was competed for. It is necessary for the same team to win this trophy twice, in order to obtain permanent possession.

There will be five classes of events in the meet. These are as follows: Special events—standing broad jump, running hop, step and jump. Senior events—440-yard potato race, sack race, running high jump. Intermediate events—300-yard potato race, running broad jump. Junior events—15-yard dash, potato race (twelve potatoes, three feet apart). Boys' events—15-yard dash, three legged race. Entries in any of the events may be handed to Physical Director George L. Listman.

P. H. S. JUNIORS BEAT SENIORS IN LEAGUE BASKETBALL.

The junior class five of the Plainfield High School defeated the senior five in a closely contested game in the inter-class basketball league at the high school gymnasium yesterday afternoon. The outcome of the game was not certain until the final whistle blew, when the score was 18-17 in favor of the lower class. The sophomore and freshman teams were to have played at the school yesterday, but the game was called off, and will be played next week. With this game will end the league play.

Riffert and Bingamin, forwards for the junior team, did the best work, and Hammond made most points for the seniors, caging some difficult shots. The line-ups follow: Juniors—Riffert and Bingamin, forwards; Dey, centre; Beker and Prior, guards. Seniors—Murphey and Line, forwards; John Dutcher, centre; Hammond, Pound and Titsworth, guards.

Boys' Track Meet.

A dual track meet between teams of the Boys' Department of the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. M. C. of Hope chapel will be held at the association gymnasium Saturday, March 7. The events will include the standing broad jump, 220-yard potato race, running high jump, 8-pound shot put, running broad jump, and standing broad jump.

P. H. S. vs. N. P. H. S. Tomorrow.

The basketball teams of the city and borough high school will meet at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium tomorrow afternoon in the local interscholastic league. The P. H. S. five was to have played the Manhattan College Preparatory School five, but the game was cancelled by the New York manager.

Girls' Basketball Monday.

The girls' teams of the city and borough high schools will meet for the first time this season in basketball at the Plainfield High School gymnasium Monday afternoon. The game is called at 3:30.

GOURLEY HITS BRYAN AND ALSO BOB DAVIS

In an interview yesterday William B. Gourley, of Paterson, former chairman of the State Democratic Committee, says that Bryan will not have and never did have, the confidence of the New Jersey Democracy.

He said: "Every one knows that Mr. Bryan is a man of ability and an orator of high order. He is, however, a theorist; a doctrinaire. He would rather present new doctrines than be right upon present-day issues."

Mr. Gourley said there was considerable sentiment for Bryan at Washington, but he could not say that this sentiment was sufficient to have him nominated at Denver.

Mr. Gourley said Leader Davis of Hudson did not voice the sentiments of the Democracy. "Davis is an anachronism, and this type of boss must go," he said. "He will be lucky if he goes to the National convention. There are many bright men in Hudson county who must overthrow Davis if they expect to succeed along right lines."

MILLINGTON MAN SETTLES WITH A. D. RUNYON FOR FEED

An execution by the sheriff of Morris county has just been filed in the Supreme Court office at Trenton as being satisfied in full in the case of Abram D. Runyon, of this city, against Patrick O'Riely, of Millington. Runyon sued for the amount of a note and for feed stuffs sold to the defendant, and no defence being interposed a judgment was granted in favor of Runyon for $486.98 and this execution just returned shows that the same has been paid.

Codington & Swackhamer were the attorneys for Runyon.

EXPRESS CONCERN'S SUIT AGAINST CLEANER CO. ENDED.

An order for the discontinuance of the suit started by the Hand Storage and Express Company against the Vacuum Cleaner Company, both of Plainfield, has been filed at Trenton. The Hand people brought suit against David T. Kenney's concern for $306.73, claiming that the same was for hauling, trucking and moving of materials, and the order just filed end the suit.

Judge William Newcorn was attorney for the Hand Storage and Express Co.

I. L. Bril, editor of the "Hebrew Standard," of New York city.

Booming Fort.

No political significance is attached to the presence of Governor Fort and State Senator Colby, of New Jersey, as guests at the dinner given last night by the President in Washington. But it is understood that the two New Jersey men will remain there until tonight, and that political conferences will be held which will not only launch the candidacy of Governor Fort for the Vice-Presidency among the Taft supporters, but will also make additionally certain the support of Taft for the Presidential nomination by the New Jersey delegation.

HE SPEAKS ON EDUCATION

Pres. Demarest, of Rutgers, Address City and Borough High School Pupils.

TELLS OF COLLEGE'S CLAIMS.

Educator Also Refers to the Value of a College Education During His Interesting Talks.

Emphasizing the value of a college education to a young man or woman of the present day, President Demarest, of Rutgers College, spoke of the broadening advantages of such an education and its influence in character development, aside from the curriculum advantages acknowledged, at the Washington's Birthday exercises of the Plainfield High School this morning and at 10:30 repeated his remarks at the exercises of the North Plainfield High School. His remarks were especially about Rutgers, "The Old Colonial College," the scientific school of which is a State institution. President Demarest said in part:

"In emphasizing the advantages of a college education, it is a fact to be acknowledged at the outset that neither of our two greatest presidents, Washington or Lincoln, were college men. Washington, however, did receive a degree as land surveyor from William and Mary College, the second oldest college in the country. Lincoln, perhaps, stands as the example of what the lack of college education can do for a man. But Lincoln was a man of great ambition, great power and great ideas for the cultivation of that power. His education was accomplished without the aid of college instruction, but was efficient because of the character of the man.

"The characteristics of Washington and Lincoln are the great things we must bear in mind as examples set before us in our schools and colleges today. Manliness, sterling character, strong moral courage, and a spirit unconquerable by whatever emergency or mishap were the qualities which led to Washington's success despite his inferior opportunities for advancement.

The American colleges played a prominent part in the Revolutionary War. At the time the war broke out, there were nine colleges in this country, Harvard, William and Mary, Yale, Princeton (called Prince's College), Columbia (King's College), Brown, Rutgers, (Queen's College), the University of Pennsylvania and Dartmouth. The undergraduates of all these institutions, as well as the alumni and professors were instrumental as soldiers, State and government officials during those troublous times. Soldiery was a part of the training in the college, which was maintained even when the college was forced to move to North Branch during the time that the British occupied New Brunswick. Among the graduates of Rutgers prominent at this time were Brigadier General George H. Shaw, Secretary of State Frederick P. Frelinghuysen and many other high officials, including governors and justices.

"But I plan to speak primarily of the advantages of a college education. Is it worth while? In the present day, I tell you it is of inestimable worth to both boys and girls. It is first a preparation for life work, and second an enlargement of the life and character of a boy or girl. Of course, many men have attained success in life without a college education, and not all college graduates are successful, but in general, I believe it may be positively said that college best fits a man for success in life. And such an education means not only financial success but an increased value in life itself, an increase in capacity and a powerful element in the broadening of a man's life.

The college president concluded his remarks with a summary development of what is being done to make it easier for school graduates to enter college. He spoke of the financial aid furnished by State and college scholarships and outlined the various courses offered at Rutgers, championing the cause of a small college for general education as compared with the training in the college departments of universities and technical schools.

Entertainment at Watchung.

For the purpose of raising funds with which to purchase new hymn books an entertainment was given at the Mary E. Wilson Memorial chapel, Watchung, last night, by Martin A. Korff's orchestra, of this city. Fourteen members of the orchestra took part in the entertainment presenting an enjoyable program. In addition Mr. Korff gave a clever exhibition of sleight-of-hand. The affair concluded with the serving of refreshments and a social hour.

CITY FATHERS DISCUSS JOINT SEWER PROJECT

The Councilmanic street committee, comprising William L. Gloak, chairman; Charles C. Randolph, Herbert Buxton, William S. Tyler and Francis L. Montgomery, held a meeting last night for the purpose of discussing matters pertaining to the proposition to connect North Plainfield with the city's sanitary sewage system. There were no representatives present from the borough.

It seemed to be the general sense of the committee that a satisfactory arrangement will be made. The price suggested by the street committee of last year, that is $25 per million gallons of sewage matter for a term of ten years, after which an adjustment is to be made on the basis of the increased amount of sewage to be disposed of, will probably be recognized by the present Common Council. There are other details to be considered, however, before a contract can be made, but no difficulty is anticipated.

The idea now is to get matters in such shape that if the property owners of the borough vote in favor of the proposition no time will be lost in extending the system.

Much Interest at Rescue Mission.

The Gospel service at the Plainfield Rescue Mission last night was of unusual interest. John LeMatty, superintendent, was in charge and made an earnest appeal to the unsaved. At the close of his talk five persons raised their hands for prayers and three of the number took a decided stand for Christ by going forward. This was very encouraging to the workers at the mission. Tomorrow night J. H. Manning, former secretary of the Y. M. C. A. will lead and Sunday night at 7:45 o'clock the leader will be Philip Vroom.

NO MORE STORM SEWERS

Councilmanic Street Committee Not Willing to Expend Money for Purpose Now.

BECAUSE OF OTHER EXPENSES.

Many Big Improvements Along Other Lines Will Take All the Funds That Can Be Spared for Some Time.

The question of building storm sewers in the city was again discussed at a meeting of the Councilmanic street committee last night, but with no definite result. Mr. Tyler urged that such a sewer be built in Plainfield ave. this year, but the majority of the members expressed the opinion that when the city decides to expend money for storm sewers it should plan to install a general system, one that will take care of the whole town.

The idea of installing a sewer in Plainfield avenue and another one in the East End of the city was considered to be altogether too expensive, and the chances are that no work of this character will be undertaken this year, at least.

Many other improvements are planned for this year which will entail considerable expense. It is proposed to erect a new building for the police department, which together with the purchase of a site will aggregate a cost of at least $30,000. Then possibly additional fire protection may be given the East End of the city which, according to the present idea will include the erection of a fire house to be equipped with an engine and other necessary fire-fighting equipment. There is also a scheme in the air to build a new school house in West End in the vicinity of West Front street and Clinton avenue at a cost of approximately $50,000.

If these improvements go through it will be about all that the Common Council will care to undertake, it is said, and the expenditure of any great sum for storm sewers is not likely to be received with favor by the present Council.

When the adjourned meeting of the city fathers is held Monday night plans for the new police headquarters drawn by Tracy & Swartout will be submitted for approval. They have passed inspection by the police board and that body is so well pleased with the arrangements that it feels warranted in asking the Common Council to pass on them.

COMEDY A FEATURE OF GRACE M. E. BAZAAR

A comedy playlet, entitled "The Wrong Package," was successfully rendered by four young women of Grace M. E. church last night in the lecture room of the church on the occasion of the opening of the two-days' fair and bazaar being given under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the church. Those who took part were the Misses Marion Mager, Eda Doughty, Edna Stout and Stella Kline. In connection with the entertainment program, Miss Stella Kline played a selection on the piano.

The lecture room of the church presents a gay appearance, bright with the vari-colored decoration of the booths erected there and presided over by the women of the church.

Those in charge at the various booths are: Mrs. George Nelson, groceries; Miss Della Voehl, tea and coffee; Mrs. Evans, fancy articles; Miss Emma Smalley, lemonade; Mrs. Stephen Beeching, five and ten cent booth; Mrs. A. B. C. Bodine, cake; Mrs. Charles Force, candy, and Miss Stella Vermeule, ice cream. The fair will be concluded tonight, when an entire change of program will be rendered at the entertainment at 8 o'clock. The money is being raised for the general fund for the maintaining of the church.

Fail to Endorse Bryan.

William Jennings Bryan and Judge Gray, of Delaware, as prospective candidates for the Presidency, divided honors at the meeting of the Union County Democratic Committee in Elizabeth, last night. Edward Nugent offered a resolution calling for the committee's endorsement of Bryan, and Dennis F. Collins offered one endorsing Judge Gray. The committee being divided it was impossible for either Bryan or Gray to obtain its endorsement, and the matter was laid on the table for the present.

HIGH SCHOOL GETS GIFT

J. A. Coles Presents Replica of Houden's Bust of George Washington.

IN HIS FATHER'S MEMORY.

Dr. Maxson Makes Presentation Speech—Pupils Sing Patriotic Song Whose Words Were Written by Dr. Coles.

In behalf of the donor, J. Ackerman Coles, of Scotch Plains, Superintendent Henry M. Maxson of the city schools, presented a bronze bust of George Washington, mounted upon an imported marble pedestal, to the Plainfield High School in connection with the Washington's Birthday exercises this morning. The bust, made by Jean Antoine Houden in 1785. The bronze is an imported life-size replica of the bust of George Washington, made by Jean Antoine Houden, the famous French sculptor frome measurements and casts of Washington taken by the artist at Mount Vernon in 1785. General Lafayette and others considered it the best likeness of Washington ever made. The base is of imported marble, standing about four feet high.

The gift, which was formally accepted for the school by Principal Ira W. Travell after Dr. Maxson's presentation speech, is given by Mr. Coles in memory of his father, Dr. Abraham Coles, A. M., M. D., Ph. D., LL. D., who, at the age of seventeen, taught Latin and mathematics in the school of Rev. Lewis Bond in this city.

In connection with the exercises and presentation, the song "Our Country's Banner" was sung by the school. This was written by Dr. Abraham Coles in 1861, and in 1894 was set to music by Robert Lowry, a former Plainfielder.

OBSERVANCE OF HOLIDAY

Washington's Birthday Will Be Generally Honored in Both City and Borough.

BUSINESS TO BE SUSPENDED.

Attractions Scheduled for Tomorrow Night—Matinee and Evening Performances at Local Theatre.

According to the usual custom, Washington's Birthday will be observed here by a general suspension of business. A majority of the merchants have agreed to close their places of business for the day. This does not include the butchers and grocers, who find that it would be a great inconvenience to their customers. The druggists will remain open in the morning and evening, closing in the afternoon from 1 to 6 o'clock.

In the way of amusement there will not be very much doing and the day is likely to be a quiet one. At the New Plainfield theatre there will be a matinee and evening performance of "A Race for Life," and no doubt many will be attracted to see this stirring drama.

An event of interest to many will be the opening of Co. K's fair in the armory on West Front street. The soldier boys have completed plans for a most successful affair. One of the features will be the dancing every night. There will be other attractions throughout the week.

The Plainfield High School Alumni Association will hold its annual reception and reunion at the Plainfield High School tomorrow night, and the committee in charge of which Charles B. Morse is the chairman, has completed arrangements for unusually pleasant time. After a short business meeting at 8 o'clock, at which officers will be elected, the remainder of the evening will be devoted to dancing. Owing to the fact that the event comes on Saturday night it was decided to eliminate any speaking, and instead give up the entire time to dancing. The Board of Education, and the senior class have also been invited to the reception and it is expected that a large number of former graduates will attend.

In the events among the lodges, Martha Washington Council, No. 23, Daughters of America, has arranged to hold a lunch-box social tomorrow night, in celebration of the day.

The Public Library will be closed for circulation all day, but the reading room will be open in the afternoon from 2 until 6 o'clock with a member of the staff in attendance. The art gallery will be open in the afternoon from 2 until 5 o'clock.

The Daily Press will not be published tomorrow.

PRESENTMENT MADE AGAINST PENN'A R. R

Accusing the Pennsylvania Railroad Company of negligence and "unlawful disregard of the rights of the public" for not maintaining proper means of protection at the grade crossing at Dark Lane, Linden, the Union County Grand Jury at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon brought into court at Elizabeth a presentment censuring the railroad and recommending drastic remedial measures.

The presentment was received by Judge Edward S. Atwater from the hands of J. Edward Rowe, foreman of the grand jury. It is consequent upon numerous complaints on account of the accident which befell a funeral coach at the Dark Lane crossing on Sunday, January 5. One man, John Bumstead, of Newark, the driver, was killed when the coach was struck by a train, and four of the six people within the coach were injured.

Protests were filed by the Funeral Directors' Association of Union and Essex Counties and by the Union County Board of Freeholders, and the State Railroad Commission and the grand jury were appealed to for action. As the result a guard was placed by the Pennsylvania Railroad at the crossing, which the grand jury said in its presentment was an action absolutely insufficient, owing to the fact that the guard is a foreigner and not an intelligent man.

OBLIGING TOOL THIEVES INVADE THE BOROUGH

An accommodating set of tool thieves invaded the borough, last night, and appropriated the greater part of the implements used by carpenters on two jobs within a short distance of each other. They first broke into a shed belonging to William H. Titus and built for the accommodation of his employes erecting a new house on Brook avenue directly opposite Sanford. With the exception of a few hammers and saws, just about enough to do some odd work, all the tools in the place were taken.

The thieves next went to a shed belonging to Kinney & Stahl and located back of a house they are building near the Watchung silk mill on Chatham street. Another lot of tools was appropriated and in their place some of those taken from the Titus shed were left. It is believed the thieves must have belonged to the Tool Robbers Union and accordingly sympathized with the organization carpenters so that it wouldn't be necessary for them to lose any time.

The thefts were reported to the police of the city and borough and soft shoe work is being done by the cops on both sides of the brook. The tools from the tw places were valued at $100.

NEWARK CHILD KILLED; DUNELLEN MEN ARRESTED

As the result of an accident at Van Buren street, Newark, yesterday, in which the life of Caroline Vesnieova, seven years old, was crushed out by a falling beam, three members of the New Jersey Central's bridge gang from Dunellen, were locked up at the Third Precinct station. They are Jacob Fisher, William Lant and Nathan Hill, all of whom have been with the road for a long time. They were afterward bailed out to await the disposition of the county physician.

The accident was a peculiar one and happened as the men were raising the huge timber from the street to place it in position across the Van Buren street bridge, undergoing repairs. It slipped from the tackle that held it and crashed to the roadway just at the Vesnieova child was passing. It struck her squarely on the head, crushing her skull. She was hurried to a hospital but died soon after being admitted. Since the first of the year the family has lost two other children by death and the mother at the present time is sick in bed.

The fatality is similar to one that occurred on a Central bridge near the same street two years ago in which William Kennedy, of Dunellen, was killed, and Charles Whyusky, of the same place, was badly injured. Both belonged to the same carpenter gang that was at work yesterday.

PLAN WEST END SCHOOL

Appropriation of $50,000 'Tis Said, Will Be Made for an Eight Room Structure.

DARROW AVE. BUILDING, TOO.

Either $90,000 or $100,000 for Proposed Larger School House—Board of Estimate at Work.

Recognizing the merits of the petition of residents of the West End for an additional public school building on West Front street, near Clinton avenue, the Councilmanic members of the Board of School Estimate, it is reported, will undoubtedly recommend that an appropriation of $50,000 be made for that purpose. This, it is said, will be in addition to the proposed school at Darrow avenue and Essex street.

If the plan proposed by the Councilmanic members prevail, that is to appropriate $50,000 for the new school, it will result in cutting down the amount to be allowed for the building at Darrow avenue and Essex street. The original sum appropriated for this school was $90,000, but even this was found to be insufficient when the bids were received in accordance with the accepted plans. Now an effort is being made to simplify the plans with a view to bringing the cost of construction within a reasonable figure so that a second building can be erected.

Some of the city authorities favor an eight-room building at West Front street and Clinton avenue, and they believe that a somewhat larger building should fill the purpose at Darrow avenue and Essex street. They also believe that the two buildings should be constructed at a cost not to exceed $140,000. This plan, it is said, is not likely to meet with the approval of the school members of the board of estimate, but as it is up to the Common Council to name the amount to be appropriated for new schools, it is the opinion that that body will favor the two school plan.

Said Slap Was Justified.

Bayonne, Feb. 21.—Mrs. William Johnson, of 139 East Fortieth street, appeared before Recorder Lazarus in police court yesterday morning to respond to a complaint made by her maid, Bertha Miller, who accused her of assault and battery. Mrs. Johnson explained that she had directed her maid to do certain things and the maid claimed she had done so. When Mrs. Johnson contradicted the maid, the latter, the defendant said, told her she spoke untruly, whereupon Mrs. Johnson said she soundly slapped her. "And quite properly, too," said Recorder Lazarus indignantly. "You would have been excusable had you even administered a kick. The case was dismissed."

SOME STATEMENTS REGARDING NEW THEORY

Followers of Cooper and His Novel Ideas Give Reason for Their Belief in Him.

With a theory that human health is dependent on the stomach and with a medicine which he says proves this theory, L. T. Cooper, a comparatively young man, has built up an immense following during the past year.

Cooper has visited most of the leading cities of the country, and in each city has aroused a storm of discussion about his beliefs and his medicines. Wherever he has gone, people have called upon him by tens of thousands, and his preparation has sold in immense quantities.

The sale of this medicine has now spread over the entire country, and is growing enormously each day. In view of this, the following statements from two of the great number of followers which he now has, are of general interest.

Mrs. Agnes Viggenhouser, of 342 St. Louis Avenue, Chicago, has the following to say on the subject of the Cooper preparations: "For more than ten years I was broken down in health. I could not sleep and I was very nervous. Gradually I began to lose my memory, until I could not remember things from one day to another. I had severe pains and cramps in my body, and I would at times see dark spots before my eyes. I was unable to do any work whatever, as my strength was failing. I had no appetite, nor could I take any medicine.

"I had about given up hope of ever being well again when I read of Mr. Cooper's remedies. I decided to give them a trial, and I began to feel better at once. After taking the medicine for two weeks I can say that I am a new woman. I can eat with enjoyment, the pains in my body have left me, and I am stronger than I have been for years.

"I cannot say enough for Mr. Cooper's remedies. They are wonderful, for they have done everything claimed for them in my case."

Another statement by Mr. W. B. Stewart, 109 W. Madison St., Chicago, is as follows: "I have had stomach trouble for years, and anyone who is afflicted this way knows what an awful distressed feeling it causes. Many a time I have felt that I would give most any price to be cured. It was by accident that I heard of this man Cooper's remedies. I immediately made up my mind to buy a treatment of him. I used it for about two weeks, and it is impossible to tell how much good it has done me. I feel altogether different. I have more life and energy than I have had for years. This medicine certainly does stimulate and strengthen the whole system. Tired feeling and weak condition of the stomach has entirely passed away. I feel well again."

We sell Cooper's celebrated medicines which have made this wonderful record in all parts of the country. —T. S. Armstrong.

Roselle Park, Feb. 21.—Policeman Lewis, while patrolling his beat early Wednesday morning, saw a man crouching at the side of the residence of H. M. Butler, near Locust avenue. The man ran when he saw the policeman, and a bullet from Lewis' revolver failed to stop him. It is supposed that the stranger is the man who robbed the home of A. A. Bogart were also entered by thieves early Wednesday, but nothing of much value was taken.

BASEBALL.

Hugh Jennings, manager of the Detroit American League champions, says there will be six teams in this year's race. He promises that his team will play up to last season's standard again, but states that Clark Griffith's New Yorks will be one of the fastest combinations on the diamond; also that the White Sox will be more formidable than in 1907, while the Philadelphias, Clevelands and the St. Louis Browns will all be dangerous factors. From this it is inferred that Jennings does not hold Boston and Washington in high esteem.

Frank Chance is also out with the prediction that the Chicago Cubs will not only win the National League pennant again in easy style, but that they will also capture the world's series next fall. Chance, however, admits that the Cubs will not have such a walkover for the world's championship this year as they had with the tired Detroits last October. Chance prophesies that the Pittsburgs and Philadelphias will follow the Cubs to the wire and that the New Yorks will have a hard time beating out Boston and Brooklyn.

In a letter to a friend in Cincinnati President H. C. Pulliam of the National League writes from Ottawa, Canada: "Am enjoying myself up here and have forgotten all about that blacklist. If professional baseball can stand it, I can." From this it would appear as if Pulliam had decided to hang onto his $10,000 job.

The New York Nationals found John Murphy, the ground keeper, and cold weather at Marlin Springs, when they arrived late this week, having been a few hours more than a full week en route. Manager McGraw has not made his appearance, and the St. Louis division of youngsters in charge of Roger Bresnahan will not arrive until tomorrow. The players will begin light road work tomorrow under the direction of Big Jim Richards and John Leggett, the trainers. They will get all the benefits to be derived from the hot springs of Marlin, and when McGraw and Bresnahan arrive the real work will begin. The grounds are about a mile from the Arlington Hotel, where the players are stopping, and the athletes will jog back and forth twice a day, push the ball, kick the football and otherwise harden their muscles.

Fred Knowles, secretary of the New York Baseball Club, received a letter from J. J. McGraw Wednesday stating that he had signed Snodgrass, a catcher. He has taken Snodgrass on to Marlin Springs, Tex., where the team is practising. Knowles also received word that Shannon had signed a contract. Danny Shay, the infielder who played a great part of last season with the team, has been released to the Oakland (Cal.) team of the Pacific League.

FOOTBALL.

After several weeks of careful deliberation it has been decided to make another experiment with the football coaching system at Harvard, and Percy D. Haughton has been named as head coach. Harvard has suffered a long string of football defeats which the graduates and undergraduates would like to see come to an end, but in justice to the men who have been doing the coaching there has been too much impatience and too much changing for the good of the eleven. Still, now that it has been decided to experiment once more, a better selection could hardly have been made, as Haughton is well qualified to fill the important position and is likely to have the confidence and gain the hearty support of all Harvard men.

Haughton was a conspicuous athlete while he was in college and played on both the eleven and the nine. He was captain of the latter in 1899, and the team that year defeated Yale in two out of the three games played. He prepared at Groton School, where he was captain of the eleven in his senior year, when Dibblee was captain of the school nine.

In college the two exchanged places, as Dibblee was captain of the university eleven and Haughton of the nine. In 1895 and 1896 Yale and Harvard did not play football, but Haughton played on the eleven in the latter year against Princeton and Pennsylvania. In 1897 Yale and Havard played a tie game, neither side scoring. Haughton played fullback in that game. In the fall of 1898 Harvard defeated Yale, 17 to 0, at New Haven. Haughton played tackle and did the kicking that year. His powerful and accurate punting had much to do with the result of the contest. After leaving college he coached the Cornell eleven for two years, and in one of them Cornell beat Princeton. Since then Haughton has coached at Cambridge almost every year.

The Pennsylvania football eleven should be well served next fall so far as coaching goes. W. N. Morice and Sol Metzger know football, and better yet they know how to teach it.

It seems a pity that the football relations between Princeton and Cornell should be broken, and it looks as if the desire to beat Yale had got the better of sound judgment at Old Nassau. Victory over Yale will hardly make amends to the undergraduates for the loss of such a worthy rival as Cornell. There should be less policy and expediencey and more sport for sport's sake in college athletics.

DON'T EXPERIMENT.

You Will Make No Mistake if You Follow This Plainfield Citizen's Advice.

Never neglect your kidneys.

If you have pain tin the back, dizziness and nervousness, it's time to act and no time to experiment. These are all symptoms of kidney trouble, and you should seek a remedy which is known to cure the kidneys.

Doan's Kidney Pills is the remedy to use. No need to experiment. It has cured many stubborn cases in Plainfield. Follow the advice of a Plainfield citizen and be cured yourself.

A. C. Lazzi, stone-cutter and carver, of 244 East Third street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "For several years I was troubled by a distressing backache and pains in the region of the kidneys. My head also ached severely and the secretions from the kidneys were not at all natural. I tried several doctors and some so-called kidney remedies, but none gave me any relief, and as my case became more and more persistent, I became somewhat discouraged because I could find no relief. I saw an advertisement regarding Doan's Kidney Pills and got a supply at Randolph's pharmacy. Soon after taking them my troubles vanished like the mist and since then I have felt stronger and better in every way."

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

It is with pleasure that the local theatregoers are reminded of the return of Lincoln J. Carter's successful drama, "Too Proud to Beg," to the New Plainfield theatre tonight. The story is simple and straightforward and above all, is remarkably clever aside from its wit, pathos and thrilling situations and climaxes.

There seems to be plenty of material in Theodore Kremer's thriller, "A Race For Life," to enthuse both the man on horse-back and the one afoot. The P. H. Sullivan Amusement Company will present it at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow afternoon and night.

William Courtenay, who appears at the New Plainfield theatre on Monday night, with Dustin Farnum in "The Rector's Garden," which Henry B. Harris will present here on that date, was last seen as Virginia Harned's leading man in a repertoire of plays. Mr. Courtenay is perhaps one of the most prominent young actors on the American stage. He appeared for a term of years under the direction of Charles Frohman, and was at one time a member of his Empire Theatre Stock Company, which graduated such actors as William Faversham, Maud Adams, Robert Edeson, Charles Richmann, Margaret Anglin, and Henry Miller. Mr. Courtenay's role in the new play is said to be one of the best of his career.

David B. Gally will appear at the New Plainfield theatre Monday night in Walker Whiteside's greatest comedy success, "We Are King," a play that has appealed strongly to the lovers of comedy. Mr. Gally possesses unlimited talents which have advanced him very rapidly in his profession. He will be ably supported by a superior company, including Edmund Carroll, William McKegney, F. R. Gurke, Miss Marie Clifton, Miss Lelia Hill and Miss Grace Hilton. Mr. Gally is under the management of A. W. Cross and is a most thorough production.

—The druggists of the city will observe their usual holidal rule tomorrow, closing between the hours of 1 to 6 o'clock in the afternoon and opening in the evening.

Mrs. H. F. Bauer, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Bauer and sons, of Somerville, spent yesterday with Mrs. William Abbott, of West Eighth street.

MOTORMAN GUILTY OF MANSLAUGHTER

Daniel Leary, formerly a motorman on the Public Service trolley lines in Essex county, was convicted of manslaughter yesterday afternoon in the Quarter Sessions Court in Newark, before Judge Ten Eyck and a jury. He was held responsible for the death of Winifred J. Landers, seven years old, of Belleville, who was struck and instantly killed by a trolley car operated by Leary on December 29, 1904.

Leary was surrendered in court immediately after the verdict was rendered by the Public Service Corporation, which had given a bond for his appearance. He was sent to jail to await sentence on March. The jury was out exactly one hour after the conclusion of the testimony and a charge by Judge Ten Eyck, in which the latter said that if the jurymen were satisfied that Leary had been wilfully negligent in the operation of the car they should find a verdict of guilty.

Testimony by several witnesses, some of whom were passengers on the car which killed the child, and some of whom were not on it because Leary ran past them, was that the car at the time it struck the child was going at a high rate of speed.

Mrs. May Pope testified that she was on the car and that its speed was so great that she became alarmed and screamed several times. Once was when she saw the child step on the tracks at Cleveland street, Belleville, when the car was one hundred feet away. Mrs. Pope said that Leary paid no attention to her. When the accident occurred the speed of the car was so great that the child's head was almost cut off and the body was dragged at least a hundred feet before the car could be stopped. Death was instantaneous.

Leary took the stand in his own behalf, being the only witness for the defence, which was conducted by Howard McSherry, of the Public Service legal department. Leary declared that the tracks were slippery owing to the recent storm, that he was operating the car on only half speed and that he did not see the child until the car was within five or six feet of her. He shut off the power and did all he could, he declared, to avert the accident.

"COUNTESS" DE ANDERSON MAY ENTER PLEA OF GUILTY

Mrs. Mary DeAnderson, alias MacCarton, alias "Mrs." Col. Wheeling, as she was known here, the mysterious woman who is alleged to have posed as a countess and who is said to have obtained goods in various States during the past seventeen years without paying for them, consulted her counsel, Lawyer Atkinson, of Jersey City, at the Essex county jail yesterday morning and intended to appear in court during the afternoon to plead, but the judge was not sitting and as a result her contemplated action had to be deferred.

It is believed that the woman will be brought to court today, and in all probability plead non vult.

In addition to the charges preferred in Essex county, Mrs. DeAnderson, it is said, will have to face others in several Long Island towns, and, with her daughters, an indictment of grand larceny in Bayonne. The warrants on these charges are said to be in the possession of Constable Overmiller, of the Sheriff's office, who conducted the raid in Nutley.

NEWARK'S FIGHT ON GRAFT.

At a meeting held at Wallace Hall, Newark, last night, the Civic Righteousness Federation of Essex county was launched, with George W. Tompkins as its president. He will be the leader of the fight to be made against machine politics and graft. Henry H. Dawson was chosen secretary and Oscar B. Mockridge treasurer. Father I. P. Whelan, the Rev. T. J. Coultas and Dr. James I. Vance were elected vice presidents.

Addresses outlining the work of the federation and the reasos for its existence were made by the Rev. Father Isaac P. Whelan, the Rev. Dr. James I. Vance, the Rev. Dr. Thomas Coultas, the Rev. John McDowell, the Rev. William Y. Chapman, Mr. Tompkins and Judge Elwood C. Harris.

CONFAB WITH PRESIDENT

Murphy Follows Fort and Colby in Conference on Jersey Sentiment.

IT LOOKS LIKE TAFT JUST NOW.

Roosevelt Says Governor Is a "Corker"—Picking Out the Delegates-at-Large.

Former Governor Franklin Murphy, chairman of the New Jersey Republican Committee, went to Washington Wednesday afternoon, having been summoned by President Roosevelt for a conferencce at the White House. Governor John Franklin Fort, of New Jersey, was present at the confab. During yesterday former United States Attorney General John W. Griggs and State Attorney General Robert H. McCarter, two other Jerseymen, were in conference with Messrs. Fort and Murphy.

The President is giving a lot of attention to lining up New Jersey for Secretary of War Taft for the Presidential nomination. He and Governor Fort have become close friends in the last few weeks and there has been credence given to the suggestion that the Governor will be chosen by the Roosevelt men for Vice-President.

Senator Everett Colby, of Essex county, who was in Washington on Wednesday, didn't give much satisfaction to those who endeavored to find out what the President thinks of Fort for Vice-Presidential timber. He said that Mr. Roosevelt thought Fort "a corker," but the impression was gained that Mr. Colby did not take the Vice-Presidential boom seriously.

Former Governor Murphy had been invited to attend the army and navy reception last night and to have supper with the President later, but was understood that a hurry call went out Wednesday for him to come to the capital early in the day. He left Newark in time to reach there about 2 o'clock and went almost immediately to the White House. So far Mr. Murphy has declined to commit himself as to candidates, but it is understood that he is prepared to get aboard the Taft bandwagon.

Griggs a Taft Man.

Mr. Griggs, who, in addition to his office of United States Attorney-General, has to his past credit the election to the Governorship in 1895, is a Taft man, but not a Roosevelt admirer. He says he believes in the Roosevelt policies if they are carried out in a different and less "brutal" manner. He doesn't like what the President says nor the way he says it when communicating with Congress and issuing broadsides.

As the program for the national convention has been worked out by the men who take the Taft and Fort proposition as the winning one, Mr. Griggs will make the speech placing Fort in nomination if he can win out as a delegate at-large.

The President is understood to have talked over the question of New Jersey delegation not only with Messrs. Fort, Colby and Murphy, but with State Assessor David Baird, of Camden, and United States Senator Frank O. Briggs.

New Jersey is entitled to four delegates-at-large, and twenty delegates, two from each Congressional district, in the National Republican convention. It is generally understood that the sentiment of the party managers is expressed by the delegates-at-large, and they are looked upon as the men to swing the delegation as a whole.

According to precedent, Governor Fort, State Chairman Murphy and United States Senators John Kean, Jr., and Briggs would be the delegates-at-large, but there is a plan afoot to have Messrs. Fort, Murphy, Griggs and Baird as the four.

Hot Fight in Prospect.

An effort has been made to get Mr. Baird and former Governor Griggs at war with each other so that there might be a better chance of some other getting a place. That hasn't worked out, and it is said that the Camden county man and the Paterson lawyer may stand together against the two United States Senators.

It was said last night by a Republican who hails from New Jersey that the airing given to Republican politics in his State at the national capital in the last few days had tended to develop one fact more plainly than anything else, and that was the fight in prospect for the control of the State machine. As the first battle of the coming war, there will be a heavy fight, he averred, over the election of the delegates-at-large to the national convention. It was his impression that the plans for the national convention party didn't include a place for Senator Kean, but that Senator Briggs might be chosen.

"Lest We Forget."

Some people in Plainfield seem to have failed to recollect that President Thomas N. McCarter made a speech there about the fairness of the Public Service Corporation only a year ago. This shows how quickly the words of great men are forgotten in these strenuous days.—Newark News.

—Tomorrow, Washington's birthday, will be a legal holiday and The Daily Press will not be published.

POLICE BREAK UP NEWARK WEDDING.

Policemen broke up a wedding party in Newark last night after the guests had gathered and the clergyman awaited to perform the ceremony. The bride's father swore out a warrant for the couple on the ground that the girl was a minor. Herbert B. Hunter, of No. 43 Fillmore street, was to have been the bridegroom. He was to have married Edna H. Ditzel, a pretty girl of seventeen years, who lived at No. 1,330 North Broad street, Elizabeth.

Detectives Foss and Templeton, of the Newark department, arrived at the house in Newark in the middle of the ante-wedding gayety and carried off the two to police headquarters, where they were locked up for the night.

Accompanying the principals were wedding guests, who protested against the arrest and offered bail in vain. Henry Ditzel, of Elizabeth, the girl's father, charged that she was under age, was incorrigible and ran away from his house to wed Hunter in Newark. Miss Ditzel tearfully explained in police headquarters that her father wished her to marry a man much older than she was and for whom she entertained a hearty dislike. Last Sunday she refused and was ordered by her father, she says, to leave his house forever. She then sought Hunter, to whom she had been betrothed in secret, and he took her to the house he and his mother occupied in Newark. Preparations for the wedding were made, and no word was received from the girl's parent until it came dramatically in the form of the warrant and arrest.

EXERCISES IN SCHOOLS

Plainfield Public School Children Appropriately Observe Washington's Birthday.

RECITATIONS AND ADDRESSES.

In City and Borough Children Honor the Memory of "the Father of His Country" Today.

Exercises appropriate to the commemoration of Washington's Birthday were held at the city and borough schools this morning, marked by recitations, readings from the life and deeds of the first President and the singing of patriotic songs. At the Plainfield High School, where a bronze bust of George Washington was received as the gift of J. Ackerman Coles, there was a program of national music by the school and an address by President Demarest, of Rutgers College. The college president also spoke at the exercises at the North Plainfield High School, held at 10:30 o'clock this morning. Here the song "Our Washington's Birthday" was spiritedly rendered by the school. The patriotic exercises of the day were held at 11:45, including speaking by County Supervisor Henry C. Krebs, singing of patriotic songs and readings and recitations by the pupils.

At all the primary schools of the city and borough, the day was observed with appropriate exercises. The program rendered at the primary department execises of the Somerset street school follows:

Singing, "Our Country," by the school; recitation, "February," Bertha Debele; recitation, "Greeting," Randolph Douglas; recitation, "Washington," by twelve pupils the second grade; recitation, "A Maxim," Edith Mundy; singing, "Mt. Vernon Bells," by the school; recitation, "Quotations," by pupils of the fourth grade; piano solo, by Marguerite Johnson; recitation, "Snowflake Valentine," by four girls of the third grade; recitation, "The Lincoln Cabin," Beatrice Bodine; recitation, "Lincoln's Day," Mabel Suffron; recitation, "Lincoln and the entry," Ronald Conroy; piano solo, by Jubilee Rowley; recitation, "The Patriotic School," by pupils of third grade; recitation, "The Old Flag," by three boys of the second grade; recitation, "Hats Off," Walter Debele; singing, "Bonny Flag," by the school; recitation, "Washington," Marion Wooley; recitation, "Good Advice," Carman Emmons; recitation, "Boys of America," Clarence Skiff; recitation, "A Puzzling Question," Henry Leitner; singing, "Little George Washington," by the school.

Y. M. C. A. HEARS OF WORK IN FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

Miss Harriet Taylor, National Foreign Secretary of the Y. W. C. A., summarized the growth of the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. abroad at the home of Mrs. Percy Stewart yesterday afternoon. She was present at the world's Christian Student Federation celebration at Tokio. She has also visited the centres of association work in China, Japan, India and the East.

Rev. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, presided at the afternoon meeting and Mrs. F. G. Meade, president of the local Y. W. C. A. read an encouraging report of the work of the association since April 1, 1907.

In the evening, Miss Taylor gave a similar address on her experience abroad and the work being done in the East at a meeting of the association members held in the Y. W. C. A. building.

Successful Birthday Social.

Under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church a birthday social was held last night. As a result the society netted $33.50. There was an informal program of vocal and instrumental music, presented by Clarence Heaume, Miss Brouard, Miss Martin and Mrs. Grannatt.

DUNELLEN PUPILS RECEIVE PRIZE MEDALS

A feature of the Washington's Birthday exercises at the Whittier School, Dunellen, this afternoon, was the presentation of "Liberty Bell medals" to seven of the pupils of the grammar grades for excellency of work in the recent school examinations and for deportment for the past half year. The medals were offered by Morris Selz, a Chicago shoe manuacturer and philanthropist. Those who received the medals were Miss Jessie Stites, eighth grade; Lloyd Smith, seventh grade; Miss Florence Gray, sixth grade; Miss Dorothy Shaefer, fifth grade; Grandin Neighbor, fourth grade; Miss Helen Messeroll, third grade; Miss Sarah Watson, second grade.

President A. F. Todd, of the Dunellen Board of Education, presented the medals, after a short address commending the winners for conscientious work. Rev. George H. Gardner, pastor of the First Baptist church, of New Market, made the address of the day, and singing by the pupils was a feature of the holiday program.

Mr. Selz, who offered the medals, gives them as a stimulus for proficiency and excellence in deportment to many schools all over the country. Superintendent Messeroll, whose daughter, Miss Helen Messeroll, is one of the winners of a medal, accepted the Chicago man's philanthropic offer, and a number of the medals were sent on. It is probable now that the award of these medals will become a permanent institution in the Dunellen schools, for Mr. Selz has arranged to make similar awards at the conclusion of the school term in June. The "Liberty Bell medals" the designed by Mr. Selz himself, and he has built a special factory in the West for their manufacture and offers them to public schools at large.

Good Shooting at Brantingham's.

Trap shooters gathered in large numbers at Thomas Brantingham's Hotel, yesterday afternoon, to witness several matches of interest to the sporting fraternity. The first match was between Mr. Brantingham and Samuel Adams, fifty birds and $50 a side. The former won out by a narrow margin, the score being 38 to 35 out of a possible fifty. The second match was between Albert DeNise and George Cheeseman, the latter of South Amboy, fifty birds and $25 a side. DeNise won out by a score of 21 to 17. F. C. Bissett, of South River, and Thomas Brantingham engaged in the last match, 25 birds and $5 a side. This was also won by the latter, the score being 16 to 13.

Big Amateur Program.

One of the best amateur programs yet given at the New Plainfield theatre delighted a big crowd there last night. Nine numbers were on the bill and several of them were first class. The show lasted nearly three hours. First prize was taken by Bert Hansen, the borough acrobat and contortionist; second by George Snyder, of Somerville, a banjoist, and third by Prince Cham, a comedy juggler. Nick Parker, who has been seen in Plainfield at the summer band concerts, got a big hand after singing. The next amateur numbers will be given next Friday night and a bunch of good stuff is being framed up.

Entertained Newarkers.

Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., received a visit last night from General Custer Council, of Newark. Franklin Council received and accepted an invitation to visit General Custer Council in the near future. In the course of the regular business a committee comprising Messrs. Compton, Currin, Bodine and Platt was appointed to make arrangements for a masquerade ball to be held soon.

Robinson Found Guilty.

Charles Robinson, the Dunellen negro placed on trial at New Brunswick on charges preferred by boys, was found guilty yesterday afternoon. The jury filed out at 4 o'clock and returned with the verdict in an hour. The evidence given was not nearly so damaging as it was thought it would be and the charge by Judge Booraem was impartial. Sentence was deferred.

"Kid" McGinniss Gets a Year.

"Kid" McGinniss, alias William Browning, whose recent attempts to pass forged checks in this city, using the name of W. F. Wilson, a West Front street grocer, was this morning sentenced by Judge Atwater in the Union County Court to one year in State Prison. McGinniss was arraigned yesterday and he changed his plea from not guilty to non vult.

AMUSEMENTS.

Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Sr., recently bought out the entire seating capacity of the New Amsterdam theatre, where Henry W. Savage's splendid production of "The Merry Widow" is playing, and gave an extra matinee performance, disposing of the 1,800 seats in the playhouse to New York's "400." Mrs. Vanderbilt bought the seats at the usual prices and sold them at a premium. Her transaction netted $6,000 for the Nassau Hospital, in aid of which the performance was given.

One of the most absorbing features of "The Warrens of Virginia," Mr. Belasco's most recent production, now in its third month, at his Forty-second street play house, is the Rose-garden of the Warren home, five years after the war, which forms the last act of the play. The act is a marvelous example of Mr. Belasco's skill in creating the illusion of nature through the expedients of the stage. A wonderful impression is created with Gen. Warren asleep in the arbor and dreaming again of the bugle calls and rumbling artillery of the active days of the war. So perfect is the illusion that the audience sits spell-bound through the short scene, while every eye is moistened with tears of sympathy for the old veteran of the lost cause.

Edna Wallace Hopper, in George M. Cohan's rural play with music, "50 Miles from oston,B"will continue two weeks longer at the Garrick theatre. Miss Hopper and the carefully selected company with which Messrs. Cohan & Harris have surrounded her have made a positive success in this play, evidenced by crowded houses at each performance. The majority of Mr. Cohan's admirers declare this to be the most convincing play that he has yet written. In "50 Miles from Boston" Mr. Cohan has written a play of great dramatic strength. Throughout the three acts there are several musical interpolations which bear the distinct brand aptly described by dramatic reviewers as "catchy Cohanesque compositions." At the end of the engagement of "50 Miles from Boston" at the Garrick theatre, Miss Hopper and her fellow players will be seen for a week at the Grand Opera House, New York. This engagement will be followed by two weeks in Brooklyn, after which Miss Hopper is booked for a tour through New England.

Miss Olga Nethersole, the distinguished English actress, is giving a series of "S. R. O." performances at Daly's theatre. The final week's program will consist of three representations of Sapho, two of Carmen, and one each of The Second Mrs. Tanqueray, Magda and Camille. It will thus be seen that the popular actress is to give an entertaining and varied selection of plays during her short New York season, the first she has had for two years. Her forthcoming appearance will be Miss Nethersole's last in the United States for at least two years as she contemplates partial retirement from the stage after her Paris engagement in May. Miss Nethersole's support at Daly's will include Charles A. Stevenson, Frank Mills, Lionel Belmore, George Ingleton, Lawrence Grant, Langhorne Buxton, Katharine Stewart and Adeline Bourne. In order to accommodate patrons at Daly's theatre, special arrangements will be made for the sale of seats for the entore series, and will begin at Daly's one week prior to the opening.

"The White Store," A. E. Force & Co., proprietors, call your attention to the unusually attractive line of seasonable goods offered. This week the special is found in the department for women's suits and cloaks and an examination of the goods, together with the prices will convince you to the wisdom of trading here.

A Competent Witness.

A friend of the family had been summoned to testify, much against his will, as to certain domestic disturbances in a Chicago household.

"You saw these blows administered?" asked counsel.

"Yes, sir."

"Did you see the beginning of the quarrel between this man and his wife?"

"I did."

"When was it?"

"Six years ago."

"Six years ago!" How is that possible?"

"I was a guest at their wedding," said the witness.—Ladies' Home Journal.

By KATE AND VIRGIL D. BOYLES

(Copyright by A. C. McClurg & Co., 1907.)

"Damn you!" he cried. His hand dropped to his belt.

The two glared at each like fighting cocks. Men crowded around, suddenly aware that a quarrel was on.

"The Three Bar's a gittin' busy!" jeered Jim.

"Come, Jim, I want you." It was Gordon's quiet voice. He laid a restraining hand on Munson's overzealour arm.

"Dick Gordon, this ain't your putin," snarled Sanderson. "Git out the way!" He shoved him roughly aside. "Now, snappin' turtle," to Jim, "the Three Bars 'd better git busy!"

A feint at a blow, a clever little twist of the feet, and Munson sprawled on the floor, men pressing back to give him the full force of the fall. They believed in fair play. But Jim, uncowed, was up with the nimbleness of a monkey.

"Hit away!" he cried, tauntingly. "I know 'nough to swear out a warrant 'gainst you! 'T won't be so lonesome for Jesse now breakin' stones over to Sioux Falls."

"Jim!" It was Gordon's quiet, authoritative voice once more. "I told you I wanted you." He threw his arm over the belligerent's shoulder.

"Comin', Dick. I didn't mean to blab so much," Jim answered, contritely.

They moved away. Sanderson followed them up.

"Dick Gordon," he said with cool deliberateness, "you're too damned anxious to stick your nose into other people's affairs. Learn your lesson, will you? My favorite stunt is to teach meddlers how to mind their own business—this way."

It was not a fair blow. Gordon doubled up with the force of the punch in his stomach. In a moment all was confusion. Men drew their pistols. It looked as if there was to be a free-for-all fight.

Langford sprang to his friend's aid, using his fists with plentiful freedom in his haste to get to him.

"Never mind me," whispered Gordon. He was leaning heavily on Jim's shoulder. His face was pale, but he smiled reassuringly. There was something very sweet about his mouth when he smiled. "Never mind me," he repeated. "Get the girls out of this—quick, Paul."

Mary and Louise had sought refuge behind the big table.

"Quick, the back door!" cried Langford, leading the way; and as the three passed out, he closed the door behind them, saying, "You are all right now. Run to the hotel. I must see how Dick is coming on."

"Do you think he is badly hurt?" asked Louise. "Can't we help?"

"I think you had best get out of this as quickly as you can. I don't believe he is knocked out, by any means, but I want to be on hand for any future events which may be called. Just fly now, both of you."

The unfair blow in the stomach had given the sympathy of most of the bystanders, for the time being at least, to Gordon. Men forgot, momentarily, their grudge against him. Understanding from the black looks that he was not in touch with the crowd, Sanderson laughed—a short snort of contempt—and slipped out of the door. Unable to resist the impulse, Jim bounded out after his enemy.

When Paul hastened around to the front of the building, the crowd was nearly all in the street. The tension was relaxed. A dazed expression prevailed—brought to life by the suddenness with which the affair had developed to such interesting proportions and the quickness with which it had flattened out to nothing. For Sanderson had disappeared, completely, mysteriously, and in all the level landscape, there was no trace of him nor sign.

"See a balloon, Jim?" asked Langford, slapping him on the shoulder with the glimmer of a smile. "Well, your red-headed friend won't be down in a parachute—yet. Are you all right, Dick, old man?"

"Yes. Where are the girls?"

"They are all right. I took them through the back door and sent them to the hotel."

"You kin bet on the boss every time when it comes to petticoats," said Jim, disconsolately.

"Why, Jim, what's up?" asked Langford, in amused surprise.

But Jim only turned and walked away with his head in the air. The serpent was leering at him.

CHAPTER VIII.

The County Attorney.

"I too am going to Wind City," said a pleasant voice at her side. "You will let me help you with your things, will you not?"

The slender girl standing before the ticket window, stuffing change into her coin purse, turned quickly.

"Why, Mr. Gordon," she said, holding out a small hand with frank pleasure. "How very nice! Thank you, will you take my rain-coat? It has been such a bother. I would bring it right in the face of Uncle Hasmond's objections. He said it never rained out this way. But I surely have suffered a plenty for my waywardness. Don't you think so?"

"It behooves a tenderfoot like you to sit and diligently learn of such experienced and toughened old-timers as we are, rather than flaunt your untried ideas in our faces, responded Gordon, with a smile that transformed the keen gray eyes of this man of much labor, much lofty ambition, and much sorrow, so that they seemed for the moment strangely young, laughing, untroubled; as clear of taint of evil knowledge as the source of a stream leaping joyously into the sunlight from some mountain solitude. It was a revelation to Louise.

"I will try to be a good and diligent seeker after knowledge of this strange land of yours," she answered, with a little laugh, half of embarassment, half of enjoyment of this play of nonsense, and leading the way to her suit-case and Mary outside. "When I make mistakes, will you tell me about them? Down east, you know, our feet travel in the ancient, prescribed circles of our forefathers, and they are apt to go somewhat uncertainly if thrust into new paths."

And this laughing, clever girl had cried with homesickness! Well, no wonder. The worst of it was, she could never hope to be acclimated. She was not—their kind. Sooner or later she must go back to God's country.

To her surprise, Gordon, though he laughed softly for a moment, answered rather gravely.

"If my somewhat niggardly fate should grant me that good fortune, that I may do something for you, I ask that you be not afraid to trust to my help. It would not be half-hearted—I assure you."

She looked up at him gratefully. His shoulders, slightly stooped, betokening the grind at college and the burden-bearing in later years, instead of suggesting any inherent weakness in the man, rather inspired her with an intuitive faith in their quiet, unswerving, utter trustworthiness.

"Thank you," she said, simply. "I am so glad they did not hurt you much that day in the court-room. We worried—Mary and I."

"Thank you. There was not the least danger. They were merely venting their spite on me. They would not have dared more."

"There's my brakeman,' said Louise, when she and Gordon had found a seat near the rear. Mary had gone and a brakeman had swung onto the last car as it glided past the platform, and came down the aisle with a grin of recognition for his "little white lamb."

"How nice it all seems, just as if I had been gone months instead of days and was coming home again. It would be funny if I should be homesick for the range when I get to Wind City, wouldn't it?"

"Let us pray assiduously that it may be so," answered Gordon, with one of his rare smiles. He busied himself a moment in stowing away her belongings to the best advantage. "It gets in one's blood—how or when, one never knows."

They rode in silence for a while.

"Tell me about your big fight," said Louise, presently. The roadbed was fairly good, and they were spinning along on a down grade. He must needs bend closer to hear her.

She was good to look at, fair and sweet, and it had been weary years since women had come close to Gordon's life. In the old college days, before this hard, disappointing, unequal fight against the dominant forces of greed, against tolerance of might overcoming right, had begun to sap his vitality, he had gone too deeply into his studies to have much time left for the gayeties and gallantries of the social side in university life. He had not been popular with women. They did not know him. Yet, though dubbed a "dig" by his fellow collegians, the men liked him. They liked him for his trustworthiness, admired him for his rugged honesty, desired his friendship for the inspiration of his high ideals.

Took No Chances.

A Scotch farmer went to town to have a tooth extracted.

"I would advise you to have it out by the painless system. It is only a shilling extra," said the dentist.

He showed the apparatus for administering gas, remarking that it would cause him to fall asleep, and before he awoke the tooth would be out.

After reluctantly consenting, the customer proceeded to open his purse.

"Oh, never mind paying now!"

"Hoots! I wasna thinkin' o' thot, but if I'm gaen tae sleep I thocht I wa like to coont ma siller first."

The Thoughtful Employer.

"Are you aware, sir," said the faithful bookkeeper, "that today is the fortieth anniversary of my service with you?"

The employer took a square box neatly wrapped in white paper from his desk.

"I know it, Mr. Quille,' he said, "and I have prepared a little surprise for you. Pray accept this alarm clock, with my best wishes for your continued punctuality."

FINAL GAMES ROLLED IN BOWLING TOURNEY

With a bunch of good scores piled up on either side, the Wellington and Rhoderick Dhu teams completed the five-man tourney schedule at Campbell's alleys last night, by rolling the final series of games. The Wellingtons took two our of three, losing the last try by nine pins. Had the Rhodericks taken three straight it would have placed them in the tie for fourth place, held by the Brian Borus and the Bismarcks.

Last night's series proved a good finish to the most successful tourney that has yet been held on local alleys. All the team scores were over 800 with one exception and that fell but six short. Double centuries were fairly plentiful, Pope getting one, Gilmore two and Meyer one. Captain Blatz's best mark was a 199 but Harry VanEmburgh couldn't land anything better than 172. Montross and Ortleb were out of the game and their averages less ten were used.

The tourney closes with the Grants in first place, prize $40; Washingtons second, prize $30; Napoleons third, prize $20; Brian Borus and Bismarcks tied for fourth, prize $10. This tie will be rolled off next week. Chauncey Stout wins the first average prize, $7. His figures for twenty-four games are 186.9. V. W. Nash, Jr., with an average of 182.4 gets second money, $5, and Chief Kiely with 181.20 gets third money, $3.

ROSELLE DEFEATS ELIZABETH BOWLERS

The final match in the Central Journal Bowling League tournament was rolled last night between Roselle Casino and the Elizabeth Club, the former taking two of the three games. As a result the Park Club wins the championship by a margin of two games. This makes two legs that the Parks have won on the trophy offered by the Elizabeth Journal and another one will given them permanent possession of the cup.

A large delegation of members from the Park Club witnessed last night's match and joined in the cheering for Roselle. If the county seat boys had taken the series it would have tied them with the Parks for first place. The local team was especially strong this season under the leadership of Captain F. O. Ball and the scores have been above the average. The team was composed of F. O. Ball, Ray Lyman, Edwin Daniel, Monroe Long and Charles Barlow.

The officers of the league will set a time for a meeting soon, when the scores for the season will be computed and the various prizes awarded. The first prize, a silver trophy, presented by the Elizabeth Journal, is to be held by the winner each season until won three times, when it shall become the permanent property of the winning club. In addition team prizes are offered, the first being valued at $20 and the second at $10. The individual prizes include first prize, highest average, $15; second highest average, $10; third highest average, $5, and high score prize valued at $5. To quality for average prizes twenty-four games must be rolled, three of which must be the last three games of the schedule. It is possible that when the prizes are awarded the Parks will entertain the clubs in the league, according to the custom.

THEIR WORK CUT UP.

Armwright Bowlers Will Have a Hard a Hard Proposition in the Elizabeth Stars.

The Armwright bowling team will have their hands full tonight, when they will meet the Elizabeth Stars on Johnny Campbell's alleys. The Stars five, though only organized this season, is composed of experienced and well seasoned bowlers and the local cracks will know they have been shooting before the series is over. The teams will line up as follows:

Armwrights—Kiely, Blatz, Radin, Skelly and Britton. Stars—Clauss, Maloney, Sellers, Burke and O'Donnell.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

Rev. Dr. T. L. Gardner, editor of The Sabbath Recorder, will preach at the Seventh-Day Baptist church tomorrow morning.

The Epworth League of the First M. E. church will hold its monthly social tonight at the home of the pastor, Rev. A. C. McCrea, 610 Central avenue.

The Men's Club of the Seventh-Day Baptist church will meet in the church parlors Sunday night, when William M. Stillman will make an address on some popular topic.

HARD TIMES RUINS PLAYING CARD COMPANY.

The directors of the Willis W. Russell Card Company, which manufactures playing cards at Milltown, announced yesterday that they acquiesced in receivership proceedings brought against the concern by stockholders. Judge Lanning of the United States District Court at Trenton will name a receiver next week.

The directors admit a general inability to meet liabilities as they mature. The indebtedness, including a $24,000 mortgage on the plant, amounts to $83,000, and the assets are between $40,000 and $50,000 of manufactured and unmanufactured playing cards, for which the management cannot find a market. Sales have declined steadily since the general business slump began.

The Russell Company started out to fight the "Card Trust." It obtained the plant at Milltown occupied by the Milltown Rubber Company, which went to the wall trying to compete with the Rubber Trust.

A Unique Window Display.

Among the great number of people who have admired the wash goods display in the windows of the Woodhull & Martin store, very few were aware that the costumes with which the wax figures are draped, are made entirely of paper, so closely do they resemble the regular wash fabrics. They are productions of the Butterick Pattern Company and are correct models of the new spring styles. In connection with a tasteful arrangement of the new wash fabrics, they form a very attractive display. Mr. Jos. C. Martin, the store's decorator, has been highly complimented on his effective work.

CO. K. MAKING EXPENSES

Plainfield Military Boys' Fair Now on for Purpose of Getting Necessary Revenue.

MAYOR IS TO ATTEND TONIGHT.

Mr. Fisk Will Present 100 Per Cent. Duty Medals—Hall Attractively Decorated for the Occasion.

Company K's annual fair opened in the armory on West Front street, Saturday night, under the most favorable auspices. The attendance was exceptionally large, all enjoying the feature of the evening, which was the dancing. The company has left nothing undone in the completion of plans for a successful affair and its efforts have already been rewarded.

The committee in charge of the fair comprise Captain Harry B. Kitchell as the general chairman, together with the commissioned and non-commissioned officers and a number of privates. Special efforts have been made in the decorations. The hall is attractively arranged with a profusion of the national colors, while in the centre of two booths devoted to the sale of fancy article, etc., is a large letter K brilliantly illuminated with small incandescent lights.

Those who assisted the opening night at the booths were Mrs. William Hartpence, Miss Faulks, Miss Weigman, Mrs. Charles Peterson, Mrs. Albert I. Littell and Mrs. George Apgar. The ice cream and candy booth is in charge of T. B. Kolb, while Corporal LeRoy DeCamp and Private Benbrook look after the booth where soft drinks are sold. Sergeant George Apgar is chairman of the floor committee and Sergeant Clarence Bilyeu takes charge of the donations. Private Wallace Morton is stationed at the coat room and Sergeant Alfred Tranchard is on the door.

The music for the dancing is furnished by Charles Suhr's Imperial Orchestra and it is a feature greatly enjoyed by all. The program comprises all of the latest and popular selections.

There will be an attraction tonight of unusual interest, that is the presentation of the 100 per cent. duty medals. The presentations will be made about 9 o'clock by Mayor Charles J. Fisk, who has promised to do so. Among those who are to receive such medals are Sergeant Alfred Tranchard and Corporal J. L. Niles, who have not missed a meeting, drill or company formation of any kind during the seven years the company has been in existence. First Sergeant O. R. Pierson has missed only one formation and that was a funeral, while Lieutenant Charles Peterson was obliged to miss two drills because of appendicitis. The exact number of those to receive the medals tonight will not be known until the appointed time.

The company now has ten experts, nineteen sharpshooters, twelve marksmen and two first class marksmen, a total of forty-three, and there are twelve more members to shoot. Another date will be assigned the company for rifle practise, because of the fact that all the members could not possibly qualify in the three nights scheduled for that purpose. The extra night will probably be Monday, March 9.

The fair will be continued every night this week and will colse on Saturday night. Dancing will be the chief feature, but other things will be arranged to make the event well worth attending.

Avenged His Brother.

As the result of a scrap on North avenue, Saturday night, Willie and Thomas Mullen and John Callahan were locked up at police headquarters. According to the stories told the cops, Callahan assaulted Willie Mullen and when the latter's brother heard about it, he hunted up Callahan and returned the dose with interest. Because of the torn up condition of affairs at the Front street police building, no city court was held this morning and the case will be heard tomorrow at the temporary station on Sycamore street.

Grand Chief to Speak Here.

Grand Chief Oscar M. Condit, of Asbury Park, will be the principal speaker at the seventh anniversary exercises of the Knights of the Golden Eagle, No. 42, to be held tomorrow night. Mr. Condit will be the guest of Grand Sir Herald Horace J. Martin, Sr., of Duer street, during his stay in this city. Past Chief Casper Waglow is at the head of the lodge committee in charge of the affair.

Course in Cooking.

The Y. W. C. A. will open a Lenten course in cooking, comprising six lessons, which will include hot bread and bread mixtures. The class will meet Tuesday mornings from 10 to 11:30. Registration is necessary by March 2.

STATION AGENT PLACED ON R.R.'S RETIRED LIST

Joseph A. Haynes, who for nearly fifty-three years has been in the employ of the New Jersey Central, and since 1876 the company's Plainfield agent, has been placed on the retired list, to take effect April 1. The action of the company is in recognition of long and faithful service.

Mr. Haynes entered the employ of the company about fifty-three years ago as a brakeman on a freight. He was soon advanced to the passenger service and later was made a passenger conductor, which position he held for years. He was then appointed to the position of station agent at Elizabeth, continuing as such until 1876 when he was transferred to the same position at the Plainfield station. He has filled this position with credit to the company and himself and frequently has been complimented by the railroad officials. Mr. Haynes will continue to make Plainfield his home.

Announcement of the successor to Mr. Haynes has not yet been made by the company and there is no intimation as to who will get the position. As Plainfield is one of the most important stations on the line of the road it is the opinion of those in a position to know that great care will be exercised in selecting an agent.

DUSTIN FARNUM APPEARS AT LOCAL THEATRE TONIGHT.

When Dustin Farnum appears in "The Rector's Garden" in this city tonight under the management of Henry B. Harris, the New Plainfield theatre will in all probability be filled to capacity because of the importance of this production. But aside from this it will hold even a greater interest for theatre-goers, for while it is not generally understood by Plainfield people, this will be the first formal presentation given this year. Although Plainfield is to have the first performance, Henry B. Harris has used every effort to insure a series of perfect representations, and in accordance with his usual custom has asked Manager Counihan for what is known in theatrical parlance as "a clear stage," which means that Mr. Harris will bring all the equipment that is necessary for an opening production in New York city, and just as much interest, and in fact more, attaches to this performance than would attach to the first performance in New York as this will be as above stated, the first formal presentation of "The Rector's Garden." Mr. Harris who produced "The Lion and the Mouse," can be absolutely relied upon for one of the best productions that Plainfield will see in a long time.

Tonight should prove a big event from both a dramatic and social standpoint, and the verdict that Plainfield will give will in all probability have great weight upon the future history of the play.

Beside three large touring cars which will bring Mr. Harris and his personal friends to Plainfield this evening, a special car has been chartered to run from New York, and which will bring another party of fifty people who are interested in seeing the first presentation of "The Rector's Garden."

FEINBERG TO BE HEAD OF THIS ORGANIZATION.

An organization to be known as "Union Lodge, No. 340, Ancient and Accepted, Scottish Rite, Free Masons," will be formed here by Henry Bean, of New York, on Thursday night. In a letter for publication Mr. Bean says that "two score of leading business men have made application for membership" and that "those who join now secure the advantages offered by dispensation, paying only the lodge dues of $6 yearly and saving the usual initiation of $75. Harry Feinberg, the West Front street outfitter, has been selected as worshipful master of the new lodge which will be instituted by Hon. Charles E. George, of New York, supreme deputy of the grand lodge of the United States."

Local members of the Masonic order say they have no knowledge of this order.

Mr. Wagner is also circulating a petition and a number of friends have signed it, requesting the court to exercise clemency in his case.

'GRADS' FOR SCHOLARSHIP

P. H. S. Alumni Association May Aid Deserving Pulils in Obtaining High Education.

ALL OFFICERS ARE RE-ELECTED

President Titsworth Makes Encouraging Report—Membership 168 and Funds $770.67.

Stimulating the interest in the Plainfield High School Alumni Association by planning for the enlargement of the association and outlining a scheme for scholarship aid for high school graduates. President A. L. Titsworth made the formal report of the year for the school alumni at the third annual meeting of the association held in the High chool auditorium Saturday night. Officers for the coming year were elected and a committee of the alumni chosen to promote the interests of the organization. At the conclusion of the meeting, dancing was enjoyed until midnight. The affair proved a social success as well as a means of bringing together about 150 of the school alumni.

In an informal speech before the alumni, A. L. Titsworth, president of the association, who was re-elected for another year, spoke of the work accomplished since the meeting a year ago. He emphasized the point that the association should not exist merely for selfish social interests and suggested a plan of scholarship aid. In this connection, he said:

"To be true to the principles of our high school training, we should look beyond ourselves and become absorbed in an effort to do for others. With this end in view, your committee has aimed to give us this definite purpose (scholarship aid) to which our funds may be devoted. We are thus desirous of increasing our alumni fund to a point where the income from it will be ample enough to be an incentive to some worthy young man or woman as a means for securing a course of study in one of our higher educational institutions.

"The records of our secretary show that there are 681 living graduates of the Plainfield High School, of whom 268 are members of our association. Our fund amounts to $770.67. I would make an appeal for an increase in membership. With this unselfish aim in view, let us express our gratitude to our earliest Alma Mater, the Plainfield High School, to the extent at least of joining the association and thereby increasing our fund for scholarship aid.

The treasurer's report, read by Franklin S. Smith, who was re-elected to the office, showed that the balance on hand is $770.67. The receipts, with $702.92 as a balance at the beginning of the year, amounted to $951.80, while the expenses reached $181.13.

Aside from the re-elections of president and secretary-treasurer, A. McClain Parker was re-elected vice-president. The general committee has been enlarged to include S. S. Burr, '70; W. M. Stillman, '72; Miss A. W. Marsh, '73; Miss Jessie M. Utter, '74; W. D. Murray, '75; W. M. McGee, '76; T. Rushmore, '77; Mrs. John Ulrich, '78; Mrs. C. F. French, '79; R. Henry Depew, '80; Mrs. E. H. Hatch, '81; G. M. Kirkner, '82; Mrs. R. L. Bass, '82; Miss S. L. Bass, '84; Mrs. I. M. Wyckoff, '85; Miss F. R. Petrie, '86; E. T. Perine, '88; Miss L. D. Wenzel, '89; W. W. Coriell, 90; Mrs. P. S. Suffern, '91; Mrs. E. D. Williams, '92; Mrs. C. McNabb, '93; C. L. Riley, '94; C. B. Morse, '95; Dr. F. W. Cornwall, '96; Miss L. Egan, '97; H. W. Brower, '98; Miss Helen Lovell, '99; Mrs. William Buckalew, '00; Miss E. L. Titsworth, '01; C. B. LaRue, '02; V. B. Miner, '03; Miss M. J. Spicer, '04; T. P. Gavett, '05; Miss Antoinette Aalholm, '06, and Miss Florence Prior, '07.

There were eighteen dances on the card, and the music was furnished by Miss Mabel Maxson, pianist; Mrs. Violet Truell-Johnson, violinist, and Dr. N. H. Probasco, violinist. Supper was served at tables in the school gymnasium, and was in charge of B. W. Evans, as caterer. There were about 100 couples on the floor. The general committee in charge of the affair consisted of Charles B. Morse, chairman; Mrs. E. H. Patterson, Mrs. C. F. French and Dr. Norman H. Probasco.

WILSON MEMORIAL NOW EIGHTEEN YEARS OLD

In celebration of the eighteenth anniversary of its dedication, the members of the Mary E. Wilson Memorial chapel had special programs at the sessions yesterday afternoon and last night. The attendances were very large, the occasion serving to bring back many of those who had been identified with the congregation in former years.

In the afternoon, Superintendent E. S. Ackor was in charge and gave an address in which he spoke of the future possibilities of the chapel and its encouraging work and asked the help of those present to bring it about. William Henry Rogers spoke of the early history of the Sunday-school which, he stated, was started fifty years ago in the old Washingtonville school house. He told of the many efficient superintendents who had devoted their best energies to making it a success and an influence in the community and how in course of time the school house was outgrown. The work then had assumed such proportions that it needed much larger quarters and the beautiful chapel now standing became the Sunday-school's home through the generosity of Colonel John F. Wilson. It bears the name of his wife who in life was a worker in the Master's cause.

George W. Winans spoke of the pleasant memories that remained of the work in the old school-house and how it led up to the work in the beautiful memorial chapel; beautiful not only in architecture but because many had received the light of Gospel within its walls. A class of girls from the Sunday-school sang two hymns and prayer was offered by chapel members.

In the evening former Assemblyman S. S. Swackhamer, of the borough gave an address on the "American Fag; its Founder, George Washington, and defender, Abraham Lincoln." Musical selections were given by George and Edward Spear and at the close the congregation united in singing "America."

The chapel desk was draped with the Stars and Stripes while a bank of potted plants in full bloom below it added further charm to the attractive interior of the building.

STILL LEARNING STORIES ABOUT GLAZIER FACTORY.

The hearing in the case of Miles Reusch and others against Theodore Glazier, Jr., seeking to make permanent an injunction restraining the latter from continuing to operate his fat rending factory at Alton was resumed this morning before Vice-Chancellor Walker in the Council Chambers, when a number of witnesses were called for the defense, by his counsel, Judge William Newcorn.

The witnesses called included Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan, who had treated the Reusch family; William Van Nest, Harry Van Nest, Thomas Van Nest, Joseph Darby, George Elbertson, James Taylor, formerly proprietor of the hotel at Alton; George Curtis and Charles Payne. All but Dr. Buchanan and Mr. Taylor are now residents in the vicinity of Alton, and their testimony went to show that the fat factory was not objectionable and that the condition is not as bad as complained of by the plaintiff. There was but little variation in the testimony. At 1 o'clock an adjournment was taken until 2 o'clock, when further testimony of Lewis Applegate, George Elwyer, Frances Taylor, William Hatfield and Leslie Lambert was taken.

It will be impossible to conclude the hearing today, as Mr. and Mrs. Glazier are yet to be called to the stand and their testimony will probably take a full half day and their examination will be extensive as to details. S. S. Swackhamer, of the firm of Coddington & Swackhamer, is representing the plaintiffs today in the absence of his partner.

MISS HULL'S ROMANCE

Plainfield Woman to Wed Gen. William Booth's Aid in the Salvation Army.

SHE RANKS AS A MAJOR.

Ceremony to Take Place in London—Bride-elect Once Active in First Baptist Church Here.

Announcement is made of the approaching marriage of Miss Anne Vanderpoel Hull, formerly of North Plainfield, and Commissioner Randolph Sturgess, one of the highest ranking officers in the Salvation Army. Miss Hull is the daughter of the late John Hull, who resided on Grove street, in the borough. The family were active members in the First Baptist church.

Miss Hull, who now holds the title of major in the Salvation Army, joined the army twelve years ago, while a resident of this city. Soon afterward she entered the army training school in New York, and she showed such marked ability in that line of work that she has been kept in the training school ever since.

Three years ago, when she was a captain, Miss Hull was sent to London to take charge of the school there, and while in that work she met Commissioner Sturgess, who had charge of all the social work of the army in Great Britain. He is fifty years old and has been an army officer for twenty years. He was a railroad official before entering the army. The marriage will take place in London tomorrow.

There is only one grade, that of chief of staff, between Commissioner Sturgess and General Booth, the commander in chief. He has recently been private secretary to the chief of staff, who is General Booth's son Bramwell.

COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS' DANCE A GREAT SUCCESS.

The second reception and dance of the season held under the auspices of Plainfield Council, No. 402, United Commercial Travelers' Association, at the Casino, Friday night, was a great success, more than two hundred guests being present from Somerville, Bound Brook, Elizabeth, Westfield, New York and this city. The floor in the large auditorium was tazed to its capacity to accommodate those wishing to dance. An orchestra of fifteen musicians from Newark and New York, under the deadership of Charles Suhr, rendered a program of exceptional merit.

A feature of the affair was the singing by John Salkeld, of New York, a brother of Mrs. Frank W. Weed, of this city. He has a baritone voice of fine quality and strength and he favored the guests with two selections and as many encores which were well received. During the intermission a buffet lunch was served, after which the dancing was continued until an early hour in the morning.

The committee in charge and to whom the credit for the successful affair is due was composed of Frank W. Weed, chairman; James C. Field, Herbert J. Percy, Alfred I. Laing, Richard D. Williams, Aaron D. Thompson, Jr., Walter Hockridge, Arthur Organ, R. L. Day, Charles A. Sturtevant, D. B. Collins and H. F. Warner.

MRS. F. DE LACEY HYDE GIVES A DINNER PARTY.

A charming dinner was given by Mrs. Francis DeLacey Hyde, of Mountain avenue, Saturday night, in honor of Miss Marie Reese, of Baltimore, N. C., and Augustus D. Shepard, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus D. Shepard, of "The Gables," whose engagement was recently announced, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Livingston Hyde, who recently returned from their wedding trip.

Covers were laid for twelve, including chiefly the immediate members of the family. The occasion was made appropriate to the day through elaborate decoration of the national colors. Appropriate favors were also given the guests.

Miss Reese and Mr. Shepard have been spending several days at "The Gables," during which time she has been afforded the opportunity of meeting many of Mr. Shepard's friends here.

An Old-Fashioned Social.

The Men's Club and the Young Men's Club of Hope chapel joined forces Friday night and conducted an old-fashioned Hope social. The program included vocal solos by the Misses Edna and Eunice Eckert, Harold Browning and Harold Farrow; addresses by I. W. Travell and G. Herbert Condict and piano and vocal selections by Mrs. L. R. Howard. A basketball game was afterward given in the gym.

"DUTCH" IDES' SLAYER RETAINS A LAWYER

Patrolman John F. Weber, of Newark, who shot and killed Frank Ides, alias "Dutch" Ides, a notorious criminal, early Saturday morning at Frelinghuysen avenue and Fenwick street, in that city, has retained former Senator Michael T. Barrett as his counsel. The policeman has been on susuension since the shooting, though he has not been detained at the station house. He has remained at his home.

Little blame is now attached to Weber for the shooting. That the killing was an accident there seems to be little doubt. The finding of a revolver three feet from the place where the dead man was picked up incidate that if he had had a chance Ides would have used it on the officer.

While trying to evade arrest, Frank Ides, alias "Jesse James," an escaped convict, for whom a reward of $250 was offered by the Rahway Reformatory authorities, was shot and killed in Newark by Patrolman John H. Weber early yesterday. The scene of the shooting was just north of the Elizabeth city line, in Frelinghuysen avenue.

"COUNTESS" DE ANDERSON NOW ADMITS THAT SHE SWINDLED.

Mrs. Mary De Anderson, who has been in the Essex county jail with her two daughters since January 16, charged with swindling Nutley tradesmen, pleaded non vult to two charges of obtaining goods under false pretenses and one allegation of larceny in the quarter sessions court at Newark Friday. The woman was remanded to jail for sentence March 2.

It is set forth in the false pretense charges that November 16 the woman got $15 worth of meat from Frederick Seidler, of Nutley, and that November 23 she obtained $15 worth of groceries from Charles R. Bedell, of 472 Franklin avenue. The larceny allegation is to the effect that on October 23 she stole kindling wood valued at $50 belonging to Mrs. Olive N. Elliott, from whom Mrs. De Anderson rented the house she occipied in Nutley.

Mrs. De Anderson was taken from the jail to the court house about 10 a. m. She remained seated until after 12 o'clock awaiting the arrival of her counsel, Jarvis N. Atkinson, of Jersey City, before entering her plea of non vult. Excepting a few minutes while she was conversing with her counsel Mrs. De Anderson kept her face veiled.

The woman's two daughters, Elizabeth, 19 years old, and Florence, 18 years old, who were arrested with her and locked up as witnesses, will probably be released in a few days. The three were taken into custody by sheriff's constables at the Elliott home, on the complaint of Nutley tradesmen.

Mrs. De Anderson has had various cognomens. Since her arrest she has declared her real name is Mary Wheeling, the one she went by while living in this city. She is best known as "Mrs. Mary McCarton" and has had a remarkable career. According to the authorities she has piled up many debts in various cities of the country.

MUSICAL SERVICE AT PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

The monthly musical service was held at the First Presbyterian church, last night, under the direction of Clifford A. Braider, organist and choirmaster. The quartet choir, Miss Anna L. Case, soprano; Miss Jassamine Burd, contralto; F. C. Iglehart, Jr., baritone, and E. D. Cutting, tenor, was assisted by Elmer P. Wheeler, flutist, and Miss Alice C. Miller, pianist. The service was attended by a large congregation and the following program was greatly enjoyed:

Trio, "Largo," Handel, piano, organ flute; anthem, "Softly Now the Light," Niedlinger; soprano solo, "I Know that My Redeemer," from "Messiah;" flute solo, "Because," from Jocelyn, Godard; anthem, "Savior Like a Shepherd," Niedlinger; baritone solo, "Lord God of Abraham," from "Elijah;" soprano and contralto duet, "Calm as the Night," "Gatse; trio, "Cavatina," Raff, trio, piano and organ.

Hotel Keeper Fined $250.

William Rapp, the Lincoln hotel keeper who was convicted of selling liquor on Sundays, was arraigned before Judge Booraem at New Brunswick, Friday, and fined $250. Rapp's counsel, Peter F. Daly, made a strong plea for clemency based on the defendant's army record and the court stated that this had been taken into consideration. Judge Booraem stated afterward that in the future it would be his policy to impose prison sentences for violations of the excise law.

FUN LEADS TO SHOOTING

Skylarking Youth Laid Low by Bullet from Pistol in Friend's Hands.

VICTIM IS IN THE HOSPITAL.

Clarence Drake, Who Held the Weapon, Released in $500 Bail—Says It Was Accidental.

In a friendly scuffle at the Grant Avenue station of the New Jersey Central shortly before 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, Lewis Mulford, the nineteen-year-old son of Mrs. Anna Mulford, of West Fourth street, received a bullet in the right side from a pistol in the hands of Clarence Drake, eighteen years old, of West Third street, agent at the station. The wounded youth was conveyed to Muhlenberg Hospital, where attempts were made to extract the leaden missile but without success. His condition was quite favorable this morning and the surgeons will use the X-ray in their efforts to locate it some time this afternoon.

Drake summoned the ambulance after the shooting and then surrendered to the police. He was detained at headquarters and this morning Judge William N. Runyon held him in $500 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury. The magistrate secured Mulford's statement at the hospital last night and the stories from both sides concur in the assertion that the affair was accidental.

The version of the shooting given by the police is to the effect that Mulford entered the station and began sky-larking. He was told to desist by Drake but continued his capers and pretended to pour oil on a pile of Sunday newspapers as if he was going to burn them. The two then scuffled about and Mulford eventually reached down in a desk drawer where he knew Drake kept a revolver. This led to more running and jumping as the weapon was flourished and in a clinch it passed into Drake's hands.

Mulford ran out of the front door as the young agent announced in a bantering way that he would shoot unless the fooling was stopped and after going a short distance looked around. He saw Drake standing in the doorway pointing the weapon at him and then ran again. The next instant a report rang out. He felt a sting in the right side and dropping to the ground yelled that he had been shot.

Drake thought he was fooling and only laughed but Mulford repeated that the bullet had struck him and his frightened appearance bore out the assertion. Dropping the pistol, Drake assisted him to the station and sent a hurry call for the ambulance. He said afterward that he had fired the pistol purely in fun and that he had no idea the bullet would strike Mulford.

Drake is the son of Charles F. Drake, of West Third street, who has been employed for many years at the Commercial Mills. He is one of the youngest station agents employed by the company and only a short time ago was a messenger at the North Avenue station.

Funeral of Civil War Veteran.

A delegation of twenty members of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, R. A. G., attended the funeral of William Ayers, the Civil War veteran who died Friday morning at Dunellen. The funeral service was at his late home on Main street, Dunellen and in charge of Rev. E. C. Dutcher, pastor of the Dunellen Methodist church, who spoke feelingly of the life of service of Mr. Ayers. There were many floral tributes, including a handsome piece from the Post. The pall-bearers were Firman Joice, Fred Wenzel, J. W. Fink, H. C. Smith, William Hand and F. Pennington. The interment was at Hillside cemetery.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The annual school meeting of the borough and township schools will be held Tuesday evening, March 17. In the local school, the recently made budget will be voted upon, and a district clerk and two members of the board will be elected. Those whose terms expire are District Clerk T. W. Day, Frank R. Wynkoop and Wilson S. Frederick. At the New Market school, the question of a new school building will come up. The question to be voted on is: "Whether or not a school building is wanted in the northeastern section of the township to accommodate the pupils in the present Maple avenue district and in the vicinity of New Brunswick avenue and Fourth street." The expiring terms are those of President A. G. Nelson, William Beiler and John Geary.

The first meeting of the Saturday Night Club, formed two weeks ago by some Brookview residents, was held at the home of Miss May Fields on Washington's Birthday. The officers of the association are Miss May Field, president; Miss Emily Hallett, vice-president, and Mrs. J. A. Coffey, secretary-treasurer.

The Washington's Birthday dinner served at the Methodist church under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society Saturday noon proved a great success. Dinners were served to 150 people and a neat sum has been realized to add to the fund for the maintainance of the church.

Rev. William Allen, Jr., pastor of the First Presbyterian church at Haddonfield, exchanged pulpits with Rev. W. W. Casselberry yesterday, preaching at the local church morning and evening.

Friendship Council will hold a regular meeting and initiation in Friendship Hall tonight.

NEW BRUNSWICK THEATRE MANAGER MAKES A BIG KICK.

Samuel C. Miller, manager of the New Brunswick opera house, is one of the theatrical men lobbying at Trenton against the bill now pending which is intended to keep children away from the theatres. He declares that if the bill becomes a law the theatre managers of the State will live up to the letter of the law and will prohibit everyone under 16 years of age from their playhouses, whether accompanied by parents or not.

He says that it is not fair to make managers vouch for the parentage of children. Under the proposed law, he says, a man might meet a boy on the street, offer to take him to the theatre and then the boy's parents could cause the arrest of the manager for violating the law. The only safe way would be to prohibit all children, and he feels that if that is done the law would become so unpopular that it would be repealed.

Wire Stringing in Streets.

The New Jersey Supreme Court has handed down a decision which will stop telephone, lighting and other public utility corporations from mutilating street trees by cutting out the tops, says the Los Angeles Times. Streets are not laid out or contemplated from a consideration of these companies, nor should such corporations be given any hearing where their interests conflict with those of the masses. Wires of all kinds should be strung only under three conditions—viz., in alleys or on rear property lines; fifty feet above street, later to be put under ground, or placed in subterranean conduits at the outset. Eventually all companies must bow to these or similar restrictions.

CHORUS GIRLS' BANK.

New York, Feb. 24.—Several of the principals and chorus of Charles Frohman's "Miss Hook of Holland" company have suffered by the recent suspension of New York banks. To prevent a recurrence, they have organized a banking system of their own. Little Florence Nash, "the girl with the hair-lip," is the president, board of directors, cashier and paying and receiving teller of the institution. The scheme, originated by Miss Nash, is simplicity itself and of Gibraltar-like solidity. Every pay day each member of the big company leaves with Miss Nash a portion of his or her salary, Miss Nash giving each one a receipt. Laden down with her deposits Miss Nash dashes home in an automobile and places the money in three small receptacles of iron—such as many a father of a growing family has found handy when in need of carfare. The "Miss Hook of Holland" company are enthusiastic over the plan and under the motherly spur of Miss Nash are becoming great hoarders. Eminent financiers have endorsed the reliability of the new Nash'nl banks, freely acknowledging their superiority in this regard to many older and more imposing institutions. Miss Nash's commercial integrity is above suspicion.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

BASEBALL.

The New York Nationals are billed to play an exhibition game with Newark in New York on Sunday, April 19. This will make three major league attractions in a row, as the local season will be opened on Sunday, April 5, with the Philadelphia Athletics, and on the following Sunday, April 12, the New York Americans will play there.

Rube Oldring, is holding aloof from signing a contract with the Philadelphia Athletics on account of the salary question.

Allan Storke, the former Providence player, who made a success with Pittsburg, last season, has notified Barney Dreyfus that he will not play baseball next season, but instead will devote his attention to the study of law. Storke is now proprietor of a billiard academy in Cleveland.

Manager John Ganzell, of Cincinnati, has completed preparations for taking the Reds to St. Augustine, Fla., where spring training will begin on March 10.

Walter Levernze, a pitching phenom, of South Chicago, has been signed by the Hartford club.

Teddy Shortman, outfielder, formerly of this city, is considering the advisability of starting out in professional company next season. Shortman, who is a heavy hitter and a fast man in the field, has been proffered a contract by Manager Dan O'Neill, of the Springfield (Mass.) club of the Connecticut League.

Jiggs Donahue, first baseman of the Chicago Cubs, is laid up at his home in the Windy City from injuries received in an automobile accident.

Clark Griffith, manager of the New York Americans, has turned over to Jersey City a pair of promising players in Ira Plank, a pitcher, and "Rube" DeGroff, an outfielder.

Bobby Lowe, the former Detroit utility infielder, has signed a contract to manage Grand Rapids next season.

The Atlantic Association, a new baseball league, has been launched in Boston with Hugh McBreen, secretary of the Boston American League Club, as president. The circuit will be made up of Portland, Lewiston, Taunton, Manchester, Salem, Newport, Pawtucket, the eighth city to be either Nashua, Fitchburg or Woonsocket.

Charley Klein, the Trenton twirler, has signed with the Southwesterns, a semi-professional team of Philadelphia, for next season.

The first game of baseball in Cape May county this year was played at Rio Grande on Washington's Birthday, when a picked team of local players contested with the All-Stars of Cape May Court House.

GOLF.

The time and place for the national golf tournaments this year are as follows: Open, Myopia, August 27-28; amateur, Garden City, September 14-19; women's, Chevy Chase, October 19-24.

The success with which "Marty" O'Loughlin is meeting at Southern Pines is gratifying to his many friends. If he achieves no further honors this season than the one of defeating Gilbert Nichols, which he did by 1 up, it will be glory enough for one season. According to the reports "Marty" is very popular with Southerners and has made a host of friends.

Another week will find the first of March here and enthusiastic golfers are beginning to arouse themselves and prepare for the return of the season when they can get their favorite exercise. The coming season promises to be one of exceptional interest and success at the Plainfield Country Club, and the Park Golf Club will be right there when the playing season opens.

It is reported that Princeton and Dartmouth have settled their differences, which caused a cessation of football games two years ago, and will meet again on the gridiron in a match to be played at the Polo Grounds in New York city on November 7, one week before the Yale-Princeton battle at Princeton. This game will take the place of the usual Cornell-Princeton contest, recently called off, and means that the Tigers will not entertain a proposition to renew relations with the University of Pennsylvania until 1909, if then.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Miss Grace Elliston, who appears here in support of Dustin Farnum in "The Rector's Garden," which Henry B. Harris will present at the New Plainfield theatre tonight, appeared in 1906 for a series of special matinees with Mrs. La Moyne in Browning's "A Blot in the 'Scutchon." Miss Elliston scored a great hit as Mildred, and it was through her splendid work in this play that brought her to the attention of Henry B. Harris, who engaged her to create the leading feminine role in "The Lion and the Mouse."

"We Are King," which comes to the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow night, with David B. Gally in the leading role, is a bright comedy, and was used by Walker Whiteside for three seasons as a starring vehicle. The action is in Kahnburg, a small principality in Germany, and deals with the complications in trying to dethrone King Hector, a despot, who has run his kingdom into debt and ground down his subjects. Gustavus Venner, correspondent for the London Record, a light-hearted fellow, wanders into Kahnberg in search of news. He is arrested as a spy. The Prime Minister of Kahnburg and his followers, who are plotting to rid the kingdom of Hector, are so impressed with Venner's marvelous resemblance to the king, that they induce Venner to impersonate the king, who is away on a secret mission. Venner, under the impression that he is rendering the king and the court a favor, and seeing good "copy" in sight, consents. Hector returns unexpectedly and is dragged away to prison as a spy, while Venner, costumed as the king and accepted by the court, proceeds to run the kingdom. He lowers the taxes on the people, throws the palace open to the public, and gets himself into all sorts of ludicrous complications through his ignorance of court affairs. An excellent cast and complete scenic equipment has been provided by Manager A. W. Cross.

The elements of genuine human interest are so nicely blended with the softest and sweetest heart tones, the lines of the spontaneous wit and humor of the bluff, rugged Western miners are so cleverly and skillfully intermingled with the deepest pathos that paternal love can inspire, that the Kirke La Shelle production of Paul Armstrong's excellent comedy, "The Heir to the Hoorah," which will be presented at the New Plainfield theatre Wednesday night, was pronounced by all critics the greatest and most pleasing of the decade. "The Heir to the Hoorah" is a true American comedy, by an American author, produced by an American manager, acted by American players and thoroughly enjoyed by American audiences.

Ruth Gadsley, in "We Are King," at the New Plainfield Theatre Tomorrow Night.

DEAD MOTORMAN TO BLAME.

Coroner's Jury at Hackensack Finds Eagan's Carelessness Caused Fatal Trolley Crash On Trestle.

Coroner Curry, of Hackensack, Wednesday evening conducted an inquest in the case of Michael H. Eagan, of Hackensack, who was fatally crushed in a trolley head-on collision last Friday morning on the trtestle over the New Jersey and New York Railroad just west of Union street, Hackensack.

Eagan was the motorman of a Newark and Hackensack car. He is said to have passed the red signal that was against him at Union street and proceeded on the single track in the dense fog. A Lodi car traveling east crashed into the Newark car. The motorman did not have time to avoid a crash because of the fog, and Eagan was crushed. The jury returned a verdict to the effect that Eagan came to his death because of his own negligence.

Freedom Castle, No. 42, Knights of the Golden Eagle, initiated Rev. E. E. Roberson, pastor of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, into the mysteries of the order at its last meeting. The divine was much pleased with the work and he afterward announced that he would preach a series of three sermons on "The Christian Knight," basing his remarks on thoughts suggested by the initiatory work.

LOWERED FAMILY TO SAFETY.

Gillette Farmer Saves Wife and Children from Fire that Destroyed Home and Barn.

The house and barn of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Yost and family, of Valley road, Gillette, was destroyed by fire from an unknown cause Wednesday morning.

Tuesday night the family retired, leaving a lamp burning in the next room, as they had done a number of times before. Early in the morning Mr. Yost awoke and went to open the door of the next room. He saw it was filled with smoke. He at once awakened his wife and children and tried to get to the first floor, but the fire was blazing so that they could not go down that way.

Mr. Yost took a bed sheet and tied his wife with it and lowered her from the second floor window.

He repeated the act with his two small children, and lastly he jumped down himself. When he landed the house was all ablaze and the sparks set fire to the barn, which was filled with hay.

Mr. Yost ran to the barn and set free his horse and chickens. Everything else was burned. Mr. Yost and his family went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Howell and are staying there at present. The damage is estimated at about $3,000. The fire is believed to have been incendiary, although Mr. Yost has no known enemies.

BAYONNE SCHOOL FIGHT.

Transfer of Grammar School Fund for High School Site Causes Trouble.

At a lively meeting of the Bayonne Board of Education Friday evening a communication was received from the Board of School Estimate announcing the transfer of $29,250, which was to have been used for building an addition to Public School No. 4, to go toward purchasing a site for the proposed new high school.

All of the Democrats present scored the measure heartily, and one Republican, William W. Anderson, made a speech in which he denounced it as "a wanton betrayal of the trust imposed by the people in the Bord." The proposed high school plan, he said, would benefit three per cent. of the children of the city at the expense of ninety per cent.

After a prolonged session a resolution was adopted calling for an appropriation of $150,000 for a grammar school in the First ward, the district affected by the proposed reduction of the funds for school No. 4.

There will be initiation at the meeting of Plainfield Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., tonight.

No Vulgarity.

"You inherited quite a nice little fortune," said the lawyer.

"Yes," replied the fortunate youth.

"I suppose you will play a lot of your debts now?"

"I had thought of it, but I concluded to make no change in my manner of living. I don't want to be accused of vulgar display."

Secret of Failure.

The secret of most men's failure is mental dissipation, wandering energies, squandering energies upon a distracting variety of objects instead of condensing them into one.—London Chat.

INDIA'S HORRORS TOLD

Rev. Milnor Wilbur, of Trenton, Gave Graphic Description to First Baptists.

IN AN ILLUSTRATED LECTURE.

Priests Shockingly Immoral and Depravity Growing Worse—Women An Abused Lot In That Land.

"Inglorious and Glorious India" was vividly pictured and described in an illustrated lecture given at the First Baptist church, last night, by Rev. Milnor Wilbur, pastor of the Central Baptist church, Trenton. The service was held under the auspices of the Young People's Association and was largely attended. Mr. Wilbur is a warm personal friend of Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, having been a member of the latter's church at Charleston, S. C., many years ago.

The many fine views displayed by Mr. Wilbur were taken by himself on his trip around the world. They described the beauties of the many large temples in India, erected at fabulous cost and pictured the primitive method of travel. The speaker explained the great difference in the character of the people living in the lowlands and the highlands. Those of the lowlands being indolent and lazy, while those of the highlands are bright and vivacious.

During his remarks Dr. Wilbur gave an impressive description of the life of women in India and of child marriages. He declared that the degradation of the women of India begins at birth. After her marriage she completely loses her identity, being bound to her husband and subject to his every will and whim. If he goes on a journey she is compelled to live in solitary confinement until his return. In referring to the social vices of India he said that they are ever increasing. A widow loses everything upon the death of her husband and is only permitted to eat once in twenty-four hours. If she should marry again all of her property would be confiscated.

An interesting part of the talk was that showing the intelligence of the elephants in the performance of hard labor in India. Mr. Wilbur said that they displayed almost human intelligence in the handling of heavy logs.

Pictures showing the beautiful parts of India and the great engineering skill in the building of railroads were much enjoyed. The speaker also dwelt at some length on the religious life in India, explaining the many queer forms to be found in the religious beliefs of the natives. In this respect Mr. Wilbur said that morality and religion do not go hand in hand. One form of worship described was that of the monkey, the cow and the goat, all held to be sacred. He referred to the morality of the priests as shocking beyond description.

The speaker gave a brief account of the great work being accomplished in India by the missionaries, especially at the Baptist seminaries and mission stations, and described the delight of the natives upon the receipt of a box or barrel from American churches. While the pictures showing the horrors of the country impressed all, Mr. Wilbur presented the more hopeful side which afforded much encouragement to those interested in mission work in that country.

ON "THE OPEN CHURCH"

Rev. Abel C. McCrea Depicts the Religious Organization of Future Times.

DOCTRINES NOW TOO NARROW.

The Ideal Brotherly Love That Will Draw Men to Christ—Many Shortcomings of the Church of Today.

The Church of the future as he would like to see it, and for that matter as multitudes of others would too, furnished the theme of Rev. A. C. McCrea's sermon at the First M. E. church last night. "The Open Church" was the topic and Mr. McCrea had this to say about it:

"It is not my purpose tonight to speak of any church in particular, nor to criticise any organization existing in this city. I am merely going to set forth some characteristics of church government which, if free to act, I would incorporate for the formation of what, to my mind, would be the open church. There are some features of the government of my own church which are not, to my mind, ideal, and which should be modified to secure the best religious interests of the community. My ideal of religion is to have a church with the doors very wide open—open to all mankind.

"And this is the spirit of my text, taken from Revelations, 21: 25, 'And the gates of it shall not be shut at all by day, for there shall be no night.' This means that the church is always open, and is symbolic of my ideal of the open church. The text depicts the New Jerusalem, the Bride and chosen Church of Jesus Christ. The open gate is a characteristic of the New Jerusalem and, I believe, should by typical of the Open Church here on earth.

"The open church should be a church of the most reasonable rule or rules. Some church rules, enacted even in recent times, seem to me to act as bars to keep the people out. They are in the way of a free admission to the communion service, as some people interpret them, and I often have to explain away these rules by a broader interpretation of their principles, to get people to feel free to come and partake of the Holy Supper.

"Especially would I speak of Rule 248 of the church discipline in this connection. I don't believe that many in this congregation know what this rule is. In fact, if I were to take a vote of this congregation, I could easily prove this, for I don't believe that many members even have a copy of the church Discipline. This rule is one that that is freely interpreted by our church, but I would not insist on its enforcement for I believe it is an unreasonable rule. The Open Church would not have such a rule. The first part of this rule 248, providing that no church members shall use liquor immoderately, or work for the cause of license, is, I believe, all right. But there is a list of pleasures quoted in it, which are forbidden to members of the church. These include dancing and card playing. No such provisions as that would characterize the discipline of the Open Church. John Wesley modified this rule, but it is a barrier to communicants, who even today interpret it literally.

"If we are to have the Open Church let us have reasonable rules. Every church has its rules, and they may be necessary, but when a man has the courage of his own convictions under the influence of the spirit of Christ the Master, there is no need of petty regulations to guide him. What we want is to infuse the spirit of self government into the heart of man and let him form his own rules.

"The second characteristic of the Open Church, as it appeals to me, is one that deals with the doctrines and teachings. These ought to be preeminently scriptural, rather than philosophical, as they seem to be in the present day. The age of the creed has passed. The Christian of today want statements of the word of Christ, not statements of the church councils. There is a growing tendency by the average man to conform to the statements of the Bible, and the Open Church is the one that lays emphasis on the statements and the Bible.

"I have always felt that the formality of the constant reptition of the creed is almost as good as time thrown away. I question whether many people think of what they are saying when they repeat the Creed, constant repitition doesn't mean very much. We have grown away from it. The Christian today woes not want to know what the author of the Creed meant, he wants to know what God means.

"The third characteristic of the Open Church has to do with worship. The Open Church will have a worship that is a simple, scriptural devotional service. I believe that extreme simplicity ought to be the principal characteristic of the Open Church as it is the characteristic of the teaching of St. Paul in the early church. St. Paul was the church, when he talked to the people, and he taught the scripture of Jesus Christ. Our ritual is too complicated, and loses much by its elaborate form.

"We now have the institutional church in some of our cities. This is new, and has done marvelous works, but is it not to my mind, the Open Church, and I should deplore anything like it in this city. It has its place in the work of peculiar localities, such as the lower East Side of New York, but is not the church for the frontier or for China.

"The Open Church is the church that will reach all, the small church that holds forth the plain teachings of God's word and presents opportunity for spiritual worship. This is my ideal of the Open Church, and such a church would be better than the magnificent cathedral with all its ritual and pomp. All who believe in the Open Church believe in the open Bible and in missions. But the missionary cannot carry with him any ritual. All he can take on his journeys among the heathen is the Bible. The Open Church that is going to reach all people must be ready to adopt the simple form of service, such as a Christian man can conduct in his home. Many of our churches today are products of pride and Christ as the ideal is sometimes lost in the mass of ritual. This true worship cannot come in the cathedral, but must be the simple form of worship.

"The last characteristic of he Open Church I shall menion is a membership that is given as in a general fraternity, and this is the best of all, I think. When a man comes into the church, there should be a general manifestation of fraternal spirit. That is not the magnificent building. There is nothing that could prevent the redemption of this world for Jesus Christ in the world today if every one who had the spirit of God would turn and open his heart to his brother. If this were done, you couldn't build churches big enough. In this sort of Christianity would be the true Open Church, which would be just as much open as the gates of the celestial city, the New Jerusalem. These, I take it, are at least four characteristics of what we call the Open Church."

TOWN PUBLICITY BUREAU.

Persistent Bugling Calls Attention to Local Opportunities.

The town publicity bureau is a development of recent years. There are many cities and a considerable number of smaller towns throughout the United States now which maintain regular bureaus for the purpose of making the outside world acquainted with the place concerned. One of these is Atlantic City, N. J. Secretary G. S. Lenhart of the Atlantic City publicity bureau has issued his second annual report. It contains facts and figures which prove conclusively that it pays to push a town.

During 1907 more than 12,000 persons called at the bureau headquarters to get information. Eighty-five State and national conventions were held in Atlantic City through the efforts of the publicity bureau. More than thirty other public events were pulled off by the bureau's co-operation, each attracting thousands of people to the town.

Atlantic City of course is a seashore resort and consequently opportunities for publicity bureau booming which the average town lacks, but almost any wide awake town may attract attention to itself and incidentally help itself to the good things of this world by blowing its own bugle systematically and persistently. It is always wise to employ the right kind of bugler, one who knows his business.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

A pinch of salt taken before meals stimulates digestion.

A cup of strong coffee will remove the odor of onions from the breath.

Nervous spasms are usually relieved by dissolving a little salt in the mouth.

Bathing in salt water tones up the skin and gives it a fresh, wholesome color.

For corns take equal parts of lard and quinine and mix thoroughly. Apply at night.

For a sprained ankle the whites of eggs and powdered alum made into plaster is almost specific.

Hot water is better than cold for bruises. It relieves pain quickly and will prevent discoloration.

Stewed rhubarb has a well known medicinal value besides being a complexion beautifier. It is said to be valuable for rheumatic troubles.

Eggs are considered one of the best remedies for dysentery. Beaten up slightly and swallowed they tend to lessen the inflammation of stomach and intestines.

In even severe attacks of colic a teaspoonful of salt dissolved in a teacupful of cold water has been known to give immediate relief. The same dose will rivive a person who has been stunned by a heavy fall if he can be forced to swallow.

A teaspoonful of ground mustard in a cupful of warm water is a prompt and reliable emetic and should be taken in cases of poisoning or cramps from overeating. Powdered resin is the best thing to stop bleeding from cuts.

Never Took the Hint.

Jackson—Well, what did your wife say to you when you got home so late last night? You know you were agraid she'd scold. Fairleigh—My wife's a jewel. She didn't scold a bit. In fact, she didn't even ask me where I had been or what had delayed me; but, late as it was, she sat down at the piano and began to play and sing. I tell you she's one in ten thousand. Jackson—What did she sing? Fairleigh—"Tell Me the Old, Old Story."

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The joint fair for the benefit of the Public Library and Excelsior H. and L. Co., which was held in the hall Friday and Saturday nights, was a success in every way. The two associations will realize about $75 each after all expenses are paid. Hard times did not seem to effect the friends who turned out to help the affair, as about everything in the several booths was cleaned up. Mrs. Elizabeth Sykes was in personal charge of the fair and was ably assisted by the committee and women friends of the library and fire company.

The five-man team match, which was to have been shot Washington's Birthday between the Brookside and Borough gun clubs, was postponed. The borough team was unable to get the team together. The afternoon was spent in general sweepstake shooting.

Washington's Birthday was generally observed in town, although the stores remained opened all day on account of the day falling on a Saturday. The residents in general, rowever, enjoyed a day from work.

Mrs. George L. Dunn led the weekly meeting of the B. Y. P. U. held last night in the church parlors. The Port Watch Society met with the B. Y. P. U. and will continue to do so for a time.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

The second annual ball given by the Middlesex Volunteer Fire Company in Washington Hall on Friday was successful in every way. The decorations were greatly admired and showed the results of much hard work on the part of Messrs. Horn and Brantingham. The richly-embroidered cushion which was made by Mrs. H. Klinger and Mrs. C. Brantingham was raffled off and fell to the youngest child of Patrick Kane. The music was by Professor Naylor, William Kenyon and Henry Neilson, all of Plainfield. A large number of implements which had recently been purchased for the use of the company were displayed among the decorations, and formed one feature of the attractions. It is stated that the profits from the event will reach nearly $100.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Manning, accompanied by their little daughter, Frances, are staying for a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Manning.

"A Box of Monkeys," which is said to be a screaming farce-comedy, will shortly be produced in Washington Hall.

Leonard Attlee returned last evening to his business in New York after a week's end stay with his parents.

Earl Darlington, of Watchung avenue, Painfield, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Attlee at the parsonage.

KILLED BY EXPRESS TRAIN.

Charles Muncker, a hotel proprietor, of No. 7 South Fourth avenue, Mount Vernon, was struck by an express train and instantly killed Friday at the West Eighth street station of the New Jersey Central Railroad, in Bayonne.

Muncker had been to see his wife, who is in Bellevue Hospital, New York, undergoing an operation, and later called upon Benjamin Eggers, who lives opposite the railroad station in Bayonne. As he approached the station to take a train for New York he heard one coming, and believing it to be the one he wanted, he sprang over a fence which separates the tracks, instead of passing through the underground passage. Just as he landed on the tracks the express struck him. The body was taken to No. 419 East Twenty-fifth street, New York, where Muncker's sister-in-law, Mrs. Pape, lives.

CALLS HIS WEDDING A JOKE.

Alleging that a second and bigamous marriage he had entered into was only a Hallowe'en prank and not considered seriously, William G. Seamon, twenty-three years old, of No. 346 Grove street, Jersey City, was taken from his home to Newark yesterday and locked up on a charge of bigamy made by Lillian D. Daniels, of No. 165 Mercer street, Jersey City.

The two were married in Newark last Hallowe'en by the Rev. Isaac B. Hopwood, though Seamon already had a wife. Miss Daniels claims that she did not know Seamon was a married man, while Seamon's story is that she did not regard the ceremony seriously at the time, but has used it since to make him trouble, which culminated in his arrest. Dr. Hopwood is said to have believed the ceremony was seriously intended. Seamon is held pending an investigation.

Miss Cubberley, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. J. A. Cubberley, of New York State, formerly of this city, is visiting friends in town.

VOICE FOR LOCAL OPTION

Swedish Evangelical Pilgrim Pastor Tells of the Evils of the Liquor Traffic.

DEMAND FOR LEGISLATION.

Says It Is a Christian Duty to Prevent Men From Becoming Drunkards—Stirring Address on Intemperance.

Rev. Theodore Englund, pastor of the Swedish Evangelical Pilgrim church, last night, gave a talk on local option. He took a firm stand against the liquor traffic and said incidently:

"I have been asked to present the very important subject of temperance reform and what is being done and ought to be done in regard to it in our State. I do not hesitate to say, though some people may think contrary, that the minister is best qualified to speak upon this subject. There is no doubt but that he sees it in the right light and the people ought to take his advice for their own good.

"In the first place I venture to say that the intemperance or drink evil is a great and awful foe to humanity, a merciless monster who crushes many a strong and good man and woman to ruin and drags the weak and innocent with him. This awful foe is among us because we have bid him to come and be with us, and we have not driven him out from our communities. We are still offering some of our best gifts to him and get shame and curse in return.

"It is an outrage that we as citizens and voters shall not have a right to say whether we want such places. But they are thrust upon us with or against our will. It shall not be so if we use aright the power vested in us as a self-governing people. Therefore do I say let us wake up to our duty and do all in our power to make good for the time we have neglected it. Let us do it in the right way through legislation and we shall surely be victorious.

"I hear some people say that the rum traffic cannot be stopped because people want it and will have it whether there is law against it or not. This is altogether false, for people do not want that which is bad and harmful for them, and if some are weak enough and wicked enough to want it they shall not have it with the consent of the law. If there are some old drunkards, who have perhaps been born drunkards and lived as drunkards and are bound to die as such, it is awfully sad and cannot be helped. But we can help that others are drawn in to the same curse from time to time. I am convinced that it would be far better for people if there were no intoxicating drinks and no one would want any.

"Let the working people wake up and see that their worst foe is the saloon. This can be proved by facts and figures. They do not need strong drink and therefore we want to take it out of their way when they do not understand to do it themselves. I hope the working people will be better paid but I do hope that the saloon shall not rob them of what they do get in the first place.

"Why should we pay out so much money for such stuff which does us no good but much evil? The great talk which we hear to the effect that the poor people need the beer is a false one and is for the liquor dealers interests. Let the poor people get food for their money with which they buy beer and drink water and they will be better off. As a food beer is not worth one cent a glass and still people are willing to pay five. This is waisting money and they cannot afford that. Beer is no good to them except to keep them poor. Let us bear this in mind and work accordingly for the uplift and betterment of the poor by protecting them from this fiend, the drink evil, first and not allow them to be robbed first and then help them a bit afterwards.

"Let us all join in a demand for reform along these lines and pray that we may have a local option law in this State. Let us do it for the sake of humanity in God's name."

ESCAPED DEATH TO MARRY.

Miss Mary Chandler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edw. Chandler, of Catherine street, Elizabeth, who was one of the occupants of the funeral coach that was struck by a Pennsylvania flyer at the Dark Lane grade crossing in Linden township on Sunday, January 5, and who had a narrow escape from being killed, was married Friday evening to A. Henry Mayer. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. William Wallace Youngson, pastor of St. James' Methodist Episcopal church. Miss Elizabeth Anderson was bridesmaid, and the best man was James J. Rigby.

The wedding was to have taken place last month, but because of injuries Miss Chandler received in the grade crossing accident the ceremony had to be postponed.

George L. Van Emburgh, of East Second street, is visiting relatives at Newark and Bloomfield.

Mrs. Williams, of Philadelphia, is visiting at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Cornelius Schenck, of West Front street.

AMUSEMENTS.

Variety and general excellence is the keynote of the program arranged for Proctor's Newark theatre during this week. Principal among the attractions will be the initial appearance here of the Hal Davis and Company in a miniature triller entitled "A Race for a Wife," in which two large touring cars are seen to dash across the stage at full speed. Special panoranic effects being used making this act without doubt one of the most pretenious of stage pictures ever attempted in the varieties. Wm. Rock and Maude Fulton will appear for the first time in vaudeville in a nivel singing and dancing turn with elaborate costume changes. Mr. Rock who identified with Richard Carle and the Shuberts for several seasons as was Miss Fulton, both having created roles in "The Orchid," Funashbi's "Behind the Counter" and "The Girl." Lind, the mysterious, will reappear and create a favere among the feminine population because of the magnificence of his frocks and gowns. That globe trotting due John W. World and Mindell Kingston are also booked and will no doubt add to their popularity. Callahan and St. George, newcomers here, will give a lively conversational turn brisking with original humor. Lavine, Cimaron Trio, will look after the acrobatic end of the program in an agreeable manner, interspersing clever gymnastics with clever comedy. Raffins' Monkeys are a clever aggregation of simians, who have been taught to do all sorts of comical stunts, one of the most laughable acts in vaudeville. The Alabane Four are a quartette od dusky hued performers who sing and dance in a manner which the Sons of Ham alone can boast of. New animated pictures will complete the bill.

Insurance Man Transferred.

S. J. Robinson, who has been the local superintendent for the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, has been transferred to Quincy, Mass., where he will hold a similar position with the company. His place here has been taken by H. A. McClintock, formerly superintendent of the company's office at Waterbury, Conn.

George Gayle, of Vine street, is ill with an attack of the grip.

A Village's "Hourly Nurse."

Any scheme that tends to benefit the inhabitants of a town is worthy of consideration, such as the following:

The village of Leicester, Mass., established an hourly nurse in February, 1907. At a recent meeting of interested citizens the report of the work and the financial statement were so encouraging that the vote was unanimous to continue the services of the nurse another year, says the Boston Transcript. Her duties are to give skilled assistance to all classes throughout the village. In emergency she does night work, which otherwise is not expected. Massage, care of surgical cases, obstetrics, daily attention to the sick and feeble who do not require the constant care of a nurse, are the directions in which her work chiefly lies. Contagious cases she does not attend. The nurse goes from house to house, spending an hour or more with her patients, as the case needs, and each one pays from 10 to 50 cents an hour, according to ability, although the care is not denied to those unable to pay. A salary is assured the nurse, the money she recieves from patients going to swell the funds of the association.

A Different Thing.

"Then Mr. Roxley didn't really give according to his means?" said the minister's wife.

"No," replied the minister, "merely according to his meanness."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Knew How It Was.

"Going to make a garden next spring?"

"Not much."

"I thought you were so enthusiastic on the subject last summer."

"Won't you allow a man to learn anything by experience?"

The Square Pot of the Boynton Furnace

Maximum of Heat Minimum of Fuel Easiest to Care for

These are the cardinal advantages of the famous Boynton Square Pot Furnaces, positively the only correctly designed furnaces on the market.

Ashes can't clog, for the sides of the square pot are perpendicular instead of sloping; quick and rapid combustion at all times; square form gives increased radiating surface; grate construction insures quick and complete ash clearance, without raking or poking. The ash pit, being square, fits the shovel—handiest to clean.

THE SQUARE POT
Patented

Your plumber, steam-fitter or tinsmith will explain many other points. Remember the Boynton is the only Square Pot Furnace.

There are BOYNTON heating plants of all kinds. Ask about our Round or Sectional Boilers for steam or hot water. Also ranges.

INCREASING POPULATION

How to Create a Real Estate Boom and Make It Pay.

The wrier not long ago visited a pretty little town lying in a delightful valley, with an abundance of very attractive home sites on the hillsides unoccupied. This particular town is less than fifty miles from one of the biggest cities in the United States.

"Why don't you get control of this hillside property," the writer asked of a man who had a real estate sign over his office door, "and place it on the market—offer it as building sites for summer homes?"

"Why," replied the citizen, "I did have hold of this property a few years ago and had that very idea in view, but couldn't sell a lot."

"How did you advertise it?"

"Oh, I don't believe in advertising," replied the real estate man. "It never does any good."

"How do you know? You haven't tried it evidently. You didn't advertise those lots, and you didn't sell any lots. Now, if you had advertised them and done it in the right way, by using newspaper space and by keeping on hand for instant use a neat descriptive booklet, which you could get printed right here in town, I'll venture to say that you would have sold some lots—perhaps all of them."

Then the very next day the writer happened to find somewhere the following "guideposts" to good real estate advertisting written by a Los Angeles man who has made a fortune by getting hold of property adjoining the town and disposing of it in lots for home building while at the same time he has greatly increased the population of his city:

"Get good properties at the right price."

"Advertise from the start. Besides making your property known it will help to create your own market."

"Keep your promises."

"Represent things exactly as they are. This begets confidence and the confidence of your customers is one of the best assets you can have."

"Advertise judiciously."

"Write good advertisements. If you cannot write them yourself get somebody who can. Advertising is too expensive to waste good money on a poor job."

"When you get to this point advertise and advertise and then advertise again. Don't cut the printing bill. There is gold in every line of good advertising."

"Never stop hustling. Advertising makes your property known to the best possible advantage. It is up to you to do the rest."

TOWN PARKS.

All too many of our smaller towns possess what they are pleased to call "the square." They have acquired, either by purchase or gift, a city block of land for park purposes. Sometime in the past, in a time of gross ignorance, a so-called pavilion was built in the center, a fence built, posts or turnstiles placed on the center of each side and at each corner. Diagonal paths of gravel run across the plot, a few feeble eucalyptuses grow along the border and we have "the city park." It seems never to have occurred to anyone that such a plan—properly lack of plan, just a "happened so"—is the poorest, most conventional, most inartistic and least economical of any disposition that could be made of the land, says the Los Angeles Times.

The fault of the whole matter lies with those who thought to make a park in a few days or a week. The trustees spend all the funds at their disposal at a single spurt to turn out what they believe is a finished product fresh from the bandbox, and, as a rule, nothing further is done for several years. Every park worthy of notice has gone through a period of development and upon a sensible, well outlined plan. If a pavilion is present it does not occupy the center as though it were always to be the chief attraction, but is at one side, sheltered by trees and rendered as obtrusive as possible. Natural grades and vegetation should be preserved so far as practicable, the latter in all cases if of good size. Pathways should be nearly direct, yet have slight natural curves set off by shrubbery. Seats should be provided, not in a pavilion, but under shade trees.

The "square" should not be considered as a cross town cut off, but as a place for recreation and rest. Do not have the effect one of conventionality, smacking of the market place and the public drinking fountain, but have a quiet, restful wildwood so far as possible, with town life all about. If you have money to spend for flowers, don't use it to put in a giant and costly bed of plants to spell "Podunk," but have them naturally disposed where they may be admired by all and not subjects for wonder and amazement. Moreover, if the traveler is in any doubt as to where he is, doubtless he would ask if interested. Certainly the average town square will in nowise prove attractive.

Lincoln's Way.

Lincoln at the commencement of the war was much abused by one of his generals. He was even once insulted by this man. In his splendid way he put up with that mistreatment imperturbably. But when the thing kept growing more and more flagrant his friends told him he was suffering more than was reasonable or right. But Lincoln only smiled his odd, sad, humorous smile.

"I'll hold his horse for him," he said, "if he will only bring us success."

By KATE AND VIRGIL D. BOYLES

(Copyright by A. C. McClurg & Co., 1907.)

"What shall I talk about, Miss Dale? It is all very prosaic and uninteresting, I'm afraid; shockingly primitive, glaringly new."

"I breakfasted with a stanch friend of yours this morning," answered Louise, somewhat irrelevantly. She had a feeling—a woman's feeling—that this earnest, hard-working, reserved man would never blurt out things about himself with the bland self-centredness of most men. She must use all her woman's wit to draw him out. She did not know yet that he was starved for sympathy—for understanding. She could not know yet that two affinities had drifted through space—near together. A feather zephyr, blowing where it listed, might widen the space between to an infinity of distance so that they might never know how nearly they had once met; or it might, as its whim dictated, blow them together so that for weal or for woe they would know each the other.

"Mrs. Higgins, at the Bon Ami," she continued, smiling. "I was so hungry when we got to Velpen, though I had eaten a tremendous breakfast at the Lazy S. But 5 o'clock is an unholy hour at which to eat one's breakfast, isn't it, and I just couldn't help getting hungry all over again. So I persuaded Mary to stop for another cup of coffee. It is ridiculous the way I eat in your country."

"It is a good country," he said, soberly.

"It must be—if you can say so."

"Because I have failed, shall I cry out that law cannot be enforced in Kemah county? Sometimes—may it be soon—there will come a man big enough to make the law triumphant. He will not be I."

He was still smarting from his many set-backs. He had worked hard and had accomplished nothing. At the last term of court, though many cases were tried, he had not secured one conviction.

"We shall see," said Louise, softly. Her look, straight into his eyes, was a glint of sunshine in dark places. Then she laughed.

"Mrs. Higgins said to me: 'Jimmie Mac hain't got the sense he was born with. His little, dried-up brain 'd rattle 'round in a mustard seed and he's gettin' shet o' that little so fast it makes my head swim.' She was telling about times when he hadn't acted just fair to you. I am glad—from all I hear—that this was taken out of his hands."

"I can count my friends, the real ones, on one hand, I'm afraid," said Gordon, with a good-humored smile; "and Mrs. Higgins surely is the thumb."

"I am glad you smiled," said Louise. "That would have sounded so bitter if you had not."

"I couldn't help smiling. You—you have such a way, Miss Dale."

It was blunt but it rang true.

"It is true, though, about my friends. If I could convict—Jesse Black, for instance—a million friends would call me blessed. But I can't do it alone. They will not do it; they will not help me do it; they despise me because I can't do it, and swear at me because I try to do it—and there you have the whole situation in a nutshell, Miss Dale."

The sun struck across her face. He reached over and lowered the blind.

"Thank you. But it is 'vantage in' now, is it not? You will get justice before Uncle Hammond."

Unconsciously his shoulders straightened.

"Yes, Miss Dale, it is 'vantage in.' One of two things will come to pass. I shall send Jesse Black over or——" he paused. His eyes, unseeing, were fixed on the gliding landscape as it appeared in rectangular spots through the window in front of them.

"Yes. Or——" prompted Louise, softly.

"Never mind. It is of no consequence," he said, abruptly. "No fear of Judge Dale. Juries are my Waterloo."

"Is it, then, such a nest of cowards?" cried Louise, intense scorn in her clear voice.

"Yes," deliberately. "Men are afraid of retaliation—those who are not actually blood-guilty, as you might say. And who can say who is and who is not? But he will be sent over this time. Paul Langford is on his trail. Give me two men like Langford and that anachronism——an honest man west of the river—Williston, and you can have the rest, sheriff and all."

"Mr. Williston—he has been unfortunate, has he not? He is such a gentleman, and a scholar, surely."

"Surely. He is one of the finest fellows I know. A man of the most sensitive honor. If such a thing can be, I should say he is too honest, for his own good. A man can be, you know. There is nothing in the world that cannot be overdone."

She looked at him earnestly. His eyes did not shift. She was satisfied.

"Your work belies your words," she said quietly.

Dust and cinders drifted in between the slats of the closed blind. Putting her handkerchief to her lips, Louise looked at the dark streaks on it with reproach.

"Your South Dakota dirt is so—black," she said, whimsically.

"Better black than yellow," he retorted. "It looks cleaner, now, doesn't it?"

"Maybe you think my home a fit dwelling place for John Chinaman," pouted Louise.

"Yes—if that will persuade you that South Dakota is infinitely better. Are you open to conviction?"

"Never! I should die if I had to stay here."

"You will be going back—soon?"

"Some day, sure! Soon? Maybe. Oh, I wish I could. That part of me which is like Uncle Hammond says, 'Stay.' But that other part of me which is like the rest of us, says, 'What's the use? Go back to your kind. You're happier there. Why should you want to be different? What does it all amount to?' I am afraid I shall be weak enough and foolish enough to go back and—stay."

There was a stir in the forward part of the car. A man, hitherto sitting quietly by the side of an alert wiry little fellow who sat next the aisle, had attempted to bolt the car by springing over the empty seat in front of him and making a dash for the door. It was daring, but in vain. His companion, as agile as he, had seized him and forced him again into his place before the rest of the passengers fully understood that the attempt had really been made.

"Is he crazy? Are they taking him to Yankton?" asked Louise, the pretty color all gone from her face. "Did he think to jump off the train?"

"That's John Yellow Wolf, a young half-breed. He's wanted up in the Hills for cattle-rustling—United States court case. That's Johnson with him, deputy United States marshal."

"Poor fellow," said Louise, pityingly.

"Don't waste your sympathy on such as he. They are degenerates—many of these half-breeds. They will swear to anything. They inherit all the evils of the two races. Good never mixes. Yellow Wolf would swear himself into everlasting torment for a pint of whiskey. You see my cause of complaint? But never think, Miss Dale, that these poor chaps of half-breeds, who are hardly responsible, are the only ones who are willing to swear to damnable lies." There was a tang of bitterness in his voice. "Perjury, Miss Dale, perjury through fear of bribery or self-interest, God knows what, it is there I must break, I suppose, until the day of judgment, unless—I run away."

Louise, through all the working of his smart and sting, felt the quiet reserve strength of this man beside her, and, with a quick rush of longing to do her part, her woman's part of comforting and healing, she put her hand, small, ungloved, on his rough coat sleeve.

"Is that what you meant a while ago? But you don't mean it, do you? It is bitter and you do not mean it. Tell me that you do not mean it, Mr. Gordon, please," she said, impulsively.

Smothering a wild impulse to keep the hand where it had lain such a brief, palpitating while, Gordon remained silent. God only knows what human longing he crushed down, what intense discouragement, what sick desire to lay down his thankless task and flee to the uttermost parts of the world to be away from the crying need he yet could not still. Then he answered simply, "I did not mean it, Miss Dale."

And then there did not seem to be anything to say between them for a long while. The half-breed had settled down with stolid indifference. People had resumed their newspapers and magazines and day dreams after the fleeting excitement. It was very warm. Louise tried to create a little breeze by flicking her somewhat begrimed handkerchief in front of her face. Gordon took a newspaper from his pocket, folded it and fanned her gently. He was not used to the little graces of life, perhaps, but he did this well. An honest man and a kindly never goes far wrong in any direction.

"You must not think, Miss Dale," he said, seriously, "that it is all bad up here. I am only selfish. I have been harping on my own little corner of wickedness all the while. It is a good land. It will be better before long."

"When?" asked Louise.

"When we convict Jesse Black and when our Indian neighbors get over their mania for divorce," he answered, laughing softly.

Louise laughed merrily, and so the journey ended as it had begun, with a laugh and a jest.

In the judge's runabout, Louise held out her hand.

CHAPTER IX.
The Attack on the Lazy S.

It was late. The August night was cool and sweet after a weary day of intense heat. The door was thrown wide open. It was good to feel the night air creeping into the stifling room. There was no light within; and without, nothing but the brilliant stars in the quiet, brooding sky. Williston was sitting just within the doorway. Mary, her hands clasped idly around her knees, sat on the doorstep, thoughtfully staring out into the still darkness. There was a stir.

"Bedtime, little girl," said Williston.

"Just a minute more, daddy. Must we have a light? Think how the mosquitoes will swarm. Let's go to bed in the dark."

"We will shut the door, and next summer, little girl, you shall have your screens. I promise that, always providing, of course, Jesse Black leaves us alone."

Had it not been so dark, Mary could have seen the wistful smile on the thin scholarly face. But though she could not see it, she knew it was there. There had been fairer hopes and more generous promises in the past few years. They had all gone the dreary way of impotent striving, of bitter disappointment. There was little need of light for Mary to read her father's thoughts.

"Sure, daddy," she answered, cheerily. "And I'll see that you don't forget. As for Jesse Black, he wouldn't dare with the Three Bars on his trail. Well, if you must have a light, you must," rising and stretching her firm-fleshed young arms far over her head. "You can't forget you were born in civilization, can you, daddy? I am sure I could be your man in the dark, if you'd let me, and I always turn your night-shirt right side out before hanging it on your bedpost, and your sheet and spread are turned down, and water right at hand. You funny, funny little father, who can't go to bed in the dark." She was rummaging around a shelf in search of matches. "Now, I have forgotten long since that I wasn't born on the plains. It wouldn't hurt me if I had misplaced my nightdress. I've done it," with a gay little laugh. He must be cheered up at all costs, this buffeted and disappointed but fine-minded, high-strung and lovable father of hers. "And I haven't taken my hair down nights since—oh, since months ago, till—oh, well—so you see it's easy enough for me to go to bed in the dark."

Her hand touched the match box at last. A light flared out.

"Shut the door quick, dad," she said, lighting the lamp on the table. "The skeeters'll eat us alive."

Williston stepped to the door. Just a moment he stood there in the doorway, the light streaming out into the night, tall, thoughtful, no weakling in spite of many failures and many mistakes. A fair mark he made, outlined against the brightly lighted room. It was quiet. Not even a coyote shrilled. And while he stood there looking up at the calm stars, a sudden sharp report rang out and the sacred peace of God, written in the serenity of still summer nights, was desecrated. Hissing and ominous, the bullet sang past Williston's head, perilously near, and lodged in the opposite wall. At that moment the light was blown out. A great presence of mind had come to Mary in the time of imminent danger.

"Good, my dear!" cried Williston, in low tones. Quick as a flash the door was slammed shut and bolted just as a second shot fell foul of it.

"Oh, my father!" cried Mary, groping her way to his side.

"Hush, my dear! They missed me clean. Don't lose your nerve, Mary. They won't find it so easy after all."

There had been no third shot. A profound silence followed the second report. There was no sound of horse or man. Whence, then, the shots? One man, maybe, creeping up like some foul beast of prey to strike in the dark. Was he still lurking near, abiding another opportunity?

It took but a moment for Williston to have the rifles cocked and ready. Mary took her own from him with a hand that trembled ever so slightly.

"What will you do, father?" she asked, holding her rifle lovingly and thanking God in a swift, unformed thought for every rattlesnake or other noxious creature whose life she had put out while doing her man's work of riding the range—work which had given her not only a man's courage, but a man's skill as well.

"Take the back window, girl," he answered briefly. "I'll take the front. Stand to the side. Get used to the starlight and shoot every shadow you see, especially if it moves. Keep track of your shots, don't waste an effort and don't let anything creep up on you. They mustn't get near enough to fire the house."

His voice was sharp and incisive. The drifting habit had fallen from him and he was his own master again.

Several heavy minutes dragged away without movement, without sound from without. The ticking of the clock pressed on strained ears like ghastly bell-tolling. Their eyes became accustomed to the darkness, and by the dim starlight they were able to distinguish the outlines of the cattle sheds, still, empty, black. Nothing moved out there.

"I think they're frightened off," said Mary at last, breathing more freely. "They were probably just one, or they'd not have left. He knew he missed you, or he would not have fired again. Do you think it was Jesse?"

"Jesse would not have missed," he said, grimly.

At that moment a new sound broke the stillness, the whinny of a horse. Reinforcements had approached within the shadow of the cattle-sheds. Something moved out there at last.

"Daddy!" called Mary, in a choked whisper. "Come here—they are down at the sheds."

Williston stepped to the back window quickly.

"Change places," he said briefly.

"Daddy!"

"Yes?"

"Keep up your nerve," she breathed between great heart-pumps.

"Surely! Do you the same, little comrade, and shoot to kill."

There was a savage note in his last words. For himself, it did not matter so much, but Mary—he pinned no false faith in any thought of possible chivalrous intent on the part of the raiders to exempt his daughter from the grim fate that awaited him. He had to deal with a desperate man; there would be no clemency in this desperate man's retaliation.

To his quickened hearing came the sound of stealthy creeping. Something moved directly in front of him, but some distance away. "Shoot every shadow you see, especially if it moves," were the fighting orders, and his was the third shot of that night.

"Hell! I've got it in the leg!" cried a rough voice full of intense anger and pain, and there were sounds of a precipitate retreat.

Out under protection of the long row of low-built sheds other orders were being tersely given and silently received.

"Now, men, I'll shoot the first man of you who blubbers when he's hit. D'ye hear? There have been breaks enough in this affair already. I don't intend for that petticoat man and his pulin' petticoat kid in there to get any satisfaction out o' this at all. Hear me?"

There was no response. None was needed.

Some shots found harmless lodgment in the outer walls of the shanty. They were the result of an unavailing attempt to pick the window whence Williston's shot had come. Mary could not keep back a little womanish gasp of nervous dread.

"Grip your nerve, Mary," said her father. "That's nothing—shooting from down there. Just lie low and they can do nothing. Only watch, child, watch! They must not creep up on us. Oh, for a moon!"

She did grip her nerve, and her hand ceased its trembling. In the darkness her eyes were big and solemn. Sometime, to-morrow, the reaction would come, but to-night—

"Yes, father, keep up your own nerve," she said in a brave little voice that made the man catch his breath.

Again the heavy minutes dragged away. At each of the two windows crouched a tense figure, brain alert, eyes in iron control. It was a frightful strain, this waiting game. Could one be sure nothing had escaped one's vigilance? Starlight was deceptive, and one's eyes must needs shift to keep the mastery over their little horizon. It might well be that some one of those ghostly and hidden sentinels patrolling the lonely homestead had wormed himself past staring eyeballs, crawling, crawling, crawling; it might well be that at any moment a sudden light flaring up from some corner would tell the tale of the end.

Now and then could be heard the soft thud of a hoof as some one rode to execute an order. Occasionally, something moved out by the sheds. Such movement, if discernible from the house, was sure to be followed on the instant by a quick, sharp remonstrance from Williston's rifle. How long could it last? Would his nerve wear away with the night? Could he keep his will dominant? If so, he must drag his mind resolutely away from that nerve-racking, still, and unseen creeping, creeping, creeping, nearer and nearer. How the stillness weighed upon him, and still his mind dwelt upon that sinuous, flat-bellied creeping, crawling, worming! God, it was awful! He fought it desperately. He knew he was lost if he could not stop thinking about it. The sweat came out in big beads on his forehead, on his body; he prickled with the heat of the effort. Then it left him—the awful horror—left him curiously cold, but steady of nerve and with a will of iron and eyes, cat's eyes, for their seeing in the dark. Now that he was calm once more, he let himself weigh the chances of succor. They were pitifully remote. The Lazy S was situated in a lonely stretch of prairie land far from any direct trail. True, it lay between Kemah, the county seat, and the Three Bars ranch, but it was a good half mile from the straight routs. Even so, it was a late hour for any one to be passing by. It was not a traveled trail except for the boys of the Three Bars, and they were known to be great home-stayers and little given to spreeing. As for the rustlers, if rustlers they were, they had no fear of interruption by the officers of the law, who held their places by virtue of the insolent and arbitrary will of Jesse Black and his brotherhood, and were now carousing in Kemah by virtue of the hush-money put up by this same secret tribunal.

"Watch, child, watch!" he said again, without in the least shifting his tense position.

"Surely!" responded Mary, quite steadily.

The attention of renters of Safe Deposit Boxes in New York is called to the fact that New York State levies a tax on the contents of the Safe Deposit box of a non-resident at his or her death, which tax may, of course, be avoided by keeping one's valuables in the same state in which one resides. It is, therefore, greatly to the advantage of a resident of New Jersey to keep personal property in a Safe Deposit vault within the state.
An inspection of our facilities is invited.

BOROUGH HIGH TROUNCED BY THE CITY HIGH BOYS.

Clinching their lead in the interscholastic basketball league, the Plainfield High School five won from the North Plainfield High School team by a score of 39-22 in a one-sided game played at the Y. M. C. A. Friday afternoon. The city school boys have now won three games and lost one, the boroughites have won two and lost two and Leal's have won one and lost three. There is still one more round of league play for the local basketball title, and the city five can do no worse than tie for first place. The next game with the North Plainfielders, their most formidable opponents in the league, comes March 10.

Friday's game was easy for the Plainfield five, who had the score 14-2 in their favor at the end of the first half. In the second half, they played almost listlessly at times, but made 22 points while their opponents were shooting nine baskets. Caldwell, captain of the Plainfield five, was the star in scoring, finding the iron ring nine times. The boroughites scored prinicpally by individual work, showing inferior team play. The summaries:

P. H. S.—Snyder and Mortimer, forwards; Caldwell, centre; Doane and Parsons, guards. N. P. H. S.—Conroy and F. McClintock, forwards; Overton; centre, B. McClintock and Steiner, guards.

Field goals: Caldwell, 9; Doane, 4; Conroy, 4; Snyder, 3; Mortimer, 2; F. McClintock, 2; B. McClintock, 2; Overton, 2. Goals from fouls: Doane, 3; Conroy, 2. Referee, Listman; scorer, Morris; timer, Prior. 20 minute halves.

RECTOR WARNER DESCRIBES JUDGE BEN LINDSAY'S WORK.

In an informal address before the members of the Holy Cross Club at their meeting Saturday night, Rev. George A. Warner, the rector, spoke of some personal impressions of Judge Ben Lindsay, who is to lecture here in the spring. The meeting was held in the parish house and there were about a hundred people present.

Mr. Warner dwelt especially upon the personality of the "Kid's Judge" as shown in his boyish face, kindly, quizzical eyes and democratic spirit in dealing with boys. He spoke of what the Judge has done in the West toward preventing crime among so-called "incorrigible" boys. He holds the parents in many cases responsible for the moral downfall of the "kids," and has secured legislation which will make fathers and mothers liable. Through his work as Judge, he has secured better accommodations for the lads in the formation of a society with a scope that of the Gerry Society of New York. He has a system of school and business probation, and co-operates with teachers and employers.

The Judge emphasizes the sense of honor and loyalty to one anotrer among the boys brought before him, and characterizes these as the two most prominent traits in a boy's character. The aversion to "snitching" or "telling on" a fellow incriminated in the petty crimes on which boys are brought before him shows the boys' loyalty between themselves.

At the conclusion of Mr. Warner's remarks, an informal dance was held in the parish house, and later refreshments were served. The affair was in charge of the entertainment committee of the club, of which Will Little is chairman.

UNITED STATES' POSSESSION IN THE TURKISH EMPIRE.

Located in the heart of the Turkish Empire, where it is surrounded by all the mystery and obscurity of the Orient, is a piece of American territory, although this fact is not generally known to Americans. Title to this spot of ground is held by the United States Government and it is just as much a part of the United States' possessions as if it were located in the heart of the city of Plainfield.

This is but one of the interesting points to be described by Senator Ernest R. Ackerman in his lecture from "The Equator to the Artic Circle," at Warren chapel, Thursday night, under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society. Mr. Ackerman has several fine pictures of Oriental life, among them being a photograph of the Sultan on his way to church. This important occasion which requires the services of about 10,000 troops is very interestingly described by Mr. Ackerman.

Organ Recital at Bethel Chapel.

An organ recital was given at Bethel chapel Friday night by William P. Dunn, organist of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, assisted by Miss Edith M. Hyde, soprano, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dorsey W. Hyde; Walter Sampson, flutist, and William Wheeler, tenor, of New York. Mr. Dunn also accompanied the soloists. The organ, a new one, has just been installed. It is a Mason & Hamlin make and one of the largest reed instruments made. Mr. Dunn showed his versatility by rendering a variety of selections on the organ, bringing out by a well selected program the beauty of the instrument. Miss Hyde was well received, her voice possessing unusual sweetness. Mr. Wheeler has an excellent tenor voice and sang well, while Mr. Sampson rendered several solos to the delight of all. The recital was under the direction of A. W. Duxbury, superintendent of the chapel.

Entertained at Poverty Social.

The Brightside Circle of The King's Daughters and about sixty of their friends were entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Barnes, on Mountain avenue, Friday night, at a poverty social. A pleasant time was had and about $15 was realized by the circle. The first part of the evening was devoted to judging costumes and imposing fines and during the latter part a sextette of young people from Mt. Pleasant gave an amusing dialogue in costume, entitled "Miss Dexter's Personal." The parts were taken by Miss Hooper, Miss Hooper, Monroe Terry, Roy Tappen, Luther Banks and Howard Melick. Miss Frecht, of Brooklyn, sang several solos very acceptably.

In the course of his remarks Dr. Johnson praised the lives of Washington and Lincoln.

Window Cleaning in College Course.

Dirty windows are a bane to the flat dweller, for her maid absolutely refuses to wash them, and of course the janitor is away on maid days. In such circumstances it is a lemon-like smile that will crease the features of the New York housekeeper when she hears of a new move in King's College, London. A course in domestic theory has been established there, and much time will be given to the ethics of scrubbing. Surely scrubbing should include windows. The first course will begin in next October. "Stpdents who have been graduated in science should be able to condense this special course into one year," says the head master. "As far as I am aware, nothing of this new course of study has been attempted in Europe."

Hard on the Subject.

"What is his idea in shaving himself—trying to beat the barber?"

"Trying to get even with himself for something, I should judge from the looks of his face."

HAURAND "TURNED DOWN"

Westcott Gets Liquor License in His Stead, But Number is Not Increased.

HALL TAKES FIRM STAND.

New Member Tries to Take Advantage of Situation In Effort to Have Number Reduced But Fails.

Twelve applicants, the regular number, were granted licenses to sell liquor at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council, last night, and among those receiving favorable consideration was Ellsworth C. Westcott, a new applicant, for a license at 115 East Front street, where Henry Haurand is now conducting a saloon, while Mr. Haurand, who applied for a saloon license in his recently-purchased property at 120 East Front street, where police headquarters was located, was refused, every one of the ten members present voting in the negative. President Tolles was the only Councilman absent.

The result seemed to occasion no surprise for the action of the Council was anticipated. The vote on Mr. Westcott's application was six to four. Councilmen Robert E. Hall, W. S. Tyler, H. D. Hibbard and F. E. Mygatt voted in the negative, while Councilmen Buxton, Gloak, Montgomery, C. C. Randolph, Frank Randolph and Suydam voted in the affirmative.

There was the usual large lobby, including Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, Rev. A. C. McCrea and Rev. L. R. Howard, representing the Plainfield Ministers' Association. Henry Haurand, as well as his many friends and those of Mr. Westcott were out in full force to watch the proceedings. The fact that the ministers' association petitioned especially that the number of licensed places be not increased, that being the strong objective point, and this request was heeded, left the representatives of the association without any argument. In consequence they took no part in the discussion, but they remained throughout this portion of the proceedings.

Opposition to the granting of licenses to Michael Watson and John and Frank Clark was raised by Councilman Tyler, who took his usual stand that it was not right to continue to license drinking place in the residential sections of the city. He believed it to be an excellent opportunity to maintain the dignity of the city by rejecting these applications, but he and Mr. Hall were the only two members to vote against them.

The application of Mr. Westcott was also opposed by Councilman Hall, who stated that it afforded a good opportunity to reduce the number of drinking places. He called attention to the fact that the place for which he requested a license was in a thickly populated shopping district, where many women and children are constantly passing and he for one favored the rejection of the application. His argument brought three members to his support, but not a sufficient number to win out.

An unusual thing was witnessed in the disposition of these licenses. Mr. Haurand presented two petitions signed by nearly two hundred men, including a number of merchants on East and West Front street, stating that they had been patrons of his saloon for several years and they spoke of Mr. Haurand as a man of unusual ability and good character. They urged that he be granted a license. The petitions had no effect in the result.

As a means of remonstrating against the granting of liquor licenses, Ira L. LaRue presented a pathetic poem, picturing the degradation resulting from such action. This together with the other remonstrances were referred to the license committee and later filed.

With the exception of those applications against which opposition was raised as noted, all of the other licenses were granted by the unanimous vote of the Council. Those who received licenses are as follows: W. J. Poulson, Hotel Kensington; Henry Windham, Hotel Waldorf; Jerome Leary, Hotel Iroquois; Jacob Blimm, Christian Glockler, Michael F. Watson, John and Frank Clark, John Rafferty, Alexander Findlay, Ellsworth C. Westcott, saloons; Frank Linke and Eastern Bottling Company, wholesale bottling places.

The applications were all reported upon by Councilman H. B. Suydam, chairman of the license committee, and before this was done, a resolution offered by him and adopted, set forth that the committee had duly considered all applications and had refused to recommend any increase in the number of licensed places. The usual opportunity was given any one present to speak for or against any applicant, but no one outside of the members of the Council had anything to say.

TO RAISE FIREMEN'S PAY

Common Council Passes to Third Reading Proposed Ordinance for Salaries.

INTRODUCED BY MR. HIBBARD.

The Increase Will Date Back to January 1—Councilman Tyler Votes in the Negative.

The amendment to the ordinance granting the members of the fire department an increase in salary was offered by Councilman Hibbard, chairman of the fire committee, last night, and after being considered in recess, was finally adopted on two readings and ordered advertised. This ordinance was previously introduced, but because the percentage of duty required of the call-men did not meet with the approval of certain members it had been referred back to the committee for further amendment.

After the first reading last night, Mr. Tyler explained that he knew little about the ordinance and asked for a recess to consider it further. His request was granted and when the city fathers reconvened the measure was sent back to the committee for the purpose of striking out the clause which compelled the call men to buy their own uniforms. This does not mean that the city will purchase them, only that the members believed that at the nominal salary of $55 a year the call-men should not be obliged to pay for uniforms.

The raise in salaries will mean an increase of about $1,100 to the fire department. Chief Doane will receive $1,100 a year, while First Assistant Chief Andrew Jennings is raised from $1,000 to $1,080 and the veterinary surgeon from $150 to $165. The engineer receives $82.50 a year as at present and the captain is increased from $924 to $1,020. The drivers, tillermen and other regular firemen are divided into five classes, similar to the police department, as follows:

Class A, five years and over, $840 to $960; Class B, four years and over, $792 to $900; Class C, three years and over, $726 to $840; Class D, two years and over, $660 to $780; Class E, one year, $720. The call-men are to receive $55 a year and in return are to perform at least ninety per cent. of duty, instead of seventy-five per cent. as required before. The ordinance will come up for final adoption at the regular March meeting. The increase in salaries date from January 1 last. Mr. Tyler voted in the negative on the second reading of the ordinance, being absent from the room during the first reading.

MUNICIPALITY TO ACCEPT NUMEROUS THOROUGHFARES

With a view to accepting, opening and establishing grades on a number of city streets so that in the future when it is desired to macadamize them no time may be lost in putting through ordinances, Councilman Gloak, chairman of the street committee, presented necessary ordinances at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council. He also offered the necessary maps, charts, etc., covering this work. Monday night, March 16, was the date fixed when the Common Council will grant a public hearing on the ordinances, which it is proposed to adopt at that time.

The streets to be opened and accepted include the following:

Compton avenue, DeKalb avenue, Prescott place, Pond place, Darrow avenue, Essex street, Madison avenue from West Ninth street to Randolph road; Arlington avenue, Union street from Ninth street to Randolph road, South Second street from Clinton to Rock avenue, West Third street to city line, West Eighth street to city line, Monroe avenue and Ravine road. In addition to the above-named streets the grade is to be established on the following thoroughfares: East Seventh street, Leland avenue, Clinton avenue, Jackson avenue, Johnston avenue, Netherwood avenue, Stebbins place, Randolph road, North avenue and Ravine road.

District Deputy Findlay Assisted.

District Deputy A. D. Findlay, of this city, assisted in exercises at Rutherford, Saturday, in celebration of the laying of the cornerstone of a new Elks' home to cost $50,000. Colonel A. T. Holley, Senator Wakelee and Charles Burrows were among the speakers.

Mrs. Hills, of Fairview avenue, who is at Felmly farm, Hunterdon county, is improving in health and enjoying the place very much.

LIBRARY TAX QUESTION

City Fathers Hear of Perth Amboy's Efforts for Modification of the Law.

COMMUNICATION TRANSMITTED.

Amboy's Resolution Sent to Public Library Directors—Other Routine Matters of Council.

The Common Council, at its adjourned meeting last night, was advised, through a communication, of a recent action taken by the Common Council of Perth Amboy, in recommending a modification of a law giving the governing bodies of cities the right to appropriate such amounts as they deem best for the maintenance of public libraries.

It is the belief of the Perth Amboy city fathers that the present law giving libraries one-third of a mill on every dollar received in taxes is excessive, hence the adoption of a resolution favoring a change in the statute. The co-operation of Plainfield, which is affected by the law, is asked in support of the proposed change. At the request of Councilman Tyler, the city clerk was instructed to send a copy of the resolution to the directors of the Plainfield Public Library and Reading Room. The Council took no action on the communication at the time, but probably will at the regular March meeting.

Communications were received from the Public Service Corporation informing the Council that a light reported out at Sycamore and Sixth streets and another one in the East End reported by Daniel Dugan, through Councilman Robert E. Hall had been attended to promptly.

The bond of Deputy Tax Collector John H. Cose was received and instructions were given to have the same recorded. Mr. Cose began his work this morning of making collections of delinquent personal, poll and dog tax.

F. J. Harris and others petitioned for an electric light to be located on West Seventh street, west of Monroe avenue. The matter was referred to the light committee.

The lease for the Boys' Club property on Sycamore street, which is to be used as temporary quarters for the police department, was presented and referred to the police committee. It provides for a rental of $50 a month and the property is to be leased from month to month until the new headquarters' building is ready for occupancy.

Several deeds of sale of property made by Former Tax Collector J. W. Murray, Jr., were presented and they will be recorded in the office of the county register.

Concerning a petition previously received from F. J. Harris, in which he seeks to redeem certain property on West Fourth street, Mr. Hibbard offered a resolution, which was adopted, providing that if he shall pay to the city treasurer the sum of $305.28 by Friday, February 28, the deeds for this property shall be delivered to him.

Another resolution offered by Mr. Hibbard and adopted, provided for an appropriation of $50 to engage extra help for the tax collector in getting out bills, etc., for the collection of delinquent taxes.

As to the petition of L. E. Hart and Lucy Woolley to have an unknown and unnamed street, extending from Elmwood place to Plainfield avenue, which has never been opened, vacated, Councilman Gloak offered an ordinance, which was adopted on first and second readings, providing that the request be granted. A public hearing will be granted at a meeting to be held March 16, before final action is taken.

In accordance with a resolution offered by Councilman Hibbard, chairman of the fire and building committee, which was adopted, the committee was atuhorized to purchase 1,000 feet of new hose at a price not to exceed ninety cents per foot.

Log Cabin Gun Club Defeated.

The Log Cabin Gun Club was defeated in a team match with the Cranford Gun Club on the grounds of the former, Saturday afternoon, the final score being 317 to 303. At the end of the third inning the Plainfield team was one bird ahead, but at the conclusion of the match Cranford was fourteen birds to the good. Each team was composed of ten men. In the morning the Log Cabin Gun Club had its regular match for the monthly trophy.

Armrights Defeat the Stars.

The Armright bowlers, of this city, met the Elizabeth Stars on Johnny Campbell's alleys Friday night, and defeated them three straight games. the first game was taken by the Plainfielders by only one pin, the second by twenty-nine and the third by seventy-three. The Armright team is made up of Campbell, Skelly, Kiely, Radin and Britton.

BOND VALIDATING BILL PASSED THIS MORNING

The Plainfield Bond Validating Act passed the House this morning and has been taken to Governor Fort. The measure, introduced at Trenton by State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman validates by its passage the $116,000 bond scheme for this city, and was passed by the Senate last Monday. The city is now free to award the bid, which has been received and filed pending the legislation of the measure at Trenton.

Two other bills of Senator Ackerman's, Senate Bills No. 109 and No. 7, passed the Senate this morning and have been sent to the House. Bill No. 109 is an act relating to the charges of a surrogate in probating estates. Under the existing legislation, the surrogate's charges and fees are fixed, regardless of the size of the estate. The measure as framed by Senator Ackerman, provides for the regulation of the fee in accordance to the size and value of the estate probated.

Senate Bill No. 7 is in regard to the telephone and telegraph company franchises in townships and boroughs in the State. If passed, it will make it necessary for the 'phone companies to secure the consent of the property owners to erect poles in front of their homes, as well as requiring the consent of the local governing body. This is now required in first class cities in the State, and is provided for in the smaller municipalities by the bill. Senator Ackerman has been active in the interests of this measure for the past two years and it is a significant fact that the measure as passed by the Senate this morning is practically the same as the original measure.

EARLY MORNING BLAZE DESTROYS BARRY'S BARN

Fire, supposed to be of incendiary origin, destroyed the barn at the home of John Barry, on Greenbrook Road, early this morning. Though the fire bell did not ring the alarm, the indicator at headquarters registered the box, No. 156, and the department made a quick run, but could not save the burning building. The loss will reach $1,200 and it is reported that there is no insurance. In the barn was a lot of hay, two wagons and some furniture, part of which was saved.

The flames were discovered by David Allen, a neighbor of Barry's, who saw the glare at about 3 o'clock in the morning. He ran to box 156 and turned in the alarm. Barry did not know of the fire until the alarm was given. The origin of the blaze is unknown, and as the building was all ablaze when the alarm was sounded, there is no clue as to how it started. There are suspicions of an incendiary origin.

When the firemen arrived, the building was a mass of flames and a line of hose was stretched with which the fire was quickly extinguished. The fire had too much headway to save the barn.

Standing Room Only.

It takes a pretty good show for a theatre to stick out the "Standing Room Only" sign and by the same token a shoe store must be doing something of a business when it becomes impossible to seat the people and wait on the trade properly. The stringency shoe sale has created this condition at the VanArsdale shoe store and we have been requested to ask our readers who intend patronizing this sale to go in the morning or as early in the day as possible so that the overcrowding in the afternoon may be relieved as much as possible. The extremely heavy reduction on all kinds of shoes have proven irresistible magnets to the thrifty and economical, and undoubtedly scores of people who never entered the shore before have flocked there to buy footwear during this stringency sale. ***

Back in Harness.

"Farmer Orator" James E. Martine, who was out for the first today after two weeks sickness with the grip, will speak at Jersey City Saturday night at the banquet of the Twelfth Ward Club. Cast for School Play.

The play will be given as a curtain-raiser to "Miss Civilization," the class play, in which Miss Lillian Cronkite is to play the leading role.

BLAMES WATER COMPANY

Committee Finds that Loss at Letcher Fire was Due to Frozen Hydrants.

FIREMEN NOT RESPONSIBLE.

Councilmen Declare Chief and Members Did Their Best— Report Goes to the Mayor.

The anticipated report of the Councilmanic fire and building committee regarding the failure of the fire department to adequately cope with the fire which destroyed R. J. Letcher's residence on Belvidere avenue, on the night of February 2, was presented at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council, last night, by Councilman Hibbard, chairman of the committee. It was signed by Chairman Hibbard, C. C. Randolph, Robert E. Hall and H. B. Suydam. Mr. Buxton, the other member, declined to affix his signature to the statement. The report follows:

"This report is in reference to the communication from the Mayor dated February 3, 1908, in regard to the failure of certain fire hydrants to deliver water promptly at the fire the day before in the residence of Mr. Letcher on Belvidere avenue, Netherwood. The communication was referred to the Committee on Fire and Buildings.

"The committee investigated the matter on the evening of February 7 and received information from many persons, including private citizens, members of the fire department and representatives of the water company. The statements made agreed with each other in every essential particular.

"It was established beyond a doubt that two and probably three hydrants near the fire were frozen so that water could not be drawn from them, and in consequence thereof the firemen were greatly hindered in their efforts to extinguish the fire. The progress of the fire had been checked by the use of chemical extinguishers, so that it was thought to be under control, when it was found that water could not be obtained from any of the three nearest hydrants. Two of these hydrants were thawed out later on and used, but only after considerable delay. The chief and members of the fire department, assisted by the North Plainfield Fire Department, worked hard and faithfully to extinguish the fire and no blame attaches to any of them for the result.

"The weather was cold for several days previous to this fire, the ground having stated to be frozen fourteen or fifteen inches deep.

"The contract between the water company and the city contains the following, namely:

"The company shall at all times keep and maintain the said water works and all the machinery, appurtenances and apparatus connected therewith in first-class serviceable condition and ready for instant use."

"The committee recommends that the company be advised of the committee's conclusion and be notified that the company must take more efficient means to ensure a serviceable condition of the hydrants in freezing weather and be requested to advise the Common Council as to what it will do to prevent similar trouble in the future."

A copy of the above report was ordered sent to Mayor Fisk; also to the Plainfield-Union Water Supply Company.

CITY COURT NOW HELD IN TEMPORARY QUARTERS.

The first session of the city court in the temporary quarters at the old Boys' Club building on Sycamore street was held this morning. What used to be the gymnasium has been transformed into the court room and though it is not as convenient as the old place it serves the purpose very well. The cells have been placed in a boxed-in compartment and Chief Kiely is using one of the front rooms for an office. The registry board for the call box system will be put in today.

The first prisoner to plead in the new place was James A. Cook, colored, who was arrested Saturday afternoon on West Third street for disorderly conduct. He was fined $5 or twenty days and took the latter.

VANONIS ARE VINDICATED

Princeton Hotel Proprietor Says Plainfielders are Not those Who "Jumped" Bill.

SEEK THE AID OF THE POLICE.

Local Family Whose Name Is Being Wrongfully Used Want to Have the Offenders Punished.

Cleverly throwing the police off their trail by assuming the name of Vanoni, the family of alleged hotel swindlers which, it is said, had been so successful in "jumping" hotel bills in several cities in this part of the State within the past few weeks, have made all sorts of trouble for the real Vanoni family, who are now busy freeing themselves from the blame put on them by the use of their name as an alias. Frederick Lawrence Vanoni, son of Mrs. E. Vanoni, who formerly lived on Park avenue, in this city, was in town today and talked with Chief Kiely. He said he had been made a victim of gross misrepresentation by the adaption of the "Vanoni" alias by the swindlers and had previously been to Princeton with his mother and sisters, where W. S. Pittenger, proprietor of the Nassau Inn, made affidavit that the family was not the same as had swindled him out of a big hotel bill two weeks ago.

Mr. Vanoni, who is secretary-treasurer of the Francis Bacon Piano Company, of New York city, said that the swindlers had used his name successfully in forging checks, but he did not state instances of where this had been done. Mrs. Vanoni is suffering from shock as a result of accusations against the family by the clever use of the alias, and the family, which includes a daughter, Miss Pauline Vanoni, is taking active steps to deny their identity with the swindlers.

From this city, Mr. Vanoni went this morning to Westfield, where he secured an affidavit from J. H. Willet, freeing the family from charges of theft of clothing valued at $400, taken from there by the alias Vanois about a month ago. He said today that he would leave nothing undone in his efforts to clear the name of his family, victimized by the alias adopted by the swindlers, but would go to each hotel man victimized by the alleged swindlers in an effort to prove by personal identification and identification letters furnished by his friends that his family has been wronged by the misrepresentation of the swindlers. It was also asserted that he will have charges brought against the family using his family name as an alias, and will add one more complaint to their record when they are caught by the police. Mrs. E. Vanoni, Miss Pauline Vanoni and the son, F. L. Vanoni, are at present residing in New York city. The alleged swindlers used their individual names, and the 16-year-old boy of their family registered at the Nassau Inn as "J. Vanoni."

HIS PROFANITY COST HIM JUST TEN DOLLARS

Disrespect for the dignity of the city court helped to get John Callahan a $10 fine when he was arraigned this morning together with Willie and Tommy Mullen on a charge of fighting.

Each of the defendants brought a batch of witnesses to prove the where and how of the fight and Callahan acted in a surly manner toward those testifying for the Mullens. Several times he used a cuss word in addressing them and he was warned by both Judge Runyon and Chief Kiely not to repeat the offense. The evidence had been submitted and the magistrate had remarked that it was rather a puzzling matter to figure out when Callahan shouted an oath at Tommy Mullen.

"That will do for you, Callahan," said Judge Runyon on the instant. "I'll fine you $10," and he looked as though the interruption had assisted him out of a difficulty.

Sentence on both the Mullens was suspended but Willie was warned that an old suspension was hanging over him and that it would have fallen if he had been in any way to blame for the scrap. The trouble occurred Saturday night and started with Callahan pounding Willie Mullen as they were leaving a Front street dance hall. Tommy Mullen was told of the matter and seeking out his brother's assailant came up with him at Park and North avenues and gave him a return trouncing. Callahan claimed in court that the younger Mullen had been backed up by a gang and that he had been badly beaten and kicked.

DR. PROBASCO STRICKEN

Attacked by Heart Failure, Expired at His Home Early This Morning.

END WAS NOT EXPECTED.

One of the City's Most Prominent Physicians—President of School Board for Fourteen Years.

Stricken by a severe attack of heart failure from which he had suffered at intervals for several years, Dr. John B. Probasco, one of the city's best known residents and a leading physician, died at his home on East Front street early this morning. He had attended to his customary duties all day yesterday and was first affected as he was preparing to retire at 10:30 last night. His son,

Dr. J. B. Probasco.

Dr. Norman Probasco, administered a hyperdemic and temporary relief was afforded but shortly after midnight his condition again became alarming and further measures were adopted. To all appearances he rested easily but he passed away quietly just before 3 o'clock.

Dr. John B. Probasco was born in Greenwich, Cumberland county, this State, in 1842, his parents being John S. and Mary Bacon Probasco. After completing his scholastic course he entered Bucknell University at Lewisburg, Pa., and would have graduated in '64, but during the senior year the entire class enlisted in the Twenty-eighth Pennsylvania Cavalry. Dr. Probasco served in the War of the Rebellion for a year and a half, during which time a majority of his classmates fell in battle. In 1866 he entered the medical college of the University of Pennsylvania and received a degree in surgery in 1869.

For one year following his graduation he served on the staff of the City Hospital, Philadelphia, and then came to Plainfield, first associating with Dr. John Craig. He remained with him two years at the end of which he opened an office for himself at 175 East Front street, the house in which he died. When Muhlenberg Hospital was first projected he was one of its most enthusiastic promoters and served as surgeon on the first medical staff. He always retained some office at the institution and at the time of his death was consulting surgeon.

While Dr. Probasco's profession was one that made great demands upon his time, it did not deter him from taking an active interest in civic affairs and in 1889 he accepted a nomination for membership in the Board of Education. He was duly elected and from then on school matters in Plainfield became a factor in his life and the city has never had a more enthusiastic educational worker than he proved himself. When the late George H. Babcock died in 1894 he was elected president of the board to fill the unexpired term and remained as the head until the present time. He seldom missed a meeting, came early and remained late and at regular intervals made a personal investigation of the schools and the plan of work in classes. He served on two committees, teachers and textbooks and buildings, regarded as the most important of all. He was particular about curriculums and the present courses embody many of his ideas.

As a member of the First Baptist church, Dr. Probasco became identified with local religious affairs and aided in building up the congregation. He had been a deacon for many years. He was also a member of the Plainfield Medical Society, the Plainfield Clinic, the Union County Medical Society, the State Medical Society, Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F. and A. M., Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F., the college fraternity Phi Kappa Psi and several other fraternal organizations. He attended a reunion of his college class at the Bellevue-Stratford, Philadelphia, last week.

Dr. Probasco was twice married. His first wife was Miss Maria Boice, of this city, whom he wedded in 1872. She died on September 25, 1896, leaving three sons of whom two

The Westfield building ordinance will go into effect one week from yesterday. After that date no buildings can be started in the town until a copy of the plans has been filed with the building inspector and a permit secured.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

BASEBALL.

Kid Gleason has signed his contract to play with the Philadelphia Nationals next season. The veteran told Manager Billy Murray the other day that he feels just as young as the first year he entered professional circles, and that he expected to play good ball this year. This season will be Gleason's twenty-first year in the professional ranks. He has been playing longer than any man in the major leagues today, and is still a valuable man.

John Kelly, the Baltimore outfielder, is not satisfied with the salary offered him by Manager Jack Dunn and refuses to sign a contract.

Among the youngsters who will be tried out with the New York Giants at Marlin Springs is Snodgrass, a young catcher who caught for St. Vincent's College in California. Last spring Snodgrass worked against the Giants in California, and Manager McGraw was so well pleased with his work that he tendered the collegian a contract, but Snodgrass spurned the offer at the time.

The Wilmington club has purchased Lynch, the young shortstop, who played part of last season with Baltimore.

H. L. Jones, a young pitcher drafted by the New York Americans from the Lancaster, O., club, has been sold to Atlanta.

Johnny Kling, the boss catcher of the champion Cubs, has issued a challenge to Thomas Hueston to play for the pool championship. He wants to play before March 15. Hueston defeated Kling seven years ago, but as Johnny's forfeit is up he evidently doesn't think Hueston can do it again.

Eddie Plank, who refuses to sign an Athletic contract at the terms named therein, is to coach the Gettysburg College players for several weeks. Plank once played on the Gettysburg nine.

The University of Pennsylvania has a new fangled device to teach the ball players how to meet a ball squarely. A contrivance has been rigged up, part of which is a vertical cord on which is a ball which can be moved up and down at will. When adjusted to the desired height the batter takes a swing at it. It springs straight ahead when hit squarely, but if not moves up and down, according to where it is struck.

This will be a busy week for the major league baseball magnates, for they will hold their spring meetings in New York city and will incidentally adopt the playing schedules. As the schedules have been completed by the framers of them, acting in perfect accord, there will be no friction in that line, nor will there be any powwow over the playing rules, for few changes have been recommended. The American League men therefore will have a pleasant time of it at the Hotel Breslin while the National League moguls are at the Waldorf. It is expected, by the way, that there will be a high old time in the National League meeting due to the personal feelings of H. C. Pulliam and Garry Herrmann, which, they say, have been hurt because of the recent rumpus over the minor league blacklist resolution. Pulliam intends to show Herrmann up, it is understood, while Herrmann may retaliate in a sensational manner.

GOLF.

Before two of the largest galleries in the morning on the Piney Wood Inn golf course, and in the afternoon on the Country Club course at Southern Pines, "Marty" O'Loughlin, the Plainfield "pro," outclassesd and decisively defeated E. M. Fitzjohn, by 10 up and 7 to play, a few days ago. The young Plainfielder simply defeated his opponent to a standstill and left him far in the lurch.

Eighteen holes were played in the morning, "Marty" O'Loughlin winning the lead then, having Fitzjohn 3 up. In the afternoon eighteen holes were booked, but the match ended on the eleventh hole, O'Loughlin's lead being then too great to be overcome.

There was the greatest of enthusiasm among the big gallery that gathered in the morning on the Piney Woods Inn course when, at 10:30, the first ball was driven off. The first hole was halved in 4, the second in 4 and the third was taken in 4 by O'Loughlin. Right here it was shown that the match was for blood, and some fine golf was anticipated. The gallery was not to be disappointed in its expectations, for the next two holes were halved in 4s. Halves were the order of the morning's play. Fitzjohn took the seventh, O'Loughlin the eighth, Fitzjohn the ninth, and so it went on, affording the spectators a fine opportunity to witness the great game played by two experts, who were going at a fast pace.

On the fifteenth hole O'Loughlin had the morning's play well in hand, 3 up and 3 to go. The sixteenth went to Fitzjohn in a 4, but O'Loughlin came back with a 4 on the seventeenth to Fitzjohn's 5. The eighteenth was a halve in 4, O'Loughlin winning the lead in the first eighteen holes, 3 up.

The predictions for the afternoon were a close game, as the morning's match showed the two players in top-notch form, the score close and the interest in the match at a high point. The net score for the morning was O'Loughlin, 75; Fitzjohn, 79.

A tremendous gallery was on the spot at the Country Club when play was resumed at 2:30 in the afternoon—everyone full of expectancy as to the outcome.

O'Loughlin waded right in on the start and won hole after hole; it was a veritable run away for the man whom experts have picked for our future national champion. The ease with which "Matty" overcame his opponent was a great surprise to the gallery, and one might say a disappointment, for a closer match was looked for. Although it was conceded by all that O'Loughlin would win decisively, it had been hoped and expected from the morning's match that Fitzjohn would give him a good run for the money.

"Marty" played a steady game throughout and, on account of not being compelled to extend himself, did not play his best game by any means. A repetition of the morning's match would have been a tip-top performance which would have satisfied all.

Many would like to see Alex Ross and our young star come together in match play. Both are determined up-hill fighters, and it would afford a game of a life-time to bring these two cracks together. Maybe we shall see the hope realized ere long.

This is "Marty" O'Loughlin's ninety-fifth victory in match play, and he is yet to be defeated—it will take a good man to do it.

The score by holes:

Morning, at Piney Woods Inn course: O'Loughlin—4, 4, 4, 4, 4, 4, 5, 4, 5, 4, 4, 4, 4, 5, 3, 5, 4, 4—75; Fitzjohn—4, 4, 5, 6, 4, 4, 4, 5, 4, 4, 4, 4, 5, 5, 4, 4, 5, 4—79.

Afternoon at Country Club course: O'Loughlin—5, 5, 4, 5, 4, 5, 4, 6, 6, 5—49 for 11 holes; Fitzjohn—7, 7, 5, 7, 2, 6, 6, 6, 7, 6, 5—58 for 11 holes.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

David B. Gally in Walker Whiteside's great production of "We Are King" will be the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre tonight.

Perhaps one of the prettiest compliments that could be paid a play and players was overheard after the first act of "The Heir to the Hoorah" while the Paul Armstrong play was being presented in a Western city a short time ago. A gentleman leaned over to a friend seated directly in front of him and said:

"What! You here? Why, I thought you saw the play last year."

"I did," was the calm rejoinder. "That's why I'm here tonight."

That is one of the explanations for the even increasing popularity of this charming play, which will be the attraction for the Maze Edwards' testimonial at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow night.

Amateur numbers will be the feature of the program at the New Plainfield theatre Thursday night. Salisbury's pictures will be shown and the latest illustrated songs will be rendered.

The Four Huntings and a company of forty people will be the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre next Monday night. They will present their last season's success, "The Fool House," a musical comedy in three acts, which gives the team opportunities to introduce their wonderful dancing and acrobatic work. Miss Mollie is conceded by all to be one of the greatest dancers on the American stage, and the acrobatic work of Lew stands alone. Tony is a comedian of the better sort and ranks among the leaders in his line. A beautiful chorus of forty handsomely gowned girls will be seen during the action of the piece.

DR. PROBASCO.

The death of Dr. John B. Probasco is a distinct loss to this community inasmuch as for many years he gave of his valuable time and services for the good of the community. As the head of the Board of Education his efforts were always directed for the betterment of conditions and he was ever faithful to the trust reposed in him. Conscientious to a fault he sacrificed his own interests whenever necessary for the municipality which had most fittingly honored him as its director in educational work and his removal to his heavenly rest will be keenly felt not only by those with whom he was associated in civic work but by the community at large.

And yet Haurand was deserving of better treatment at the hands of the men who legislate for a model municipality.

FORMER GOV. VOORHEES PLEADS "NOT GUILTY"

Former Governor Foster M. Voorhees, of New Jersey, and Frederick Combes, formerly president and secretary of the Bankers' Life Insurance Company, were arraigned in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court in New York yesterday to plead to indictments charging them with perjury.

The alleged perjury was committed in the reports made by the officers of the insurance company to the State Insurance Department in 1903.

Former Justice William M. K. Olcott, counsel for the two defendants, entered a plea of not guilty, with leave to withdraw it in a week.

The bail of $2,000 in each case was continued.

WILL RESUME INJUNCTION PROCEEDINGS ON MARCH 16.

Another adjournment was taken yesterday afternoon in the Glazier hearing, in which Miles Reusch and other residents of Alton are seeking to permanently restrain the defendant from continuing to operate his fat rending factory. The date to which adjournment was taken is Monday, March 16, when Judge William Newcorn, counsel for Mr. Glazier expects to conclude with the examination of his client.

The witnesses called by the defense yesterday were Lewis Applegate, Charles Curtis, Robert Guttridge, Mrs. Theodore Glazier, Leslie Lambert, William Hetfield and George Elwyn, residents of Alton or vicinity. Their testimony tendered to prove that while there was an occasional odor from the fat factory it was not nauseating or detrimental to health and that they had never been subject to any inconvenience as a result of the operation of the factory. Mrs. Glazier's testimony was particularly valuable in this regard.

S. S. Swackhamer, of counsel for the complainants, conducted a rigid cross-examination of the witnesses, but was unable to shake their testimony to any extent.

District Court Salaries.

Assemblyman Braun, of Essex, last night introduced a bill in the House that aims to increase the salaries of district court judges and court clerks all along the line. In Newark, if the bill became a law, the two district court judges instead of receiving $3,500 would get $5,000 per year.

Delay for Hitchcock.

New York, Feb. 25.—The trial of Raymond Hitchcock, the comedian, on charges preferred by a little girl, yesterday was postponed for one week. Justice Dowling, in announcing the postponement, said no further delays would be permitted.

PRESIDENT OPENS TUNNEL

Roosevelt Presses Button and First Cars Pass Through Inter-State Tube.

HUGHES AND FORT ABOARD.

New York and New Jersey Join Hands Under Hudson River —Big Banquet Tonight.

Residents of New Jersey whose daily routine include sleeping in the suburbs, eating breakfast and catching trains for New York, where they spend most of their hours awake, will enter upon their period of emancipation from fog and ice and other obstacles that make ferrying so uncertain, at midnight tonight.

At this hour the Hudson and Manhattan Railroad Company will inaugurate a regular schedule of trains through the North river tunnels, which connect the New Jersey shore with New York, and extend from the Lackawanna station to Sixth avenue and Nineteenth street, Manhattan.

Cars will start simultaneously from both terminals and will be operated on a four-minute headway until the rush hours of the morning, when the intervals between trains will be reduced to three minutes. Eight cars will always constitute a train.

Holiday at Hoboken.

While officially New York will take little part in the celebration anent the formal opening which, in obedience to custom, must proceed the regular throwing open of the doors to the public, Hoboken will observe a general holiday. Schools and factories will be closed for the day, as will many of the stores. There will be a liberal quantity of bunting and flags displaying from the many public buildings. In fact, it will not be Mayor Steil's fault if the celebration which marks the opening of traffic under the river is not as jubilant as was that of 101 years ago, when Fulton's first steamboat got underway on the river.

This will be a big day for Hoboken and Jersey City, and, in fact, all this section of New Jersey, and will be heralded with especial joy by the hundred thousand and more commuters, who twice a day cross the river an ferryboats, and at least Hoboken will fittingly celebrate the occasion. Jersey City had also planned a similar celebration, but for some reason the demonstration has been called off. New York now takes these big feats in engineering in a too matter-of-fact way, it is said, so officially there will be no demonstration, but it is understood that many of the municipal officers will be present when the official train makes its trip.

Roosevelt to Start Things.

Eight hours and a half before the road is to be thrown open to the public for a nickel a ride there will be a formal trip through the tubes. All who have been officially connected with the tunnels and had anything to do with their construction and representatives of the press, as well as the Governors of New Jersey and New York, will make this journey.

The signal for this trip will be given by that time-honored ceremony of having a button pushed by the President of the United States. Yes, President Roosevelt will be present, electrically.

According to the plans of the company's officials, some time before the scheduled hour of starting the official trip the powerhouse will cut off the electric current from the entire tunnel system. Then when the invited guests are all aboard the official train at Nineteenth street station, from which point the trip will begin, and everything is ready to start, William G. McAdoo, the leading spirit in the building of the tunnels, will operate a key which will sound a signal in the President's desk in the White House at Washington.

Electricians have hooked up a connection by means of which the electrical power current will be switched for the railroad's use when the President, having received Mr. McAdoo's signal, himself presses a little porcelain button.

Of course, the guests of the company and the company officials waiting in the trail for this signal will not be left in darkness. Modern methods and applances are such that the cars and stations are not compelled to depend on the motive power electric current for illumination. All the cars are equipped with storage batteries, and current from which illuminates the cars. The stations are lighted by a separate circuit of electricity.

This installation of storage battery system of lighting cars is regarded as a great concession to human nerves. The officials of the company foresaw many panics in the cars should such a little thing as an interruption of the electrical current occur while a train was under the middle of the river, for the train would be thrown into complete darkness. Such a trivial accident might occur in the mid-day, but there is no mid-day in the tunnels, for they are from sixty to ninety feet below the surface of the river and the tubes are solid steel four inches thick.

Immediately after the contraction of the muscle in the President's finger the power will be thrown on and the train will begin to move. It will go slowly at first, gathering momentum until it turns the great bend at Morton street, where begins the descent under the river, then it will slow down, but only momentarily, for the grade down to the centre of the river is a steep one.

At the Tunnel's Centre.

At the exact centre of the tunnel—where is located the imaginary line that divides the great States of New York and New Jersey—there will be a circle of red, white and blue incandescent lamps. Here the train will stop for a moment, and Governor Fort, of New Jersey, will officially greet Governor Hughes, of New York.

It is not expected that these greetings will be: "Said the Governor of New Jersey to the Governor of New York, 'it's a long time between——.'" Nothing of that sort; that part of the ceremonies will take place at the dinner at Sherry's in the evening. Hoboken may celebrate the occasion by drinking a little beer, but that will be unofficial.

Other Notables Expected.

Besides Governors Fort and Hughes the train will carry a large number of dignitaries, mayors of New York, Hoboken, Jersey City, Brooklyn and, possibly, Newark, will be aboard and there will be a crowd of railroad men and engineers.

Mr. McAdoo said last night that he had not definitely decided who would be given the honor of piloting this train load of famous men, but intimated that he would not be far from the motorman's box.

When Hoboken is reached the train will come to a stop and the 300 odd persons will proceed to the concourse above the train floor, where speeches will be made. This part of the ceremonies will be officially superintended by Mr. McAdoo, who will read a letter of greeting from President Roosevelt. This will be an autograph letter. Governor Fort is scheduled to follow the reading of this letter. Governor Hughes will respond and then the several mayors in the party will make addresses.

New Transit Era.

The opening of the McAdoo tunnels introduces a new factor into the transit situation. Right here in New Jersey, however, the new system is appreciated for something more than the convenience of travel which it will afford the local population and the veteran commuter. For this the Jerseyites are indeed thankful. But they set quite as much store by the fact that this new mode of travel will open the eyes of New Yorkers—including, of course, the dwellers in Brooklyn and other boroughs— to the residential advantages of New Jersey.

The attractiveness of New Jersey as a place of residence was long ago discovered by a large proportion of the day population of Manhattan. In spite of the fact that political preference and sentiment reasons cause many New Yorkers to hesitate before transferring their allegiance to another state, the growth of the commuting population of New Jersey has steadily increased. The New Jersey ferries now transport about two-thirds of the commuters daily entering New York city. But the Jerseyites think this proportion is about to be still further increased.

The growth of the New Jersey suburban population has, in the main, been stimulated by the same sauses as those effecting the sections east of the Hudson river. It has, however, been steady and on the whole free from artificial aid. Speculation, as understood in other sections, is practically unknown in New Jersey, partly because of the extent of the territory and partly because of radical differences in the methods employed by land owners on either side of the river.

Under these circumstances it is not difficult to understand why land for home building purposes in New Jersey, is as a general rule, still considerably lower in value than in sections where real estate dealing by large development companies has stimulated an extaensive buying movement by individual home builders and speculators.

However, they are beginning in New Jersey, to apply exactly the same arguments to their land situation as did the promoters of other suburban areas two years ago. For railroads plying between New Jersey and New York city—now cut off from actual entry into Manhattan by the North River—are alive to the fact that existing methode no longer meet the requirements of modern travel. The Pennsylvania—Long Island Railroad's gogantic scheme will have an effect on New Jersey second only in importance to that it will have on Long Island. The Erie Railroad has taken the preliminary steps for electrifying its vast suburban system. The other roads will do the same thing in time.

The State Census.

The state census of New Jersey for 1905 revealed a surprising growth of population. This growth was particularly marked in the communities nearest New York. The population of the state, then as a whole, increased from 1,113,116 in 1880 to 2,144,974 in 1905. The counties within easy access of New York, and to be brought nearer by under-river tunnels and trolley extensions, showed an increase of more than 100 per cent.

Bergen, of which Hackensack is the centre, considerably more than doubled her population within the last fifteen years, while the ratio of growth in the larger and more thickly settled counties, since 1890 even, was from 54 per cent. in the lowest to more than 67 in the highest.

Hudson county, directly across the Hudson from New York city, and within which the river front cities of Bayonne, Jersey City, and Hoboken lie, far outstripped all the others—even Essex, which up to 1880 had always led in population. The city of Newark, which is the centre of Essex county, has not yet yielded the palm of leadership to any of the river cities in the sister county, but the county nearest New York, which in 1880 just about equalled Essex in the number of her people, has taken the lead from her by 40,000, and is growing rapidly.

Those who are looking forward to the eventual consolidation of all the communities in the five counties nearest to New York city into one imposing metropolitan district find interest in this table, comparing their several populations in 1880, 1890 and 1905:

	1880.	1890.	1905.
Bergen,	36,786	47,226	100,008
Essex,	189,449	256,638	409,928
Hudson,	187,994	275,126	449,870
Passaic,	68,860	105,046	175,858
Union,	58,571	72,467	117,211
Total,	538,620	756,503	1,252,884

MAYOR FISK PRESENTS CO. K. SERVICE MEDALS

The feature of Company K's fair last night was the presentation of the 100 per cent. duty medals by Mayor Charles J. Fisk. In consequence there was an unusually large attendance. Mayor Fisk took occasion to speak of his interest in the company and how he had watched its progress and achievements. He hoped the day would soon come, he said, when the organization would have an armory of its own and he promised to lend his efforts in this direction. The mention of a proposed armory called forth hearty cheers.

Those receiving the 100 per cent. medals included Sergeant Alfred Tranchand and Corporal J. L. Niles, who have been members since the organization of the company seven years ago and have never missed a meeting, drill or company formation of any kind. First Lieutenant Charles Peterson, Second Lieutenant A. I. Littell and First Sergeant O. R. Pierson had a record of six years of continuous service, while Sergeants C. H. Bilyeu and A. R. Phillips, Corporal LeRoy DeCamp and Quartermaster-Sergeant George Apgar had a record for five years service. Captain Harry B. Kitchell was rewarded for four years' service; Corporal Philip Winters for three years and Private Arthur Dow for one year.

It was announced last night that Corporal Walter Sampson, who has been a member of the company for seven years and whose enlistment expires tomorrow, had presented the organization with a handsome silver cup to be shot for annually. According to the rules of the competition for indoor shooting, the trophy is to always remain the property of the company. The highest score during the year will score a win and the successful marksman will have his name inscribed on the cup. Owing to a pressure of other duties Mr. Sampson will not be able to re-enlist again, but he desires to retain an interest in the company.

The fair will continue every night this week with dancing as the feature.

DUSTIN FARNUM PLEASES IN "THE RECTOR'S GARDEN"

Dustin Farnum, who is pleasantly remembered by Plainfielders for his work in "The Virginian," was presented in this city last night in a new play, "The Rector's Garden." It was the premiere of the production and was greeted by a large and fashionable audience that placed the stamp of approval upon it. Manager Henry B. Harris, the producer; James Forbes, author of "The Chorus Lady;" Ben Stern, the composer, and many other well known New York theatrical men, were present.

"The Rector's Garden" is by Byron Ongley, the author of "Brewster's Millions," and is of a different type than "The Virginian" or "The Ranger" in which Mr. Farnum has been apeparing. The supporting cast included Miss Grace Elliston, who was the original "Shirley Rossmore" in "The Lion and the Mouse;" William Courtenay, R. A. Roberts, Edward N. Ellis and Thomas Findlay. The play is in four acts, three of them taking place in the rector's garden, a most alluring and beautiful effect. After playing a few of the largest Eastern cities the production goes into New York for a run.

"The Land of the Midnight Sun."

The variable winter weather which has been ours this past few months, is quite different from that which obtains in Norway, the "Land of the Midnight Sun." In that country, the sun sets on November 21 and is not seen by the residents again until January 11. From May 20 to August 1, however, it does not disappear for twelve weeks, thus making up to the inhabitants in part for their long and very severe winter weather. During the summer months, therefore, the country is visited by many tourists, especially the extreme northern portion known as "North Cape." One of the most interesting pictures in Mr. Ackerman's collection is one of the sun, which he took one morning at two o'clock. This picture, with many others showing some interesting details of Norwegian life, will be shown and described by him when he lectures before the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor at Warren chapel next Thursday evening. The lecture will be entitled "From the Equator to the Arctic Circle." The silver offering to be received at the door will be devoted to the needs of the society.

Common Council Grants Licenses.

The usual batch of license applications were granted to junkmen, hackmen, ash carters, etc., at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council, last night. They were presented by the license committee of which Councilman Suydam is the chairman, and his motion that the same be granted after the fees are paid, was adopted. All licenses expire March 1 and it was necessary that action on the applications be taken at this meeting.

MAN BUILT OF SENTIMENT

"Oh, Joe," said Jeanette to her fiance, "what do you think I received by express today?"

"What?"

"A glass bottle picked up on the coast near Atlantic City containing a message."

"Big storm? Shipwreck? Vessel sinking? We are all lost?"

"More than that. I've had a lover and didn't know of. Read it." And she handed him a bit of paper on which were scrawled her full name and address and—

"In a few minutes this vessel will carry us all to a watery grave. I wish you to know that there has been one who has, unknown to you, loved you devotedly. But he will die as he has lived without revealing himself to you. Farewell."

"Well," said Joe after reading the message, "do you suppose it's genuine?"

"Something tells me it is."

"What?"

"I feel—I—somehow it seems to me that had this man wooed me we would have"—

"Would have"—

"What an noble, good man he must have been to love me at a distance?"

"Noble, good man, eh? To love you at a distance! Will you kindly explain?"

"Why, there must have been some reason why he couldn't declare himself. His great heart bore the load without permitting me to share it."

"Then why didn't he keep on bearing it without mixing you up in this way?"

"He knew a woman's nature. I wish you knew it as well. A woman receives her greatest compliment in the love of a good man."

"You mean a noble, good man. Don't leave out the noble."

"This man must have been a noble, good, self sacrificing man."

"Where does the self sacrifice come in?"

"Why if he had told me of his love I would have loved him. We couldn't marry and"—

"How do you know you couldn't?"

"Why, what other reason would there be for his not"—

"Lots of 'em. The chances are he was beneath you, probably some cab driver who once drove you somewhere or"—

"Joseph!"

"More likely a common sailor, with his arms and breast tattooed with anchors."

"You are simply showing your envy of one who was doubtless your superior."

"At any rate, I'd have more sense than to keep my love a secret till a few minutes before I was to be launched for kingdom come."

"You haven't that nobility of soul to understand this man's nature. He would not speak till what he said would not make me suffer—till it would be only sweet for a woman to hear."

"Nobility of soul, eh? I haven't nobility of soul. And this man—how do you know he had a soul at all? How do you know he isn't a myth? Somebody may have been playing a joke on you."

"One who would play such a joke would have as little soul as the myth he created."

"It seems to me, he said presently, "that a rival has shown up—a bloodless, spiritual, heavenly, noble, good, unselfish"—

"Heroic."

"Heroic." Any more?"

"Why do you sneer at him?"

"I'm not sneering at him. He's simply a manufactured man, one who has been built up out of pure sentiment, with sentimental arms, legs, head, hands."

"Who created him? Not I! I never heard of him till I received his only and last message."

"At any rate, he has replaced me. I'm going to say farewell. I'm going to give way to your ideal hero."

"You should strive to be like him."

"Like him! Do you suppose I'd wish to be like a man of tissue paper, with nothing inside of him but gas? He isn't even gas. He's a vacuum."

"There's no substance in the angels."

"There are different kinds of angels."

"I do believe you hate him."

"I! Hate him! I'm perfectly indifferent to him, confound him!"

The girl burst into a merry laugh. She laughed for five minutes, holding her sides, then tried to say something but she was interrupted by another involuntary peel of laughter. Finally she controlled herself sufficiently to say:

"Joe, this is"—

"It's certainly no laughing matter."

"Yes, it's stupid."

"Stupid! It's well that a stupid man should give way to a little tin god."

"Joe, the next time you send me a message from the dead do have sense enough to write it on paper that I won't recognize as your own."

The expression of mingled fierceness and misery on Joe's face gradually faded away and gave place to one of shamefacedness and relief.

"Did you recognize the paper?" he asked.

"How could I help it since I've a ton of it upstairs?"

"And the writing?"

"Scarcely at all disguised. I knew it in a minute. How came you to do such a thing?"

"Well, Charlie Baker said that a girl would fall in love with a man made out of sentiment quicker than with one of flesh and blood. I thought I'd try it on you. I won't try it again. You pretty nearly scared me to death."

WOMEN STREET REPAIRERS.

Girls Shovel and Rake as Beaus Look On From Walks.

Girard, Ala., a town of 2,000 inhabitants, has had a sample of the grit of the women, who became disgusted with the men for allowing the streets to remain in bad condition.

The women assembled with picks and shovels, hoes and garden rakes, to clean up the highway, fill in the holes and the ruts and remove the debris. They sang as they worked until the sidewalks were well filled with curious onlookers. Many a girl in the squad saw her beau in the onlookers, and others saw rivals that were ready to make capital of the incident.

Had Luxurious Tastes.

Outside of his own country Dom Carlos was regarded as an admirable monarch. He was a good sportsman and an agreeable companion. These qualities, which rendered him so good a friend, made him terribly expensive to the natives. He loved to wander about the world, shooting, yachting, watching the races and seeing the gala performances at the theatres. All of these luxurious exploits and excursions required many hundreds of thousands of dollars from the exchequer of his impoverished country. Within the past two years Carlos had paid visits to nearly all of the sovereigns of Europe and a great many wealthy noblemen, including the King of England, the King of Spain, the German Emperor, the Rothschilds and others. The King drew heavily upon the national treasury in excess of his annual allowance of $600,000. For such conduct he was called an embezzler and traitor by the Republicans.

Local Street Planting.

Since the Hollywood (Cal.) city council recognized the advisability and even necessity of street planting by offering financial aid various organizations in and about the municipality have taken hold of the work in a most thorough and systematic manner, says the Los Angeles Times. The South Hollywood Improvement club, composed of residents about the center formed by Western avenue and the Colgrove electric car line, have a very progressive and aggressive membership, and that section is to be at once planted in a uniform manner with suitable street trees. In a few years one will be able to travel from Los Angeles to the sea via Hollywood or Colegrove along avenues shaded and ornamented with uniform rows of trees well planted and cared for by organizations formed for this special purpose.

Answered.

A peasant insured his house against fire. When he got the policy he asked the clerk:

"What should I get if my house were burned down tomorrow?"

"Three or four years' imprisonment," was the prompt answer.—Tid-Bits.

ABOUT PEOPLE.

All records for climbing Mont Blanc have been broken by M. Ballot, president of the French Alpine Club, who has ascended the famous mountain thirty-five times in twenty-six years.

J. G. Phelps Stokes and his wife, who was Miss Rose Pastor, have sailed for a three months' cruise in the Mediterranean. Before starting Mr. Stokes declared that he would vote for the Socialist candidate for President and that he was still an ardent Socialist.

Governor Swettenham, who was so prominent in the eye of the world at the time of the Kingston diaster, and who was later removed, is now running a stock farm in Jamaica.

The sister of the German Emperor, Princess Charles of Hesse, is the happy mother of six sons, including two sets of twins. All are clever, healthy boys and great favorites with their uncle, the Kaiser, who sometimes stays with his youngest and favorite sister and her husband at beautiful Friedrichshof.

George W. Johnson, an old-time oarsman, proposes to row from St. Augustine, Florida, to New York in a boat made from newspapers. His scheme is to construct a boat, which in reality will be a cruising shell, from a copy of every newspaper in the United States.

Morning—Wheat, buckwheat, barley or oats.
Noon—Crumbly mash.
Night—Cracked corn.

Cabbage, cut clover or alfalfa and grit every day. Grain may be mixed and always should be fed in litter. Mash to be cleaned up in fifteen minuites, except at night, when hens should fill up.

Feed grain sparingly for breakfast, more at noon and all they want at night. Decide quantity by condition of hens and fullness of crop. Always keep them hungry in the daytime.

Mash formula; Three parts bran, two parts cornmeal, two parts wheat middlings and 10 per cent. beef scrap. No scrap when feeding cut bone. Feed cut bone and cabbage sparingly at first, later all they want. For grain and mash hopper feeding use same proportions and grains as here shown.

Eating His Delight.

King Carlos was one of the most unique characters in the world. "Never mind the revolution. Bring on the roasted pheasants and another bottle of Burgundy," epitomizes the type of character he was. He was said to be the greatest glutton in all Europe. He weighed 350 pounds, and he could eat, at one meal, three whole pheasants, a roast pig, several loaves of brown bread, and wash it all down with four quarts of wine. When he was younger and before he became king he would enter the bull ring as a toreador under an assumed name, and soon he gained the reputation of being one of the most reckless bull fighters of the continent.

There was no cowardice in his makeup. Once he risked his life by jumping into the sea to save a man from drowning. His bravery was displayed on another occasion when he was riding along a country road near Lisbon and came upon a highwayman robbing a peasant. Carlos dismounted, whipped the robber into submission, and led him off to prison.

His Feats of Strength.

King Carlos was a blond giant. He weighed about 350 pounds, but, despite his obesity, was very active. He was credited with being one of the best wing shots in Europe, and is said to have killed 1,000 pigeons without a miss.

He was very popular physically, and once, when his horse was running away with him, he felled it with a blow of his fist on the top of its head.

His great weight once broke the gangplank of a yacht as he was coming ashore. He went down and did not come up. Other members of the party dived, but could not find him. He had dived under the keel of the yacht and come up on the other side.

At a bull fight he caught a falling flagpole and saved the lives of several women, but went to the hospital for a week. He could bend coins in his powerful fingers and tear a pack of cards in two.

Things He Was Noted For.

King Carlos was the most versatile king in the world.

He was a glutton and ate more than any man in his kingdom.

He weighed 350 pounds.

He was champion swimmer.

He had a great personal courage.

He once risked his life to save a drowning man, and to rescue a peasant from a highwayman.

He was skilful and bold banderillero in the bull ring.

He was a good story-teller, a fine whip, a yachtsman, a painter of note and a sculptor, tennis player and musician.

He had translated Shakespeare into Portuguese.

He was the best pistol shot in Europe.

He spoke seven languages.

He pawned his crown, worth $6,000,000.

LANGFORD of the THREE BARS

By KATE AND VIRGIL D. BOYLES

(Copyright by A. C. McClurg & Co., 1907.)

Now was her time come. Dark, sinister figures flitted from tree to tree. At first she could not be sure, it was so heartlessly dark, but there was movement—it was different from that terrible blank quiet which she had hitherto been gazing upon till her eyes burned and pricked as with needle points, and visionary things swam before them. She winked rapidly to dispel the unreal and floating things, opened wide her long-lashed lids, fixed them, and—fired. Then Williston knew that his "little girl," his one ewe lamb, all that was left to him of a full and gracious past, must go through what he had gone through, all that nameless horror and expectant dread, and his heart cried out at the unholy injustice of it all. He dared not go to her, dared not desert his post for an instant. If one got within the shadow of the walls all was lost.

Mary's challenge was met with a rather hot return fire. It was probably given to inspire the besieged with a due respect for the attackers' numbers. Bullets pattered around the outside walls like hailstones, one even whizzed through the window perilously near the girl's intent young face.

Silence came back to the night. There was no more movement. Yet down there at the spring something, maybe one of those dark, gaunt cottonwoods, held death—death for her and death for her father. A stream of icy coldness struck across her heart. She found herself calculating in deliberation which tree it was that held this thing—death. The biggest one, shadowing the spring, helping to keep the pool sweet and cool where Paul Langford had galloped his horse that day when—ah! if Paul Langford would only come now!

A wild, girlish hope flashed up in her heart. Langford would come—had he not sworn it to her father? Had he not given his hand as a pledge? It means something to shake hands in the cattle country. He was big and brave and true. When he came these awful, creeping terrors would disperse—grim shadows that must steal away when morning comes. When he came she could put her rifle in his big, confident hands, lie down on the floor and—cry. She wanted to cry—oh, how she did want to cry. Cold reason came back to her aid and dissipated the weak and womanish longing to give way to tears. There was a pathetic droop to her mouth, a long, quivering, sobbing sigh, and she buried her woman's weakness right deeply and stamped upon it. How utterly wild and foolish her brief hope had been! Langford and all his men were sound in sleep long ago. How could he know? were the ruffians out there men to tell? Ah, no! There was no one to know. It would all happen in the dark—in awful loneliness, and there would be no one to know until it was all over—to-morrow, maybe, or next week, who could tell? They were off the main trail, few people ever sought them out. There would be no one to know.

As her strained sight stared out into the darkness it was borne to her intuitively, it may be, that something was creeping up on her. She could see nothing and yet knew it to be true. Every fiber of her being tingled with the certainty of it. It was coming closer and closer. She felt it like an actual presence. Her eyes shifted here, there—swept her half-circle searchingly—stared and stared. Still nothing moved. And yet the nearness of some unseen thing grew more and more palpable. If she could not see it soon she must scream aloud. She breathed in little quickened gasps. Soon, very soon, she would scream. Ah! A shadow down by the biggest cottonwood! It bodily sought a nearer and a smaller trunk. Another slinking shadow glided behind the vacated position. It was a ghastly presentation of "pussy-wants-a-corner" played in nightmare. But at last it was something tangible—something to do away with that frightful sensation of that crawling, creeping, twisting worming, insinuating—nearer and nearer, so near now that it beat upon her—unseen presence. She pressed her finger to the trigger to shoot at the tangible shadows and dispel that enveloping, choking, blanket horror, when God knows what stayed the action of her fingers. Call it instinct, what you will, her hand was stayed even before her physical eye was caught and held by a blot darker still than the night, over to her right, farthest from the spring. It lay perfectly still. It came to her, the wily plan, with startling clearness. The blot was waiting for her to fire futilely at grinning shadows among the trees and, under cover of her engrossed attention insinuate its treacherous body the farther forward. Then the play would go merrily on till—the end. She turned the barrel of her rifle slowly and deliberately away from the moving shapes among the cottonwood clump, sighted truly the motionless blur to her right and fired, once, twice, three times.

They Were Covered on the Instant.

The completeness of the surprise seemed to inspire the attackers with a hellish fury. They returned the fire rapidly and at will, remaining under cover the while. Shrinking low at her window, her eyes glued on the still black mass out yonder, Mary wondered if it were dead. She prayed passionately that it might be, and yet—it is a dreadful thing to kill. Once more the wild firing ceased. Mary responded once or twice just to keep the deadly chill from returning—if that were possible.

Under cover of the desperadoes' fire, at obtuse angles with the first attempt, a second blot began its tortuous twisting. It accomplished a space, stopped; pulled itself its length, stopped, waited, watchful eyes on the window whence came Mary's scattered firing still into the clump of trees. They had drawn her close regard at last. Would it hold out? Forward again, crawling flat on the ground, ever advancing, slowly, very slowly, but also very surely, creeping, creeping, creeping, now stopping, now creeping, stopping, creeping.

All at once the gun play began again, sharp, quick, from the spring, from the sheds. The blot lay perfectly still for a moment—waiting, watching. The plucky little rifle was silent. But so it had been before. Quarter length, half, whole length, cautiously with frequent stops, eyes so steely, so intent—could it be possible that this gun was really silenced—out of the race? It would not do to trust too much. The blot waited, scarcely breathed, crept forward again.

A sudden bright light flashed up through the darkness under the unprotected wall to Mary's left. Almost simultaneously a kindred light sprang into being from the region of the cattle-sheds. The men down there had been waiting for this signal. It meant that for some reason the second effort to creep up unobserved to fire the house had been successful. The flare grew and spread. It became a glare.

When the whole cabin seemed to be in flames save the door—the dry, rude boarding had caught and burned like paper—when the heat had become unbearable, Williston held out his hand to his daughter, silently. As silently she put her hand, her left hand, in his; nor did Williston notice that it was her left, nor how limply her right arm hung to her side. In the glare, her face shone colorless, but her dark eyes were stars. Her head was held high. With firm step, Williston advanced to the door. Deliberately he unbarred it, as deliberately threw it open and stepped over the threshold. They were covered on the instant by four rifles.

"Drop your guns!" called the chief, roughly. Then the desperadoes moved up.

"I take it that I am the one wanted," said Williston.

His voice was calm and scholarly once more. In the uselessness of further struggle, it had lost the sharp incisiveness that had been the call to action. If one must die it is good to die after a brave fight. One is never a coward then. Williston's face wore an almost exalted look.

"My daughter is free to go?" he asked, his first words having met with no response. Better, much better, for the make of a man like Williston to die in the dignity of silence, but for Mary's sake he parleyed.

"I guess not!" responded the leader, curtly. "If a pulin' idiot hadn't missed the broad side of you—as pretty a mark this side heaven as man could want—then we might talk about the girl. She's showed up too damned much like a man now to let her loose."

His big, shuffling form lounged in his saddle. He raised his rifle with every appearance of lazy indifference. They were to be shot down where they stood, now, right on the threshold of their burning homestead. Williston bowed his head to the inevitable for a moment; then raised it proudly to meet the inevitable.

A rifle shot rang out startlingly clear. At the very moment the leader's hawk eye had swept the sight, his rifle arm had twitched uncertainly, then fallen nerveless to his side, while his bullet, playing a faltering and discordant second to the first true shot, tore up the ground in front of him and swerved harmlessly to one side. Instantly the wildest confusion reigned—shouts, curses, the plunging of horses mingled with the sharp scrack of fire-arms. The shooting was wild. The surprise was too complete for the outlaws to recover at once. They had heard no sound of approaching hoof-beats. The roaring flames licking up the dry timber and rendering the surrounding darkness the blacker for the contrast had been of saving grace to the besiegers after all.

In a moment the desperadoes rallied. They closed in and imposed a cussing, malignant wall between the rescuers and the blazing door of the shanty and what stood and lay before it. Mary had sunk down at her father's feet and had no cognizance of the fierce though brief conflict that ensued.

Presently she was dragged roughly to her feet. A big, muscular arm had heavy grasp of her.

"Make sure of the girl, Red!" commanded a sharp voice near, and it was gone out into the night.

Afterward she heard—oh, many, many times in the night watches—the eerie galloping of horses' hoofs, growing fainter and ever fainter, heard it above the medley of trampling horses and yelling men, and knew it for what it meant; but to-night—this evil night—she gave but one quick, bewildered glance into the sinister face above her and in a soft, shuddering voice breathed, "Please don't," and fainted.

CHAPTER X.

In Which the X Y Z Figures Somewhat Mysteriously.

Jim Munson, riding his pony over the home trail at a slow walk, drooped sleepily in his saddle. It was not a weirdly late bedtime, half-past ten, maybe, but he would have been sleeping soundly a good hour or more had this not been his night to go to town—if he chose. He had chosen. He would not have missed his chance for a good deal. But his dissipation had been light. The boss never tolerated much along that line. He had drunk with some congenial cronies from the Circle E outfit complimentary to the future well-being and increasing wealth of this already well-known and flourishing cattle ranch. Of course he must drink a return compliment to the same rose-colored prosperity for the Three Bars, which he did and sighed for more. That made two, and two were the limit, and here was the limit overreached already; for there had always to be a last little comforter to keep him from nodding in his saddle.

It was a sleepy night, cool and soft and still. He could walk his horse all the way if he wanted to. There was no haste. The boys would all be in bed. They would not even wait up for the mail, knowing his, Jim's, innate aversion to hurry. Had he not been so drowsy, he would like to have sung a bit; but it required a little too much effort. He would just plod along.

Must all be in bed at Williston's—no light anywhere. A little short of where the Williston branch left the main trail he half paused. If it were not so late he would ride up and give them a hail. But of course they were asleep. Everything seemed still and dark about the premises. He would just plod along.

"Hello, there! Where'd you come from?" he cried of a sudden, and before he had had time to carry his resolve into action.

A man on horseback had drawn rein directly in front of him. Jim blinked with the suddenness of the shock.

"Might ask you the same question," responded the other with an easy laugh. "I'm for town to see the doctor about my little girl. Been puny for a week."

"Oh! Where you from?" asked Jim, with the courteous interest of his kind.

"New man on the X Y Z," answered the other, lightly. "Must be gittin' on. Worried about my baby girl."

He touched spurs to his horse and was off with a friendly "So long," over his shoulder.

Jim rode on thoughtfully.

"Now don't it beat the devil," he was thinking, "how that there cowpuncher struck this trail comin' from X Y Z—with the X Y Z clean t' other side o' town? Yep, it beats the devil, for a fac'. He must be a ridin' for his health. It beats the devil." This last was long drawn out. He rode a little farther. "It beats the devil," he thought again—the wonder of it was waking him up—"how that blamed fool could a' struck this here trail a goin' for doc."

At the branch road he stopped irresolutely.

"It beats the devil—for a fac'." He looked helplessly over his shoulder. The man was beyond sight and sound. "If he hadn't said he was goin' for doc and belonged to the X Y Z," he pondered. He was swearing because he could not think of a way out of the maze of contradiction. He was so seldom at a loss, this braggadocio Jim. "Well, I reckon I won't get any he'p a moonin' here less'n I wait here till that son-of-a-gun comes back from seein' doc. Lord, I'd have to camp out all night. Guess I'll be a movin' on. But I'm plumb a-foot for an idee as to how that idjit got here from the X Y Z."

He shrugged his shoulders and picked up the fallen bridle rein. He kept on straight ahead, and it was well for him that he did so. It was not the last of the affair. The old, prosaic trail seemed fairly bristling with ghostly visitants that night. He had gone but a scant quarter-mile when he met a second horseman, and this time he would have sworn on oath that the man had not been on the forward trail as long as he should have been to be seen in the starlight. Jim was not dozing now and he knew what he was about. The fellow struck the trail from across country and from the direction of Williston's home cattle sheds.

"The devil!" he muttered, and this time he was in deep and terrible earnest.

"Hullo!" the fellow accosted him, genially.

"Too damned pleasant—the whole bunch of 'em," found quick lodgment in Jim's active brain. Aloud, he responded with answering good nature, "Hullo!"

"Where ye goin'?" asked the other, as if in no particular haste to part company. If he had met with a surprise, he carried it off well.

"Home. Been to town." Jim was on tender hooks to be off.

"Belong to the Three Bars, don't you?"

"Yep."

"Thought so. Well, good luck to you."

"Say," said Jim, suddenly, "you don't happen to hang out at the X Y Z, do you?"

"Naw! What d'ye suppose I'd be doing here this time of night if I did?" There was scorn in his voice and suspicion, too. "Why?" he asked.

"Oh, nothin'. Thought I knew your build, but I guess I was mistaken. So long."

He had an itching desire to ask if this night traveler, too, was in quest of the doctor, but caution held him silent. He had need to proceed warily. He rode briskly along until he judged he had gone far enough to allay suspicion, then he halted suddenly. Very wideawake was Jim now. His hand rested unconsciously on the Colt's 45, protruding from his loosely hanging belt. His impulse was to ride boldly back and up to Williston's door, and thus satisfy himself as to what was doing so mysteriously. There was not a cowardly drop in Jim's circulation. But if foul play was abroad for Williston that night, he, Jim, of course, was spotted and would never be permitted to reach the house. It would mean a useless sacrifice. Now, he needed to be alive. There was a crying need for his good and active service. Afterwards—well, it was all in the day's work. It wouldn't so much matter then. It touched spurs lightly, bent his head against the friction of the air and urged his horse to the maddest, wildest race he had ever run since that day long ago, to be forgotten by neither, when he had been broken to his master's will.

Paul Langford dropped one shoe nervelessly to the wolfskin in front of his bed. Though his bachelor room was plain in most respects, plain for the better convenience of the bachelor hands that had it to put in rights every day—with the exception of a cook, Langford kept no servant—the wolfskin here, an Indian blanket thrown over a stiff chair by the table, a Japanese screen concealing the ugly little sheet-iron stove that stood over in its corner all the year round, gave evidence that his tastes were really luxurious. An oil lamp was burning dimly on the table. The soot of many burnings adhered to the chimney's inner side.

The sound of galloping hoof-beats on the hard road below came up to him. A solitary horseman was coming that way and he was putting his horse to the limit, too.

"Who the—deuce," began Langford. "It's Jim's cow pony as sure as I'm a sinner! What brings him home at that pace, I wonder? Is he drunk?"

He peered out indifferently. The hoof-beats rang nearer and nearer, clattered through the stable yards and, before they ceased, two or three revolver shots rang out in rapid succession. Jim had fired into the air to arouse the house.

Langford Rode Slightly in Advance.

Preservation of Aged Trees.

At a recent meeting in Massachusetts one of the speakers was Christopher Clark, for a quarter of a century tree warden of Northampton. Mr. Clark has lived there for eighty-one years. He told the audience how much the people prized the aged trees planted by the first settlers. He stated that over twenty barrels of cement had been used to stop the decay and fill the cavities of a single large tree. Will other towns please sit up and take notice? In years to come they should have streets lined with giant trees, each one valued at at least $1,000. Future residents will then gladly spend a hundred or two dollars to arrest decay in one. Better plant your street in full this season.

Another Fable.

The camel looked at the eye of the needle and shook his hump.

"It doesn't look as if I could get through there," he remarked.

"Oh come take a nip," said the sympathetic elephant. "Perhaps that will give you courage."

"Perhaps it will. I do need an eye-opener, don't I."—Chicago News.

The Prudential

The attention of renters of Safe Deposit Boxes in New York is called to the fact that New York State levies a tax on the contents of the Safe Deposit box of a non-resident at his or her death, which tax may, of course, be avoided by keeping one's valuables in the same state in which one resides. It is, therefore, greatly to the advantage of a resident of New Jersey to keep personal property in a Safe Deposit vault within the state.

An inspection of our facilities is invited.

STRINGENCY SHOE SALE

The beginning of the second week finds this great STRINGENCY SALE of ours gaining in force. People who have been here and profited by the unusual price cutting which has been universal throughout this mammoth stock, have told their friends and the glad news of these unusual bargains have spread until most every man, woman and child in town seems to have been inoculated with a desire to save money at our expense. We planned this sale and made this price-cutting with one idea—of arousing the bargain instincts of every person within shopping distance. If you could see us sell shoes, you would realize that we have come pretty near achieving our purpose. We have made a record in shoe selling that will stand for sometime to come, and if you want to participate in these mighty dollar savings. you should get busy at once; a few more days and there will not be much left but odd sizes and widths. Bring the children in the morning if you can, it will make it easier for both you and us.

There's a lot of Women's Boots—button and lace, 3.50 and 4.00 grades put on sale at $2.98. Widths a, b, c, d and e. Sizes 2½ to 7.

All of our Women's Napolian or Auto Boots, 5.00 grades at - - - - - - - - - $3.98

Every line of our Children's and Misses' High-cut Napolian Shoes, tan and black, cut without considering the cost.

Several lines of our regular Van Arsdale 4.00 Men's Shoes placed in this sale at $3.33 and some of the 5.00 grades at - - - - - - - - - $3.98

There are many other deep-cuts in Men's Shoes, worth your while to look into.

And there's a table of Women's Boots at - $1.98

One lot of Women's Oxfords at - - - - $1.19

And another at - - - - - - - - 98c

That honestly we could have sold as fast as we could have wrapped them up if we had every size—but you can bet your life if we had every size in those lots we wouldn't sell them at that price. If you can wear 2½ to 4, a, and b or 6, 6½ and 7, a, b and c you're foolish if you don't buy 5 or 6 pairs, that's all

P.H.S. GIRLS DEFEAT BOROUGH FIVE, 44-4

The Plainfield High School girls' basketball team had an easy time with the girls' five from the North Plainfield High School, winning by a score of 44 to 4 in a game played at the city school auditorium yesterday afternoon. At the end of the first half, the score was 31 to 2 in favor of the city school team, all the points for the home team having been made by Miss Barbara Fleming, who shot fifteen baskets and made the other point from the foul line. In the second half, Miss Fleming made one more basket, and Miss Catherine Sminck made five baskets.

The scoring for the North Plainfield team was done by Miss Cooley, who made two points from fouls in the first half, and scored a basket at the outset of the second period. The borough girls are members of the North Plainfield High School class of the Y. W. C. A., but the line-up is the same as that of the borough school girls' five. It was the second game ever played by the school team. Their opponents were superior in passing and shooting baskets and the outcome of the game was never in doubt. The lineups and summaries follow:

P. H. S.—The Misses Fleming, Durar and Sminck, forwards; Miss Merrill, centre; Miss Alpaugh and Miss Wean, guards. N. P. H. S.—Miss Cooley and Miss Daley, forwards; Miss Hart, centre; Miss Ackor and Miss Englehart, guards. Referee, Miss Mosher, of the Y. W. C. A.; umpire, Miss Ferry; timer, Miss Leggett; linesmen, Miss Cooley and Miss Radford; scorers, Miss Crampton and LeRoy Woodhull; fifteen minute halves.

Highlanders Organize.

The Highland A. C. has organized and will put a strong amateur team in the field this season, and would like to schedule games with clubs of its class. Address Manager Brown, 1201 North avenue, Plainfield.

—Mrs. John Stewart has removed from West Fifth street to 23 Linden avenue.

SCOTCH PLAINS PLANS FOR BASEBALL SEASON

The management of the Scotch Plains baseball team has reconsidered its decision to play independent ball this summer and will join the Inter-City Amateur League in which they finished second last season, coming within a small margin of winning the pennant. The decision to join the league was reached a few nights ago after a conference in which the Junior O. U. A. M. team of this city agreed to use the diamond at Scotch Plains during the coming season.

In arranging a schedule of games, care will be exercised not to have the contests conflict. The Juniors will play at the 'Plains on those dates when the home team is away. This will give the fans of that place a game every Saturday, something which they desired. It was for that reason only that the management thought of withdrawing from the league.

According to the new arrangement there should be an increased interest in the game at the 'Plains, as the Juniors will be a close second in the choice among the fans, because they will in reality represent the 'Plains as much as the league aggregation. The announcement that the 'Plains will be represented in the league has revived interest and it means that the other clubs will have to play their best ball to win out.

Holy Cross Win in New Suits.

By a rally in the second half, the Holy Cross basketball team defeated the St. Boni Venture five from Newark in a close game at the parish house Saturday afternoon. With the score 38-21 against them at the end of the first half, the church five picked up and won out in the last minute by a score of 43-42. Conroy's playing was a feature, for he made nine baskets and added three points from the foul line. The local five wore their new suits for the first time.

Hope Five Plays Three Games.

The Hope Y. M. C. five played three games of basketball Saturday, losing to New Brunswick High School in the afternoon by a score of 34-20, and winning from the Bound Brook Grammar School five in the evening by a score of 33-20. Between the halves of the afternoon game, they found time to win from the R. A. C. five by a score of 33-15. The games were all played in the Hope gym and were witnessed by a good-sized gallery.

Y.M.C.A. TRIMMED BY BROOKLYN FIVE, 32-30

Despite the fact that the local five made a big rally in the second half and came within two points of tying the score just before time was called, the Prospect Park branch of the Brooklyn Y. M. C. A. won from the local association five by a score of 32-30 at the association gymnasium last night. The score at the end of the first half was 21-10 in favor of the visitors. Rumsey replaced Collier in the lineup when the teams came out for the final period and the scoring rally which followed nearly evened the score. For the visitors, Bacon did the best work, scoring five baskets. Three points were awarded on technicality by the referee, two to Plainfield and not to the visitors. The summaries:

Prospect Park.	Plainfield.
Phillipson	Gilmore

BUSINESS MEN LOSE CLOSE GAME TO P. H. S.

The Plainfield High School basketball five defeated the Business Men's five of the Y. M. C. A. in a closely contested game at the association gym last night. The final score was 29-25. At the end of the first half, the school boys had a lead of 18-7. The summaries follow:

Field goals: Caldwell, 4; Robins, 4; Listman, 3; Snyder, 2; Parsons, 2; Smith, 2; Mortimer, Cahoone, Jarvis. Goals from fouls: Caldwell, 3; Listman, 3. P. H. S. awarded a point on technicality. Referee, Charles B. Morse.

Educational Fathers' Short Session.

The several special meetings recently held by the North Plainfield Board of Education left little business to be transacted at the regular monthly meeting last night. The usual budget of bills, aggregating nearly $7,000, was audited and ordered paid, and the session was a short one.

FIRE DESTROYS BARN OF BERKELEY'S MAYOR.

The large barn adjoining the hotel at Berkeley Heights, owned by "Mayor" Joseph Kuntz, was completely destroyed by fire at 11 o'clock Saturday night and two valuable horses and a dog perished in the flames. One horse was saved by Mr. Kuntz at great personal risk. Soon after the fire was discovered, the neighbors rushed to the scene and rendered every possible assistance.

There being no fire protection at Berkeley, it was necessary to carry water in pails and this afforded poor and inadequate means of fighting the flames. The chicken house was practically destroyed, but the chickens were rescued. The fire was gotten under control about midnight. Among those who did especially good work were Deputy Sheriff William Lutz, Amos Potter, who lives over a mile away, and Charles Cretty. The damage amounts to about three times that of the insurance.

"Mayor" Kuntz is one of the committee of three governing the Township of New Providence in which Berkeley is located, and he has started a movement to install a fire alarm system and take up the question of obtaining a water supply with hydrants and organizing a fire department.

LAWYER FOR EACH 250.

Sixty-two young lawyers were sworn in before Clerk Wagstaff, of the Appellate Division, in New York yesterday afternoon, Justice Patterson presiding. In a short address to them he said:

"For every two hundred and fifty persons in New York city there is now one lawyer; it is a wonder how they all get along. Some of them don't, and it is a case of the survival of the fittest."

Physicians Cannot Locate Bullet.

Louis Mulford, of Grant avenue, who was shot Sunday afternoon by Clarence Drake, agent at the Grant Avenue station, while the lads were engaged in horse-play, is reported at the hospital today as doing well and in no immediate danger. The X-ray treatment was used yesterday afternoon in an effort to locate the bullet, but thus far the piece of lead has not been found. The physicians in charge will continue their search and use every possible means to remove the bullet.

NOTABLE DEMONSTRATIONS MARK FORMAL OPENING OF HUDSON RIVER TUBE; GOVERNORS FORT AND HUGHES AMONG DISTINGUISHED ONES ON FIRST TRAIN

When President Roosevelt Presses Button at Washington, Official Party is Conveyed Through the Great Tunnel Connecting New York and New Jersey; Celebration at Hoboken Following the Trip.

New Jersey and New York were linked together yesterday afternoon when Theodore Roosevelt, President of the United States, touched a button. The electric current that sent the official train of eight cars on its premiere trip through the great tunnel from Nineteenth street, New York, to Hoboken, also served as a signal for William G. McAdoo to take his place in the Nation's hall of fame. The greatest engineering feat probably in the world's history had been accomplished by this man, who had dared to undertake it a hundred or even fifty years ago would have made him an object of ridicule.

It was a great day for New Jerseyites for it marked a new bond of union with New Yorkers, bring them closer together in time by many minutes. Governor Charles Evans Hughes, of New York, and his military staff of seventeen were present, as were Governor John Franklin Fort and his staff. Prominent sons of both States were present at the personal invitation of William G. McAdoo, president of the Hudson and Manhattan Railroad Company, owners of the twin tubes which were thrown open to the public last midnight, following the formal ceremonies in the afternoon.

Both Governors and their parties warmly greeted Mr. McAdoo, when they gathered at the Nineteenth street entrance to the big tube, and then a squad of officials of the company escorted them to the two forward cars of the train, which were reserved for them.

As soon as the two State executives were aboard Mr. McAdoo stepped to the little desk, where was stationed the telegraph key, and at exactly 3:32:27 he flashed the signal to the White House informing President Roosevelt that everything was in readiness. Then the following telegram, penned on the scene by Mr. McAdoo, was sent by the operator in charge of the instrument:

"To the President of the United States:

"The first special train of the Hudson and Manhattan Railroad Company under the Hudson River awaits your signal and pleasure.

"WILLIAM G. McADOO,

"President Hudson and Manhattan R. R. Co.'

Roosevelt Presses the Button.

Six minutes later there was a flash of the lights in the cars, which were only partly lighted, and everybody knew that President Roosevelt, 250 miles away, had started the machinery in motion, for as soon as the cars lighted up the motors under the cars controlling the air supply for the brakes began to turn. This moving of the machinery was accompanied by a mighty cheer from the 800 voices in the train.

Two minutes later Mr. McAdoo sounded the bell and the train started, moving slowly down Sixth avenue in the west tunnel. The trip was comparatively slow until after making the turn at Morton street, where the train began the descent under the river.

Governor Fort and Governor Hughes and their aides-de-camp stood in the doorway of the first car, by the side of the motorman. Mr. McAdoo stood near by during the entire trip.

When the circle of red, white and blue incandescent lamps marking the dividing line between the two States was passed, there was a mighty cheer from all in the car. It reechoed over and above the rumble of the fast moving train. Everybody had been watching for it, but it came and disappeared so quickly that hardly a person in the car noticed it. When the two chief executives recovered from their surprise they turned to each other, clasped hands and exchanged felicitations.

The trip was made in exactly eleven minutes and without a hitch. When Hoboken was reached Mr. McAdoo himself made the announcement:

Hoboken, Ho!

"Hoboken; all out," he said.

"Well, I declare, so soon?" was Governor Fort's only comment, as he turned with the crowd to leave the car.

"It was certainly a speedy trip," commented Governor Hughes.

A special platform had been erected for the accommodation of the two Governors and their staffs. This was located just outside the terminal at Hoboken, and while it was roomy, an effort was made to prevent all but those directly connected with the Governors and the officials of the company from obtaining access to it, but the accommodations for the crowd were so small that this was impossible.

It was a gala day for Hoboken, and never before was such a crowd seen on the streets of the little Hudson county city. Conservative estimates place the number clamoring for a glimpse of the celebrities on the platform at 8,000. All the streets leading to the terminal were packed. The windows of all the office buildings were filled, while the entire town took on a holiday appearance.

Divine Blessing Invoked.

The ceremonies were commenced by the Rev. Dr. William R. Jenvey, the Protestant Episcopal Archdeacon of the diocese of Newark, who asked the Divine blessing on the great engineering achievement. Dr. Jenvey is the oldest Episcopal rector in Hoboken.

"It was an inspiring scene. Every one in Hoboken knows Dr. Jenvey and when he stepped from the crowd arrayed in military uniform, brilliant with gold braid, almost every man in the vast crowd bared his head despite the raw wind that was blowing from the east. While it was a restless crowd during the remainder of the ceremonies and prior to this time, scarcely a man, woman or child moved as the aged rector invoked the Divine blessing.

President Oakman, of the Hudson Companies, the chief contractors who built the tunnels, stepped to the front of the platform as Dr. Jenvey stepped down and officially turned over to President McAdoo, of the railroad company, that part of the work which is completed—the section formally opened yesterday.

Short speeches were made by Messrs. Oakman and McAdoo. The latter acted as master of ceremonies in introducing the speakers who included Governors Hughes and Fort, Mayor Wittpenn, of Jersey City, and Mayor Steil, Hoboken.

The President's Message.

Mr. McAdoo read the following letter from President Roosevelt:

"My Dear Mr. McAdoo:

"Now that a beginning is to be made in opening for operation the Hudson tunnel system, I write to express my regret that I cannot be present in person, and my high appreciation of what you have accomplished.

"The tunneling of the Hudson River is indeed a notable achievement—one of those achievements of which all Americans are, as they should be, justly proud. The tunnel itself and the great buildings constructed in connection therewith, represent a work of extraordinary magnitude, represent extraordinary difficulties successfully overcome, while difficulty and magnitude are even surpassed by the usefulness of the achievement.

"The whole system is practically below tidal water, and this makes it much the greatest subaqueous tunnel in the world.

"It is a bigger undertaking than any Alpine tunnel which has yet been constructed, and the successful completion represents the moving of New Jersey bodily three miles nearer to New York in point of time and immensely increases the case of access from one State to the other.

"All the engineers and business men who have taken part in bringing this great achievement to a successful conclusion ought to be most heartily congratulated. It is the kind of business achievement which is in the highest degree creditable to the American people, and for which American people should feel and publicly acknowledge their hearty gratitude. Sincerely yours,

"(Signed)

"THEODORE ROOSEVELT."

Fort's Remarks.

Governors Fort and Hughes were introduced in turn by Mr. McAdoo.

Governor Fort said in the course of his speech:

"New York should be congratulated on the completion of this tunnel. The company should be congratulated on the triumph of the engineering skill. I congratulate Governor Hughes and the people of New York and the people of New Jersey that our two peoples are by this tunnel bonded together, cemented more closely, if that were possible than they were before. The tunnel means much to New York and New Jersey. It means much to the future development of the two great states. I thank you, Mr. President, for the opportunity you have given me to ride on the first public train that passed through the tunnel."

Governor Hughes Applauded.

Governor Hughes met with a remarkable salute and was forced to bow a dozen times before he could begin his speech. He said:

"New York is proud to greet New Jersey at all times and under all circumstances, on land and on and under water. We, today, congratulate ourselves on the completion of this work and the skill which has created this new avenue of communication. A source of congratulation is that we are constantly in this country emancipating ourselves from local prejudices. New Yorkers do not look askance at what this tunnel may do for New Jersey, but are glad for what it will do for New York. We are glad for this extension of area for the people now living in the congested districts. The tunnel means much for New York and New Jersey."

Speeches by Jersey Mayors.

Mayor Steil and Mayor Wittpenn spoke briefly, and President McGowan, who is suffering from hoarseness, did not attempt to talk in the chilly air. Then the exercises ended, and every one squeezed back into the tube. The return trip was made in half a minute beter time than the outgoing, and the distinguished passengers dispersed to prepare for the dinner at Sherry's a few hours later.

The oldest traveller was John Bigelow, former United States Minister to France and a distinguished writer. Mr. Bigelow expressed his delight on the trip, and remarked that although he was born by the banks of the Hudson he "would have been called a lunatic" had he ever, as a young man, said he would some day ride beneath its waters.

Last night was a time of rejoicing in Hoboken, Jersey City, and outlying towns. There were fireworks in Jersey City, although some of the aldermen were disgruntled because they were not invited to the dinner.

Jerseymen Present.

The following New Jersey citizens were invited guests at the opening of the tunnel in the afternoon:

DEFER WAGNER SENTENCE

Both Defendant and Attacked Man File Petitions Causing Court to Postpone Action.

MILD ON JOHN KENNEDY.

Man Who Assaulted Elizabeth Station Porter is Placed in Charge of Probation Officer.

James Wagner, of this city, was not sentenced by Judge Atwater in the Union County Court this morning for the reason that two lengthy petitions were presented, one by the friends of Baggagemaster J. F. Garretson, whom Mr. Wagner assaulted, and the other by the friends of the defendant. It was the intention of the court to pronounce sentence today, but the petitions left Judge Atwater in a quandary and he said the matter would be deferred for one week to give him an opportunity to look further into the merits of the applications.

John Kennedy, of this city, indicted on a charge of assault and battery on William Carter, the colored porter at the Elizabeth station of the New Jersey Central, was put in charge of the probation officer for one year and is required to pay the cost of the prosecution. The money must be paid to the probation officer.

Frank Brown, colored, of this city, found guilty of stealing a bag of barber's tools, and who changed his plea of not guilty to that of non vult was sentenced to three months in the county jail.

Emic Cooper, colored, indicted on a charge of assault and battery on a woman, will be sentenced tomorrow. It is expected that he will receive a severe penalty.

VISITOR ARRESTED ON FALSE RETENSE CHARGE.

Philip Thompson, a professional baseball player, came down from Central Valley, N. Y., to visit local relatives a few days ago. He started off on a spree soon after his arrival and was booze-logged the greater part of the time. While still under the influence yesterday, he went to A. M. Griffin's store and by pretending that he wanted it for his brother-in-law, secured a $6 revolver without paying for it. He sold the weapon in a saloon for $2.

The store people afterward learned that the brother-in-law had not sent for the weapon and complaint was preferred against Thompson. The police picked him up last night and when arraigned in court this morning he acknowledged wrongdoing but fell back on the drunk excuse. His relatives agreed to reimburse Mr. Griffin and Thompson was given until 6 o'clock to hike back to Central Valley.

To Close Schools in His Memory.

At the special meeting of the Plainfield Board of Education held at the High School last night to frame resolutions on the death of President John B. Probasco, it was decided that the afternoon session in the city schools be omitted Friday, the day of Dr. Probasco's funeral. Principal Ira W. Travell, of the High School announced at the morning exercises today that the session of that school Friday will end at noon. Superintendent Henry M. Maxson, who is at the school superintendents' conference at Washington, D. C., was informed of Dr. Probasco's death by telegram yesterday. He will be unable to return to this city until Saturday.

"From Equator to Arctic Circle."

State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman will give an illustrated lecture on the subject, "From the Equator to the Arctic Circle," in Warren chapel, tomorrow night. He has visited over fifty countries, made over fifty steamer voyages, many of them world's record ones, traveled nearly four hundred thousand miles and he has enjoyed the hospitality of a number of crowned heads. The pictures he has taken are especially fine, and those who attend the lecture will have a treat. The lecture will be for the benefit of Warren chapel.

English Teachers Visited.

Frank Rentscher, instructor in English at the Roselle High School, and Miss Markley, who teaches English at the Westfield High School, were visitors this morning at the English classes of the Plainfield High School.

To Sing at Dance.

John Salkeld, who sang at the Commercial Travellers' dance at the Casino Friday night, will render several selections at the dance to be given at the Camera Club rooms next Monday night.

PASS CIVIL SERVICE BILL

State Senate Officially Stamps Its Approval to Ernest R. Ackerman's Measure.

NOW GOES TO THE ASSEMBLY.

Mr. Frelinghuysen Largely Instrumental in Framing Bill Which Will Remove State Employes from Bosses.

State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman won a signal triumph today, when the Upper House of the Legislature passed his civil service bill by a vote of 13 to 3. The measure called forth considerable argument, the weight of it being in favor of the measure. Senator Ackerman made a strong plea in behalf of the provisions. The bill now goes to the House.

The bill provides for the employment, tenure and discharge of certain officers of this State and of the various counties and municipalities thereof and providing for a Civil Service Commission and defining its duties. It represents a large amount of labor on the part of Senator Ackerman, who was also assisted by Senator Joseph F. Frelinghuysen in the drafting of the bill.

Six months after the approval of the act appointments to and promotions in the Civil Service of the State, and three months after its adoption by a municipality appointments to and promotions in such municipality, shall be made only according to merit and fitness. The act is mandatory on the State, but optional with counties and municipalities. The reference to "municipality" signifies village, town, township, borough, city or county or other local government as distinguished from the State government. The provisions of the act may be adopted by ordinance by the governing body of a municipality or, on a petition signed by at least five hundred legal voters in municipalities of the first and second classes, two hundred and fifty voters in municipalities of the third class and at least 10 per cent. of the legal voters in other municipalities, it shall be the duty of the governing body to submit the question to the voters of the municipality at the next regular election.

Provision is made for the appointment of three commissioners by the Governor, with the advice and consent of the Senate and the term of one commissioner will expire every two years. He may also remove commissioners for inefficiency or on charges. The commissioners will receive a salary of $3,000 a year, the one chosen president getting an extra $1,000. The commissioner may choose a chief examiner, secretary and such other clerical help as may be necessary, and all traveling and other expenses will be paid by the State, cut expenses, including salaries, shall not exceed $30,000 a year.

Section two provides that the terms of office or officers of the State of municipality, upon this act becoming a law, that come within the classified service are abolished and that the officers shall not be removed except on charges. The unclassified service is not subject to the provisions of the act, and includes all officers elected by popular vote, those appointed by the Governor, employes of the Legislature, election officers, all heads of departments, all low officers, all superintendents of and teachers and instructors in the public schools and State institutions, county superintendents and members of all boards of education.

The classified service is arranged into four classes—exempt, competitive, non-competitive and labor. Appointments in the above four classes are made for a period of three months, and if satisfactory will be made permanent.

No employe in the classified service shall, according to this act, be discharged, removed or reduced in payment or position because of his religious or political affiliations, or until he has been furnished with written reasons for such action and has reasonable time to make written answer thereto. A head of department, however, may suspend a subordinate for not longer than thirty days, but successive suspensions are not allowed.

The act makes it a misdemeanor to solicit, either directly or indirectly, any contributions for political purposes.

While away the Plainfielders took in all the points of interest at Jamaica and they were pleased with the beautiful island as well as the climate.

PHYSICIAN IS FINED $10

Dr. Sherman Cooper, of Westfield, Punished for Violating an Ordinance.

IN NORTH PLAINFIELD COURT.

Borough Recorder Dolliver Sees Mitigating Circumstances and Decides Not to Impose the $100 Penalty.

Dr. Sherman Cooper, of Westfield, arrested last week on a warrant from the North Plainfield Board of Health for violation of the borough health ordinance, changed his plea from "not guilty" to "non vult" at a postponed hearing last night before Borough Recorder Charles Dolliver and was fined $10. He paid the penalty.

Through his attorney, Robert Newton Crane, Dr. Cooper admitted a technical violation of Section 5, Article 9, of the North Plainfield health ordinance, which provides that all cases of contagious disease shall be reported by the attending physician within twenty-four hours after diagnosis. The case was that of Mrs. Horace J. Martin, Jr., and Dr. Cooper's atorney claimed that it was not diagnosed as typhoid until five hours before headth. In his plea to the court, the physician called attention to the fact that he was not a resident and claimed that he had never had that particular part of the health code brought to his attention. The doctor was arrested on a warrant last week, and was brought before the North Plainfield court at a session Friday night, when the case was laid over until last night.

In passing sentence on the case, Borough Recorder Dolliver said that it was in his power to impose a fine of $100 for violation of this section of the ordinance, but stated that, owing to the mitigated circumstances developed at the hearing, he would make the fine but $10. Francis J. Blatz, counsel for the Board of Health, was the other lawyer, and there was a big crowd out for the hearing.

SUTTERLEIN ACQUITTED OF STEALING A SHAWL.

Augustus Sutterlein, of this city, was acquitted yesterday in the Union County Court of the charge of stealing a shawl on October 9 last, belonging to Mrs. Dora Fagan, of Rahway. The case begun on Monday. The jury was out but a short time, when it returned a verdict of not guilty. The defendant was represented by Robert Newton Crane, assisted by William G. DeMeza.

Among the witnesses called by the prosecution were Chief Kiely, Captain Frederickson and Detective-Sergeant John Flynn, of the police department.

According to the story of the defendant he was a passenger on a main line trolley car in this city on October 9, when he picked up a shawl belonging to Mrs. Fagan. He contended that he was holding the shawl for the purpose of finding the owner and possibly getting a reward. He afterward left it at a local saloon for keeping.

At the trial yesterday counsel for the defendant attempted to prove by Mrs. Fagan that Chief Kiely told her he wanted to railroad Sutterlein. This statement was flatly denied by Chief Kiely.

In his cross-examination of Mrs. Fagan there was considerable of a stir when Judge Atwater took occasion to admonish Mr. Crane following certain questions put to the witness. Mr. DeMeza immediately addressed the court informing it that this was Mr. Crane's first case in the county court. In view of this the matter was overlooked by Judge Atwater.

Travelogue Lecture Postponed.

On account of the very stormy weather the travelogue lecture scheduled for the First Presbyterian church tonight by Dr. Ward El-Ward, has been postponed to Wednesday night, March 11. Dr. Ward recently gave an illustrated lecture at the First Baptist church and it was so pleasing that arrangements were made to have him appear at the First Presbyterian church.

Miss Palmer to Talk.

Miss Caroline L. Palmer, instructor in the Bible Teachers' Training School, of New York, will lecture tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Young Women's Christian Association rooms, 212 East Front street. Everyone is invited to hear this attractive speaker. Miss Palmer's subject will be "The Social Question in the Book of Luke."

Chambliss Reception Postponed.

On account of the death of Dr. John B. Probasco, a beacon and much beloved member of the First Baptist church, the reception planned for Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Chambliss on the evening of Tuesday, March 10, will be indefinitely postponed.

BOGUS VANONIS CAUGHT

Arrested in Summit This Morning on Instructions from Chief Kiely.

CHARGES AGAINST THEM HERE.

Induced Local Caterer to Cash a Worthless Check—Real Name of Prisoners Is Said to Be Chapet.

Acting on instructions from Chief of Police Kiely, of this city, the authorities of Summit today arrested the alleged bogus Vanoni family that has been swindling hotel people throughout the State. They were found in a hostelry conducted by James Bailey, at one time one of the proprietors of the Park Avenue Hotel, now Truell Inn. Mr. Bailey furnished the information that led to their capture, coming here this morning to do so.

The family numbers four in all, a mother, daughter, nephew and a son. They have been giving the name of Vanoni and the members correspond with a family of the same name formerly living here and who they knew. The real name of the family under arrest is Chapet. As soon as they were in custody, Detective-Sergeant John Flynn hurried to Summit and positively identified the four people as the same who had robbed Willett's Hotel, of Westfield, and who passed two forged checks on D. Demolli, the Plainfield caterer. They will be brought to this city this afternoon, the Demolli charges taking precedence over several that had been preferred.

The so-called Vanonis, or Chapets, lived in New York for many years, the husband working in a large catering house where Demolli was also employed. They became acquainted with the Vanoni family which afterward came to Plainfield and when they started on their swindling operations, they adopted this name. Just why they did so when they could have taken any other with just as much benefit is a matter the police will try to figure out. They stayed some time at Willett's hotel in Westfield and after departing suddenly, the proprietor discovered that $400 worth of clothing belonging to himself and guests had gone with them. While at Westfield, a side trip was made to Plainfield and on the strength of old friendship, Caterer Demolli was induced to cash a couple of checks. They were signed by "Mrs. Vanoni," the woman stating that she had changed her name by a second marriage.

Early this month, a family answering the description of the swindling Vanonis, jumped hotel bills at Princeton and Trenton and the police of these cities joined the chase already being conducted by Chief Kiely. They were heard from at various times in an indefinite way but the first positive information of their whereabopts came to Plainfield this morning when Proprietor Bailey called at Police headquarters. He said a family of that name had registered at his hotel several days ago and yesterday he cashed a $70 check for the mother. Just after he had done so he recalled that he had read an article in a newspaper stating that four people answering their description were wanted in Plainfield. He made up his mind to see Chief Kiely about the matter and came over as soon as possible.

The chief 'phoned the Summit police to arrest the four and Detective-Sergeant Flynn was sent over by auto. The prisoners will be arraigned on complaints preferred by Demolli and Willis.

Concerning a Petition.

The petition which has been circulated by the friends of Baggagemaster J. F. Garretson in his interest in connection with the assault case in which James Wagner is the defendant, contains a recital of the facts of that case and does not petition the court to impose the most severe sentence under this charge. After giving the facts, it concludes with an admonition to those who take the law in their own hands instead of seeking redress through the courts.

Successful Dance Assured.

The responses thus far received by the committee in charge of the bachelors' dance to be held at the Casino Friday night give assurances of a large attendance of the younger society set. This will be the last society event prior to Lent and the committee is making every effort to eclipse previous affairs of the kind. There will be a number of surprises that will delight and entertain the guests.

False Alarm by 'Phone.

Somebody telephoned to North Plainfield fire headquarters at 11:45 today that there was "a fire on Pearl street." The department went to the street, but were unable to locate the "shine." Chief Howard Woolston has reported the matter to Chief Marshal George Weiss and will endeavor to locate the false alarm sender.

DO NOT KNOW WHAT CAUSES SICKNESS

Modern People Have Many Names for Same Diseases, According to New Belief.

Does human health depend on one organ alone? This question is becoming widely discussed since L. T. Cooper first advanced his theory that the stomach is the true seat of life and all health dependent upon it.

Mr. Cooper, who has met with remarkable success in the sale of his new medicine, believes that the stomach is responsible for most sickness, and that this organ is weak in the present generation. While discussing this theory recently, he said: "I am asked time and again to tell why my medicine has made such a record wherever I have introduced it. My answer always is, 'because it restores the stomach to a normal condition.' No one will deny that today there are more half-sick men and women than ever before. Nothing critical seems to be the matter with them. They are just half-sick most of the time. They don't know really what is the matter with them. I have talked with thousands during the past two years, and few knew indeed what their trouble was. One said nervousness, another said kidney trouble, another liver complaint, some constipation, or heart trouble, or lung trouble. Many had treated, as they called it, for most of these diseases at different times. A very common complaint is 'all run down,' or 'tired all the time,' or 'no appetite.'"

"I know positively that every bit of this chronic ill health is caused by stomach trouble, and nothing else. My New Discovery puts the stomach in sound condition in about six weeks. Mighty few people can be sick with a sound digestion. That is why my medicine is selling at such a tremendous rate. I have convinced many thousands of people that these things are so, and the number is growing by leaps and bounds."

Among more recent converts to Mr. Cooper's beliefs is Mr. Edgar L. Hinds, living at 8 Tappan Street, Everett, Mass. Mr. Hinds has this to say on the subject:

"I have suffered with stomach trouble for eight years. I was not sick enough to be in bed, but just felt bad all the time. My greatest trouble was that I always felt tired, would get up in the morning feeling as tired as when I went to bed.

"I had a very irregular appetite, and was troubled with dizzy spells. If I stood for any length of time, I would have a dull pain in the lower part of my back. I was nervous and felt all the time as though something terrible was going to happen. I tried many kinds of medicine, but nothing ever helped me.

"I had about given up all hope of ever being in good health again, when I heard so much of Cooper and decided to try his medicine. I took one bottle of his New Discovery and was greatly surprised at the result. I gained 12 pounds in a few weeks. I can now eat anything I wish, and feel like a new man. I cheerfully recommend this medicine to all sufferers from stomach trouble."

It is worth anyone's time, who is not enjoying good health, to learn of Mr. Cooper's wonderful preparations. We are selling them in large quantities. —T. S. Armstrong.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

It begins to look as though the people of Newark would some time (far distant be the day!) have to erect a monument to another rector of St. Patrick's Cathedral. The Rev. Father Whelan is measuring up to the high standard of citizenship set for him by Monsignor Doane. He is not only a man of high ideals, but of strong character. One who knows him well said yesterday: "He is as shrewd a politician as Jim Smith, and is going to be a power in this town"—a power fortunately, for the promotion of righteousness in Newark.—Newark Sunday Call.

THE KILLING OF "DUTCH" IDES.

There is every reason to believe Patrolman Weber's statement with reference to his part in the accident which resulted in the killing on Saturday last of the notorious criminal known as "Dutch" Ides. The officer was chasing a gang of suspected burglars of whom Ides was the leader. He had twice fired his revolver in the air to induce them to stop, and was about to pull the trigger for a third warning shot when he slipped and fell. The shot was discharged, and the bullet went straight to the brain of the fleeing thief.

The incident is one of those regrettable events likely to happen at any time in the life of a policeman, and yet there is justice enough in it to mitigate its worst features. Ides was a notoriously bad character. He was armed. He was violating the law in a threefold way, in that he was carrying a deadly weapon, was a fugitive from justice and was, as it was learned later, planning a robbery.

Had he been overtaken by the policeman in the chase it is not at all improbable that he would have first shot the officer and then himself, for his friends testify that he had contemplated suicide. Young man that he was he had spent a large proportion of his years in jail or in the reformatory or had been an escaped prisoner evading the law. While the manner of his death is to be regretted, the community has lost little or nothing through his accidental taking off. The police officer was endeavoring to do his duty, and was warranted in all he attempted and intended to do. The accident was the result of Ides' lawlessness rather than of Weber's efforts to arrest him.—Newark News.

Declaring he had recognized the voice of his pet rooster, which was stolen last week along with fourteen hens, Henry Moore, a negro, of Trenton, yesterday applied to the police to arrest a neighbor, from whose yard, he asserts, he heard issuing the clarion call. The police refuse to act until more tangible evidence is produced.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

BASEBALL.

At a recent meeting of the Cornell faculty an amendment to the rules governing student organizations was adopted which will put an end to the undergraduates playing summer baseball for money or any other consideration. The rule to which the amendment applies follows:

"II. Intercollegiate Athletic Contests in General—No person shall represent the university in any intercollegiate athletic contest either at home or abroad.

"c. If he receives or has ever received any remuneration or consideration of any sort for his services in any branch, as performer, player, coach, or otherwise, apart from such necessary expenses as are actually incurred by him as a member of a college team, or of a permanent amateur organization in connection with occasional amateur contests."

The amendment is: "In applying Rule II, c, to baseball any person who, after April 1, 1908, plays under a name other than his own, or who plays in a contest at which an admission fee is charged, except as a member or representative of a school or college team, shall be conclusively presumed to have violated this rule."

The dean of the university made the following explanation of the action: For a long time the need has been felt of some way of enforcing the rule of the Brown conference, rendering ineligible those who have received remuneration for participation in any branch of sport. The principal difficulty occurs in summer baseball, where the players receive remuneration directly or indirectly from the proceeds of the game.

Owing to the circumstances under which these games are played it is in most cases impossible to establish the violation of the rule. Even where a student plays in such games without remuneration he is suspected of receiving it, and discredit is thrown upon the college team on which he afterwards plays.

The faculty on the recommendation of the committee on student affairs (the former committee on student organization) has therefore adopted a rule creating a presumption arising from ascertainable facts which usually accompany a violation of the rule. There can be no justification for playing under an assumed name, and while a student may play without remuneration in games for which admission is charged, it is felt that for the sake of the reputation of the college all suspicion of the violation of the rule should be avoided.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

According to football gossip at Ann Arbor, there is no possibility of Michigan and Brown meeting on the gridiron next fall, but it is likely there will be a game in 1909.

The University of Pennsylvania's basketball team defeated the Cornel five at Ithaca a few days ago, by the score of 21 to 15.

Harvard's varsity crews took their first practise spin on the water Saturday, which was earlier in the season than ever before in the history of Harvard rowing. The varsity crew skimmed along as though the men had been rowing for weeks.

The University of Michigan football management has offered Washington and Jefferson a game at Ann Arbor, on November 7.

The Montclair High School track team has been severely weakened by the withdrawal from the enrolment of the institution of Frederic Noyes, the New Jersey Interscholastic champion sprinter, who has been the foremost short distance man among the New Jersey schools for the past two seasons, having captured places in many of the big preparatory school games in New York as well as in New Jersey. Noyes was the captain and mainstay of the Montclair school and it was thought by many that he would eclipse all his former performances during the coming season.

Newark High School has lost a good athlete in Risler, the right guard on this year's crack basketball team and first base on the baseball nine. Risler has enerted Wenonah Military Academy, in South Jersey, where he will take an active part in athletics.

Horrax, the Montclair boy at Williams, is picked as the probable winner in the high jump at the coming intercollegiate track and field championship meet, to be held in the Harvard stadium, at Cambridge, as last year he took third, for Moffitt, of Pennsylvania, the winner, and Marshall, of Yale, who took second place, have graduated from their respective universities.

VOTING MACHINE BILL UP TO LAST READING

After an hour's debate Monday night the Senate at Trenton put back on second reading the school teachers' tenure of office act. This move was resorted to to save the bill. As drawn, no Board of Education can discharge a school teacher after three years' service, her salary or grade can not be touched, and if she behaves well and is efficient she can not be removed by any power.

In the House, Poller introduced a bill raising salaries of Common Pleas judges in counties with less than 70,000 inhabitants as follows: Middlesex and Monmouth to $4,500; Atlantic, Burlington, Cumberland and Morris to $3,500; Cape May, Gloucester, Hunterdon, Ocean, Salem and Sussex to $2,000.

Assemblyman Crosby, of Ocean, introduced a bill appropriating $2,500 to the Ocean county oyster commission for planting oyster shells in natural beds.

Assemblyman Keiffer, of Atlantic, put in a bill appropriating $1,200 per year for the rental of Chancery chambers in Atlantic City. The House passed to third reading the bill passed by the Senate to enable municipalities to vote on the retention of voting machines, also the joint resolution providing for a commission to investigate fishing in the Delaware river.

In the Senate last night the old fight against New York city polluting the Jersey seashore broke out, when Senator Brown, of Monmouth, introduced a resolution, which passed, directing the attorney general to take steps to prevent the dumping of garbage from New York city scows on the Jersey coast. Senator Brown says this garbage dumping has got so extensive that it is a menace to health.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

A deservedly popular theatrical attraction is "The Heir to the Hoorah," announced for the New Plainfield theatre tonight for the testimonial to Major Maze Edwards. This best of the emanations from the prolific pen of Paul Armstrong is a play of much literary value; filled with rich humor, scintillant wit and that heart interest and dramatic intensity that makes a happy foil to the predominant comedy.

Amateur numbers will be given at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow night in connection with Salisbury's pictures.

The laughing show, "The Fool House," a musical comedy with a plot, will be the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre next Monday night. The plot is hinged on a will leaving one million dollars to the only son of Dagget Robbins, providing that he marries the daughter of an old chum. The son, Tommy, has never seen this chum of his father's or his daughter, and the fun starts when Tommy goes to a sanitarium for the insane thinking it is an hotel, and the fun is fast and furious from the rise of the curtain until its final fall. All sorts of liberties are taken by the characters and it is truly said that there is a laugh every minute. Wonderful work is done by the Four Huntings and their support, while a chorus of forty help to keep the fun going. The costumes are above the ordinary and every part is creditably taken.

David Shay, clerk at the Plainfield Country Club last season, has returned to Plainfield, where he will remain awaiting the opening of the golf season.

Joseph McIntyre, of Watchung avenue, gave a delightful piano recital with assisting artists, at the home of Mrs. E. C. Hay, of Newark, Monday afternoon.

The Past Councilors' Association will meet Friday night after the session of Somerset Council, No. 104, Jr. O. U. A. M. A full attendance is desired.

Camden children will have to take their own lunch to school in the future, the Board of Education last night ordering the sale of candy, cake and pretzels in the school yards stopped.

PLAN OF GOLDEN JUBILEE.

Preparations Begun at Elizabethport to Celebrate Founding of St. Patrick's Church.

Elizabeth, Feb. 26.—Preparations have already been begun by the various societies of the church for the celebration on an elaborate scale of the golden jubilee next September of St. Patrick's church, the first Catholic edifice erected at Elizabethport, the corner-stone of which was laid September 25, 1858, by Right Rev. James Roosevelt Bayley, then Bishop of Newark, and afterward archbishop of Baltimore.

The site of the old church was then in the midst of a wilderness, and for some weeks before the corner-stone was laid the pioneer members of the parish worked daily clearing away the dense growth of trees and underbrush.

The first rector was Rev. Michael A. M. Wirzfield. He retired in 1896, and was succeeded by Rev. Patrick Hennessy, who was rector of St. Patrick's about four years, and then resigned. Rev. Father Hennessy was succeeded as rector of St. Patrick's by Rev. Patrick Cody, now rector of St. James' church, Newark, to which parish he went after spending three years at Elizabethport. The fourth and present rector of St. Patrick's is Very Rev. Dean Martin Gessuer, who came from Vineland and assumed charge of the parish in January, 1873. He found the parish heavily in debt, but now, after a pastorate of thirty-five years, the parish has property valued at more than $1,000,000 on which there is but a trifling debt.

Governor Speaks to Hudson Tunnel Celebrants on Necessity for Organized Capital.

GETS OVATION AT SHERRY'S.

Governor Hughes and William G. McAdoo the Other Speakers at Banquet Following Tube Opening.

The dinner at Sherry's in New York last night which marked the wind up of the celebration over the opening of the McAdoo tunnel was attended by 400 invited guests. Governors Hughes and Fort were the guests of honor.

At the guests' table were, in addition to the two Governors, Walter G. Oakman, President of the Hudson Companies; William M. Barnum, Wilbur C. Fisk and Charles J. Fisk, of the banking firm of Harvey Fisk & Sons, which handled the financing of the system; Judge E. H. Gary, Chairman of the United States Steel Corporation; Chief Engineer Charles M. Jacobs, William G. McAdoo, the originator of the enterprise; President Patrick F. McGowan, of the N. Y. Board of Aldermen; Samuel Rea, Vice President of the Pennsylvania Railroad; Charles Steele, of J. P. Morgan & Co., President Underwood, of the Erie, Chairman William C. Willcox, of the Public Service Commission, and others.

Mr. Oakman introduced Governor Fort, and he was heartily cheered. "The next Vice President of the United States," one enthusiast cried out. Many Jersey, led by Senator Frelinghuysen, struck up the well-known campaign hymn:

"Hold the Fort for I am Coming."

Finally Governor Fort got a chance to talk. He had a good word for everybody connected with the enterprise, but was particularly glad that Jersey corporations had contributed so greatly to its financial success.

Governor Fort spoke as follows:

"The events of this day mark an epoch and the beginning of an era.

"The rapid strides of invention, discovery and engineering skill astound even the most thoughtful of us as we contemplate their results on every hand. They contradistinguish our civilization from that of our fathers. They mark the difference between our greatness and that of Greece and Rome. Marshes, valleys, hills, rivers and mountains no longer are impediments to the opening of lines of transportation or to the advance of man on the road of progress. History is not repeating itself in our time. As our fathers in 1787 launched anew into an untried and experimental form of government under a written Constitution, so we are pushing on, under it, along untried and entirely new industrial lines. If we encounter difficulties in our day, we invent a means of over-coming them.

"All steam transportation, all telegraphy, all electric power, all structural steel, are of invention, since our fathers devised the Constitution that made us a republic. We have annihilated space; we have eliminated time as a factor in negotiation; we have brought the handiwork of man to such perfection that the very elements of nature do our bidding.

"When the crowd were told to stand back, by Webster, at the dedication of Bunker Hill monument, they cried, 'We cannot,' and he replied, 'Yes, you can, nothing is impossible on Bunker Hill,' and it seems as if we have reached a time in our day when nothing is impossible in America.

"How inconsequential the aquaducts of the Caesars appear with those of the great cities of our day. How insignificant the hanging gardens of Babylon beside the forty story structure of our time. The cannon of the fathers might have driven a solid shot three hundred yards—the guns of a battleship of our time will throw a projectile thirteen miles. The dispatch rider, with proper relay horses, might have covered 200 miles in twelve hours—we can girdle the earth in thirty minutes.

"Occasions like this are good times to stop and take reckonings. And the first thought that impresses us is that notwithstanding all our greatness as states and nation, our industrial progress is not due to that fact. It is due entirely to private capital and enterprise. The method of employing this capital has been by combination — or stated otherwise through corporate organization. Without corporations these great transportation lines on land and sea could never have existed as private enterprises to any such an extent as we find them today; both at home and abroad. And it is equally clear that the nation or state would never have built them.

"My State is called the mother of corporations. We take no offence at this. We are rather proud of it. We may not be either proud or even pleased with some of the things that some corporations, which were created under our laws, have done, but that was not the fault of our laws but of the management of the men operating under them or in violation of them. Our first act defining the rights and powers of corporations, among which was the right to be perpetual, was passed in 1846 and our next relating to manufacturing companies, and those for inland navigation, was passed in 1849. All these powers with only slight changes have since been united in our later revisions.

"Private enterprise all over the country has developed under New Jersey corporations. Why have they come to our State? You may say because we have had the most liberal laws. I think that is not the reason. Other states have out-bid us in this respect. They found us a conservative state; they found our courts free from any kind of influences; they found our legislatures not given to push 'strike' legislation; they found our people fair toward every honest enterprise and our officials ready to help and not to hinder. What do the results show? We have 11,000 corporations with a united capital of $8,500,000,000. They have 44,000 directors and over a million stockholders.

"During 1907 only 29 of these corporations became bankrupt and but 51 had receivers appointed. During the last five years, not a state bank or trust company has failed or suspended payment; and of the 1045 banking, insurance and local building and loan associations not one has defaulted.

"Do you ask me: Are you contending that your corporation law has not been abused, and does not need amendment? Far from it. It has been misused. It does need amendment. We are now doing it. The point I want to make is this: that taken as a whole, the industrial corporations of the country are sound, and in most instances honestly conducted, and that New Jersey need not be ashamed that we have fathered so many of the enterprises which have produced such splendid results. Take the great corporations which have built and are building the system of tunnels, a part of which we have seen successfully put in operation today. Some of these companies are incorporated with us. No one has questioned their action or what they have done or are proposing to do with the $60,000,000 of expenditure contemplated. Would they have done this without the corporation? It is doubtful. Corporations have come to stay. Those like the tunnel companies which are quasi-public possessing the state's power of eminent domain, must be controlled under reasonable state regulation to see that the citizen shall get just and fair facilities in transportation and that there shall be no discrimination in favor of the one as against another; and, to likewise see that the out-put of capital bears some reasonable relation to the cost of construction and equipment. But that in the main the management and direction of the affairs of the company shall be, and remain, in the board of directors selected by the stockholders who are or should be governed solely by their duty as trustees in the management of the corporate property.

"New Jersey naturally rejoices over the things of this day. Well we may. With present facilities for inter-state transportation, we have out-stripped all the Eastern States in increasing population and, with the new method, our growth cannot be predicted.

"Governor Parker of New Jersey in 1873 said that in less than fifty years from that period there would be more people in New Jersey with a radius of twenty-five miles of the City Hall of the City of New York than there would be upon Manhattan Island. I notice that in a paper sent me by the president of the tunnel's company that he estimates that there are now in New Jersey within a radius of fifteen miles of the tunnel, a million and a half of people. The prophecy of Governor Parker is now true. The number of people who will reside in New Jersey within a radius of twenty-five miles of the City Hall on Manhattan Island in fifty years from now will undoubtedly exceed those who will be found within the Borough of Manhattan and the Borough of Brooklyn.

"The building of these tunnels is a matter of great importance both to New York and to New Jersey. Our interests and the business of our people are so interwoven that everything that touches the greater City of New York affects us most seriously. Our State is to be the home for the people who do business in New York. Manhattan Island is to become, as the years go by, a place for business, amusement, and temporary stay, rather than a place of permanent abode, and the converse of this statement is to be our future in New Jersey, and we are to be the place for the home and the permanent abode.

"Every manner of communication which lessens time and brings us closer together is of the utmost importance to us both.

"On our side of the river the terminals of the future will all be found. No great railway can come to the tide waters of the Hudson or elsewhere within New York; the cost of such action would be too great, hence within the confines of our State along the Hudson and Newark Bay, the Arthur Kill, and the Raritan Bay will be found the future termini of the railways of the country, and from the New Jersey shore the great steamship lines plying, to all parts of the world are to erect their docks and wharves and piers. The business places of all these great enterprises are to be on Manhattan Island and the workshops on the New Jersey shore.

"New York and New Jersey may well congratulate themselves upon this day; upon the partial completion of this great tunnel enterprise; upon the assurance which it and other things like it give to the great future of the two states; upon the certainty of the great wealth and business interests and future prosperity which is to come to us as individuals and as states."

Governor Hughes and William G. McAdoo also spoke.

The Plainfielders at the banquet were Charles J. Fisk, Ernest R. Ackerman, William C. Kinney, Lewis E. Waring, Craig A. Marsh, William G. Besler, A. A. Tilney, Robert F. Tilney and Ralph L. Morrow.

Governor Fort and his entire staff were there, as were the members of the State Senate and other prominent Jerseymen including the McCarter brothers, Phil. Daab, A. L. Dunphy, John Kean, Hamilton F. Kean, Mayors Wittpenn, Wolf and Stein, U. H. McCarter, Thomas N. McCarter, James Smith, Jr., and Robert Davis.

The Governor's party consisted of: Brigadier General R. Heber Brientnall, the Adjutant General; Brigadier General G. Edward Murray, Quartermaster General; Brigadier General John D. McGill, Surgeon General; Brigadier General Joseph W. Congdon, Inspector General; Brigadier General Bird W. Spencer, Inspector General of Rifle Practice; Colonel Austen Colgate, Aide-de-Camp to Commander-in-Chief; Colonel Frederick Gilkyson, Colonel James V. Oliphant, Major General P. GOLDEN EAGLES OBSERVE SEVENTH ANNIVERSARY

In celebration of the seventh anniversary of its organization, Freedom Castle, No. 42, Knights of the Golden Eagle, gave an entertainment in its rooms in the Babcock building for members and their friends, last night. A minstrel performance by the Gold Medal troupe, of this city, was the feature of the program and it was enjoyed by several hundred people.

Arrangements had been made for the reception of Grand Chief Condict, of Asbury Park, and Grand Chief Hall, of Millville, but they were unable to attend. At the opening of the program, welcoming address was made by Grand Sir Herald Horace J. Martin, Sr., in which he outlined the growth of Freedom castle and the aims and objects of the order. It was instituted in what is now the New Plainfield theatre building seven years ago, starting with thirty-six members. At present it has over 200. The castle pays sick and death benefits and since its organization has expended thousands of dollars in this way.

The performance by the minstrel troupe lasted two hours and the first part gave the artists an opportunity to bring in many local quips that earned repeated encores. A special hit was made by Harry Messersmith, a member of the castle, who was rewarded with a handsome bouquet of flowers from friends in the audience. Before and after the show, a ten-piece orchestra in charge of Worthy Bard Hummer rendered catchy selections.

The affair was arranged by a committee from the castle composed of Past Chief Casper Waglow, Past Chief Joseph Randall, Past Chief Edward Schmeyer, Worthy Chamberlain Oliver Ulmer and Past Guardsman Jack Horner. Previous to the anniversary, the officers of the castle were entertained at dinner at the home of Horace J. Martin, Sr., of Duer street.

The surviving members of the Board hereby record their appreciation of the unbroken devotion of their late president to all the varied interests of the schools of this city.

"Resolved, That the members of the Board attend the funeral service, and a copy of this minute be made on the records of the Board as also sent duly engrossed to the family of Dr. Probasco.

Presenting a program of vocal and instrumental music from well known French, German and Italian authors, singers and instrumentalists recognized in local musical circles won the keenest appreciation by their work at the concert at the Park Club last night. Those who took part were John Bland, tenor of Calvary church, New York; H. Raymond Loder, baritone, organist at Holy Cross church; Miss Gertrude Lohrke, soprano, of East Orange; Miss Jessie Gardner, pianist, of New York city; Mrs. George A. Warner, violinist, and J. Edmund Skiff, accompanist, and the affair was under the auspices of the women's guild of Holy Cross church.

The club auditorium was well filled and the audience was most liberal in applause and appreciation of the various numbers of the program. Mr. Bland's singing was especially commended. He sang a series of songs, including Schultz's "Ich Liebe Dich," "L'heure Exquise" (Hahn), "The Winds are Softly Playing" and "Mother o' Mine." He showed wonderful control of volume in his voice, and his singing was marked by that individuality of tone modulation which won him such appreciation at a former appearance in this city. With Mr. Loder in the final number, "Passage Birds' Farewell," he was probably most appreciated.

Miss Lohrke, who sang at Holy Cross church some time ago, had two numbers on the program. There were five songs in all, and she was at her best in clearness and fullness of tone and excellence of voice modulation. Well known for his voice to Plainfielders, Mr. Loder, who is to take solo parts in the rendition of Gaul's "Holy City" at a local church Sunday, was, as usual, well received. His songs were especially suited to his voice and his singing was keenly appreciated. Mrs. George A. Warner, wife of the rector of the church, rendered Miersch's "Love Scene" in the violin. Her playing was heartily applauded, and she responded with an encore.

Miss Jessie Gardner played two piano solos, Chopin's fantasie "Impromptu" and the Liszt Nocturne, "Love's Dream," and J. Edmund Skiff acted as accompanist for the singers. The affair proved a financial as well as a social success, and a neat sum was realized for the church work. The program follows:

Piano solo, "Love's Dream," Nocturne, (Liszt), Miss Gardner; Prologue, "Pagliacci, (Leoncavallo), Mr. Loder; Songs, "Dawn," (d'Hardelot), "Were My Song With Wings Provided (Hahn), "Chanson de Florian," (Godard), Miss Lohrke; Songs, "Mistress Prue,", (Molloy), "L'heure exquise," (Hahn), "Ich dich," (Shultz), Mr. Bland; Fantasie, "Impromptu," (Chopin), Miss Gardner; songs, "Love Me Or Not," 17th century, (Secchi), "Du bist wie eine Blume," (Liszt), "A War Song," (Elgar), Mr. Loder; songs, "The Year's at the Spring," (Beach), "A Memory," (Park), Miss Lohrke; songs, "The Winds Are Softly Playing," (Rabl), "Mother o' Mine," Mr. Bland; violin solo, "Love Scene," (Miersch, Mrs. G. A. Warner; duet, "Passage Birds' Farewell," (Hildach), Mr. Bland and Mr. Loder.

Leonard Joseph Busby.

Leonard Joseph Busby, aged 62 years, a former resident of the borough, and at one time a partner in the flour business with Charles W. McCutchen, of Rockview avenue, died at his home, 135 Central Park West, New York, on Sunday, at which place the funeral service was held last night. Mr. Busby resided on Grove street, where George F. Brown erected a dwelling several years later. He attended the Plainfield public schools and had a large acquaintance here.

Musical for Mt. Zion Church.

Under the auspices and for the benefit of Mt. Zion A. M. E. church, a musical and parlor social was held at the residence of Mrs. S. Laine, 405 Plainfield avenue, last night from 8:30 to 11 o'clock. An excellent program of vocal and instrumental music and recitations was given, after which refreshments were served. Mr. Laine was assisted by a number of women from the church in taking charge of the affair.

Wants Her Trunk Back.

In the city court, this morning, Mrs. Catherine Fields, colored, complained that Mrs. Samuel Webley, white, of East Third street, was illegally holding a trunk filled with clothing, belonging to her. A warrant was made out for Mrs. Webley and the police will see that the affair is straightened out. The woman complained against is the wife of a colored man.

ROSELLE PUTS THE LID ON

Mayor C. W. MacQuoid Will Enforce the Blue Laws of Vintage of 1874.

CUSS WORDS 50 CENTS EACH.

Residents Wont Be Able to Buy Tobacco, Peanuts or Chewing Gum In That Town on Sunday.

Charles W. MacQuoid, senior member of the stock brokerage firm of C. W. MacQuoid & Co., No. 52 Broadway, New York, is the Mayor of Roselle. As a broker, he believes in the enforcement of the law, as it stands on the statute books; and next Sunday he will give an example of how he believes it should be enforced, based on the opinion of N. L. Leavitt, the borough attorney.

John Kenney, chief of the police force of two members, will be the active factor in preventing violations, and in arresting offenders. Exercising his power to the limit, under the act of March 27, 1874, "for suppressing vice and immorality" he may arrest and prosecute any person who indulges in:

"Travelling, worldly employment, ordinary or servile labor, or work either on land or water, on the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday;

"Dancing, singing, fiddling or other music for the sake of merriment;

"Football, fives, long bullets or quoits;

"Crying or shouting merchandise, fruits, herbs, meats or vegetables;

"Driving with merchandise on the public highways, except as a matter of mercy or necessity, or driving public stages with the same object."

Fifty Cents for "Cussing."

The penalty for any of these violations by a person over fourteen years old is $2 for each offense, and should objection be made and profanity follow the offender may be fined 50 cents for each "cuss" word that the officer of the law can remember and record.

But, in addition to this, it is within the power of the Mayor to compel the Central Railroad of New Jersey and the Lehigh Valley Railroad to run only one train each way on Sunday through Roselle and Roselle Park, the pretty little twin home sites that are diveded only by railroad tracks. Mayor MacQuoid does not intend to stop the railroad trains, but outside of that the law will be observed with vigorous severity.

No soda water, ginger pop, gum drops, chewing gum, peanuts, will be sold.

Cigar stores will not be permitted to vend cigars, loose chewing, navy plug, nigger head, or any other kind of eatin' tobacco, and the sale of cigarettes will be stopped entirely. Walking on the streets will be permitted. Vehicles will not be interfered with, unless the occupants become hilarious or disorderly.

As automobiles were unknown in 1874, and as the law has not been amended since that date, any sort of an old chug chug can prance through the roads.

Where a Man Can't Raise a Thirst.

Liquor—well, if peanuts and cream soda are barred, the highball and the fizz will be buried out of sight, and the mere suggestion of such a form of refreshment will result in an immediate raid by the entire police force.

The Italian fruit vender, who has taken pennies in payment from children on Sunday morning, which should have gone to the missionary fund for the heathen, is said to be primarily responsible for the era of reform.

Mayor MacQuoid laughed good naturedly over the general gossip that he intended to prohibit a man and wife from kissing on Sunday.

"We haven't got that far," he said, "and we don't intend to stop railroad trains running; but the intention is to put existing laws into operation for the benefit of the community—and the community demands it."

COOPER IN MORE TROUBLE.

In the Union County Court of Common Pleas yesterday Emie C. Cooper, the negro who last week was convicted of assault and battery on Mrs. Louisa Lang, of Union Township, was arraigned before Judge Atwater to answer an indictment charging him with having obtained on December 21, 1906, $2 under false pretenses from Frank R. Platt, of Westfield. Edward Nugent, on behalf of Cooper, entered a plea of not guilty with the right to later move for a quashing of the indictment. Judge Atwater fixed bail at $200 and set the date of trial for Wednesday, March 4.

Cooper is still in the county jail awaiting sentence for his conviction in the Lang case. He is the head of an industrial school for colored children at Union.

Mt. Tabor Not Exempt.

Justice Swayze holds in an opinion filed yesterday that the judgment of the State Board of Equalization in cancelling an assessment of taxes levied against the Camp Meeting Association of the Newark conference was erroneous, and the original assessment as made by Hanover township should stand.

REACHING THE SPOT.

It Can Be Done, So Scores of Plainfield Citizens Say.

To cure an aching back,
The pains of rheumatism,
The tired-out feelings,
You must reach the spot—get at the cause.
In most cases 'tis the kidneys.
Doan's Kidney Pills are for the kidneys.

Mrs. K. C. Philpott, of 126 Plainfield avenue, Plainfield, N. J., says: "Two years ago I suffered from rheumatism and also a severe backache or pain in the loins. I suppose it was all caused by an excess or uric acid in the blood, but at any rate, the medicines I was taking did not stop the pains. I therefore resorted to the use of Doan's Kidney Pills, and must say, in gratitude, that they gave me complete relief from my rheumatism and backache. I had no occasion to use any medicine for my kidneys since that time, until July, 1905, when I was not feeling just right, and suffering sharp twinges of pain in my back. My daughter got me a box of Doan's Kidney Pills at Randolph's pharmacy, and on using them they relieved me as before. I have often recommended Doan's Kidney Pills to people suffering from backache and rheumatism, and shall continue to do so."

LOCAL OPTION FORCES TO MOVE ON TRENTON

Local option hearing for March 2 at Trenton promises to be a great day for the army of "drys." It has been learned that the Anti-Saloon League's plan will provide star attractions for the day.

Governor J. Frank Hanly, of Indiana, has notified Superintendent Burke that he will present in the afternoon and will speak on behalf of the cause in the evening, and the Taylor Opera House has been secured for the meeting. Special trains are to be run from Jersey City, and possibly from Camden to accommodate the host that is going. Superintendent Burke, of the Anti-Saloon League, says:

"Judging by the interest and demand for the local option bill in the State this year, it will surely be impossible for the legislators to square themselves with public sentiment should they fail to enact the bill into law. With nearly every man come requests for information, speakers, literature, copies for petitions, and news or organization of forces.

"So many have signed a desire to go to Trenton the day of the hearing that we felt that we must arrange for a special train from Jersey City and possibly from Camden. We count ourselves exceedingly fortunate in securing Governor Hanly to address us on that day. The magnificent record he has made as Governor of Indiana; the success he has made in stamping out gambling in French Lick, and in fact throughout the State; his enforcement of excise law without fear or favor, and his leadership in local option legislation, mark him a remarkable chief executive of a great State.

"He will be present at the hearing in the afternoon, and I have no doubt but the committee will be glad to hear from Governor Hanly on the question before them, not only as a Governor of a sister State, but as one who can speak from a wide knowledge and rich experience in this very matter."

PRACTICAL JOKE COSTLY.

Placards Advertising Somerville Resident's Wedding Cause Court to Fine Two Men.

Somerville, Feb. 26.—As a result of attempting a practical joke on Edward Neisner, one of the proprietors of a local store, Jacob Ross and William Brinstein, who gave their address as 56 East Third street, New York, were arrested here Sunday. Ross and Brinstein, according to Neisner, arrived here Sunday afternoon with several hundred placards, which they tacked to trees and poles. The placards announced the coming marriage of Mr. Neisner, and urged that, in view of this, Mr. Neisner was "hard up" for money, and as an act of charity the townsfolk were asked to attend the bargain sale, which was scheduled for yesterday.

Both men were arrested on complaint of Mr. Neisner. When the prisoners were arraigned before Justice of the Peace Kitchen, they told the squire that they had been hired by a New York man, but refused to reveal his name. Mr. Neisner thinks that a relative living in New York knows something about the case. He said that several years ago he played a wedding prank on his relative, and he thought Sunday's alleged joke was the result of it. The court fined the prisoners $3 each, and ordered them sent out of town.

MIDDLESEX ROADS PRAISED.

A tribute to Middlesex county roads is paid in the annual report on the Jersey roads, just issued. Regarding these roads the report says:

"The roads of Middlesex county are in elegant shape, and I wish to congratulate the people upon having the services of so capable a man as their county supervisor. He is very careful and conscientious, and the result shows that he knows how to keep a road in good shape under varying conditions. He has had to contend with different kinds of soil and varying grades, and for the amount of money expended, I consider the roads of Middlesex county to be in splendid condition."

The report shows that under the new automobile law passed two years ago, the State Road Department will have about $82,000 to distribute this year among the different counties as the State's contribution toward road repairs. Middlesex county's share of this fund for last year was $6,015.14. The county has also expended from its own funds $34,857.25 in repairs.

A Difference.

An enterprising gentleman of the breezy west, who superintends the railroad eating house in his town, has recently hung out a sign that furnishes considerable amusement to those who pass by. It reads:

Pies like mother used to make . . . 5c
Pies like mother used to try to make 10c
—Judge.

Co-operation.

Parke—You keep a joint bank account with your wife, don't you?

Lane—I deposit the money and she draws it out.—Harper's Weekly.

A Wail of Despair.

"I call that woman upstairs a regular musical hyena; she just lives on 'The Merry Widow.'"—Fliegende Blatter.

LANGFORD of the THREE BARS

By KATE AND VIRGIL D. BOYLES

(Copyright by A. C. McClurg & Co., 1907.)

Springing from his reeking bronco, he ran quickly to the stable and threw wide the door. Here the boss, the first to gain the outside because already dressed, found him hastily saddling a fresh mount. Langford asked no question. That would come later. He stepped silently to Sadie's stall.

In an incredibly short space of time the rest of the boys came leaping out of the ranchhouse, slamming the door behind them. To be up and doing was the meat they fed on. In less than ten minutes they were all mounted and ready, five of them, silent, full to the brim of reckless hardihood, prime for any adventure that would serve to break the monotony of their lives. More than that, every fiber of their being, when touched, would respond, a tuneful, sounding string of loyalty to the traditions of the Three Bars and to its young master. Each was fully armed. They asked no question. Yet there could be no doubt of a surprise when the time came for action. They were always prepared, these boys of the most popular ranch outfit west of the river. Right in the face of this popularity, perhaps because of it, they were a bit overbearing, these boys, and held fellowship with any outside the Three Bars a thing not to be lightly entered into. It was a fine thing to work for the boss, and out of the content accruing therefrom sprang a conservatism like that of the proudest aristocrat of the land.

Langford took the trail first. Jim had said but the one word, "Williston" It was enough. Nothing was to be heard but the rapid though regular pound of hoof-beats on the level trail. It is a silent country, the cow country, and its gravity begets gravity.

Langford, riding slightly in advance, was having a bad time with himself. The keenest self-reproach was stabbing him like a physical pain. His honor—his good honor, that he held so high and stainless—was his word not given by it that the Willistons might count on his sure protection? What had he done to merit this proud boast? Knowing that Jesse Black was once more at liberty, fully realizing of what vast import to the state would be Williston's testimony when the rustlers should be brought to trial, he had sat stupidly back and done nothing. And he had promised. Would Williston have had the courage without that promise? Why were not some of his cowboys even now sleeping with an eye upon that little claim shack where lived that scholar-man who was not fit for the rough life of the plains, maybe, but who had been brave enough and high-minded enough to lay his all on the white altar of telling what he knew for right's sake. And the girl—

"God! The girl!" he cried aloud.

"What did you say, boss?" asked Jim, pounding alongside.

"Nothing!" said Langford, curtly.

He spurred his mare savagely. In the shock of surpise, and the sting that his neglected word brought him, he had forgotten the girl—Williston's "little girl" with the grave eyes—the girl who was not 10 but 20 and more—the girl who had waited for him, whom he had sent on her long way alone, joyously, as one free of a duty that promised to be irksome—the girl who had brought the blood to his face when, ashamed, he had galloped off to the spring—the girl who had closed her door when a man's curious eyes had roved that way. How could he forget?

The little cavalcade swept on with increased speed, following the lead of the master. Soon the sound of shooting was borne to them distinctly through the quiet night.

"Thank God, boys!" cried Langford, digging in his spurs once more. "They are not surprised! Listen! God! What a plucky fight! If they can only hold out!"

At that moment a tiny tongue of flame leaped up away to the front of them, gleaming in the darkness like a beacon light. Now there were two—they grew, spread, leaped heavenward in mad revel. Langford's heart sank like lead. He groaned in an exceeding bitterness of spirit. The worst had happened. Would they be in time? These claim shanties burn like paper. And the girl! He doubted not that she had sustained her share of the good fight. She had fought like a man, she must die like a man would be the outlaw's reasoning. He believed she would die like a man—if that meant bravely—but something clutched at his heart-strings with the thought. Her big, solemn eyes came back to him now as they had looked when she had lifted them to him gravely as he sat his horse and she had said she had waited for him. Was she waiting now?

The boys rallied to the new impetus victoriously. They knew now what it meant and their hardy hearts thrilled to the excitement of it, and the danger. They swept from the main trail into the dimmer one leading to Williston's, without diminution of speed. Presently, the boss drew rein with a suddenness that would have played havoc with the equilibrium of less seasoned horsemen than cowboys. They followed with the precision and accord of trained cavalrymen. Now and then could be seen a black, sinister figure patrolling the burning homestead, but hugging closely the outer skirt of darkness, waiting for the doomed door to open.

"Boys!" began Langford. But he never gave the intended command to charge at once with wild shouting and shooting to frighten away the marauders and give warning to the besieged that rescue was at hand. For at that moment the door opened and Williston and his daughter stepped out in full view of raider and rescuer. Would there be parley? A man, slouching in his saddle, rode up into the circle of lurid light. Was it Jesse Black? There was something hauntingly familiar about the droop of the shoulders. That was all; hardly enough to hang a man.

Langford raised his rifle quickly. His nerves were perfectly steady. His sight was never truer. His bullet went straight to the rifle arm of the outlaw; with a ringing shout he rallied his comrades, spurred his pony forward, and the little party charged the astounded raiders with a fury of shots that made each rustler stand well to his own support, leaving the Williston's, for the time being, free from their attention.

The desperadoes were on the run. They cared to take no risk of identification. It was not easy to determine how many there were. There seemed a half-dozen or more, but probably four or five at the most would tell their number.

The flames were sinking. Williston had disappeared. The boys scattered in wild pursuit. Wheeling his horse, Langford was in time to see a big, muscular fellow swing a girlish form to the saddle in front of him. Quick as a flash he spurred forward, lifted his heavy Colt's revolver high over his head and brought it down on the fellow's skull with a force that knocked him senseless without time for a sigh or moan. As his arms fell lax and he toppled in his saddle, Langford caught the girl and swung her free of entanglement.

"Poor little girl," he breathed over her as her white face dropped with unconscious pathos against his big shoulder. "Poor little girl—I'm sorry—I didn't mean to—honest—I'm sorry." He chafed her hands gently. "And I don't know where your father is, either. Are you hurt anywhere, or have you only fainted? God knows I don't wonder. It was hellish. Why, child, child, your arm! It is broken! Oh, little girl, I didn't mean to—honest—honest. I'm sorry."

Jim rode up panting, eyes bloodshot.

"We can't find him, boss. They've carried him off, dead or alive."

"Is it so, Jim? Are you sure? How far did you follow?"

"We must have followed the wrong lead. If any one was ridin' double, it wasn't the ones we were after, that's one thing sure. The blamed hoss thieves pulled clean away from us. Our hosses were plumb winded anyway. And—there's a deader out there, boss," lowering his voice; "I found him as I came back."

"That explains why no one was riding double," said Langford, thoughtfully.

"How's the gal, boss?"

"I don't know, Jim. I—don't know what to do now."

His eyes were full of trouble.

"Ain't no use cryin' over spilt milk and that's a fac'. 'Bout as sensible as a tryin' to pick it up after it is spilt. We won't find Williston this here night, that's one thing sure. So we'll just tote the little gal home to the Three Bars with us."

The boys were returning, silent, gloomy, disconsolate. They eyed the boss tentatively. Would they receive praise or censure? They had worked hard.

"You're all right, boys," said Langford, smiling away their gloom. "But about the girl. There is no woman at the Three Bars, you know——"

"So you'd leave her out all night to the dew and the coyotes and the hoss thieves, would you," interrupted Jim, with a fine sarcasm, "jest because there ain't no growed-up woman at the Three Bars? What d'ye think Williston's little gal'd care for style? She ain't afraid o' us ol' grizzled fellers. I hope to the Lord there won't never be no growed-up woman at the Three Bars—yep, that's what I hope. I think that mouse-haired gal reporter 'd be just turrible fussy, and I think she's a goin' to marry a down easterner chap, anyway."

"Just pick up that fellow, will you, boys, and strap him to his horse, and we'll take him along," said Langford. "I don't believe he's dead."

"What fellow?" asked the Scribe, peering casually about.

Langford had unconsciously ridden forward a bit to meet the boys as they had clattered up shamefacedly. Now he turned.

"Why, that fellow over there. I knocked him out."

He rode back slowly. There was no man there, no the trace of a man. They stared at each other a moment, silently. Then Langford spoke.

"No, I am not going to leave Williston's little girl out in the dew," he said, with an inscrutable smile. "While some of you ride in to get some one to see about that body out there and bring out the doctor, I'll take her over to White's for to-night, anyway. Mrs. White will care for her. Then perhaps we will send for the 'gal reporter,' Jim."

and little smile. "It is good of you to come so soon," she said, simply.

She had begged so earnestly to sit up that Mrs. White had improvised an invalid's chair out of a huge old rocker and a cracker box. It did very well. Then she had partially clothed the girl in a skimpy wrapper of the sort Langford nominated, throwing a man's silk handkerchief where the wrapper failed to meet, and around the injured arm. Mrs. White had then recalled her husband from the stables where he was on the point of mounting to join the relief party that was to set off in search of Williston at 10 o'clock. The starting point unanimously agreed upon was to be the pitiful remnants of Williston's home. Men shook their heads dubiously whenever the question of a possible leading trail was broached. The soil was hard and dry from an almost rainless July and August. The fugitives might strike across country anywhere with meager chances of their trail being traced by any.

Mrs. White and her husband, kindly souls both, lifted the girl as gently as might be from the bed to the rudely contsructed invalid's chair by the sitting-room window. Then they left her—the woman to putter around her kitchen, the man to make good his appointment. But the exertion had been to much for Mary. She had counted on strength that she did not posses. Where had she lost it? she wondered, lacking comprehension of her exceeding weakness. To be sure, her arm alternately ached and smarted, but one's arm was really such a small part of one, and she had been so strong always. She tried to shake off the faintness creeping over her. It was effort thrown away. She lay back on her pillow, very white and worn, her pretty hair tangled and loosened from its coils.

Paul came. He was dusty and travel-stained. He had been almost continuously in his saddle since near midnight of the night before. He was here, big, strong and worthy. Mary did not cry, but she remembered how she had wanted to a few hours ago and she wondered that she could not now. Strangely enough, it was Paul who wanted to cry now—but he didn't. He only swallowed hard and held her poor hand with all gentleness, afraid to let go lest he also let go his mastery over the almost insurmountable lump in his throat.

"I tried to come sooner," he said, huskily, at last, releasing her hand and standing before her. "But I've been riding all over—for men, you know—and I had a talk with Gordon, too. It took time. He is coming out to see you this afternoon. He is coming with doc. Don't you think you had better go back to bed now? You are so—so white. Let me carry you back to bed before I go."

"Are you going, too?" asked Mary, looking at him with wide eyes of gratitude.

"Surely," he responded, quickly. "Did you think I wouldn't?"

"I—I didn't know. I thought—there were a lot going—there would be enough without you. But—I am glad. If you go, it will be all right. You will find him if any one can."

"Won't you let me carry you back to bed till doc comes?" said Langford, brokenly.

"I could not bear it in bed," she said, clearly. Her brown eyes were beginning to shine with fever, and red spots had broken out in her pale cheeks. "If you make me go, I shall die. I hear it all the time when I am lying down—galloping, galloping, galloping. They never stop. They always begin all over again."

"What galloping, little girl?" asked Langford, soothingly. He saw she was becoming delirous. If doc and Dick would only come before he had to go. But they were not coming until after dinner. He gazed down the dusty road. They would wait for him, the others. He was their leader by the natural-born right of push and energy, as well as by his having been the sole participant with his own cowboys, in the last night's tragedy. But would he do well to keep them waiting? They had already delayed too long. And yet how could he leave Williston's little girl like this—even to find Williston?

"They are carrying my father away," she said, with startling distinctness. "Don't you hear them? If you would listen, you could hear them. Do listen. They are getting faint now—you can hardly hear them. They are fainter—fainter—fainter——"

She had raised her head. There was an alert look on her face. She leaned slightly toward the window.

"Good God! A man can't stand everything!" cried Langford, hoarsely. He tore the knotted handkerchief from his throat. It was as if he was choking. Then he put his cool, strong hand to her burning forehead and gently smoothed back the rough hair. Gradually, the fixed look of an indescribable horror passed away from her face. The strained, hard eyes softened, became dewy. She looked at him, a clinging helplessness in her eyes, but sweet and sane.

"Don't you worry, child," he said comfortingly. "They can't help finding him. Twenty men with the sheriff start on the trail. There'll be 50 before night. They can't help finding him. I'm going to stay right here with you till doc comes. I'll catch up with them before they've gone far. I'll send word to the boys not to wait. Must be somebody around the house, I reckon, besides the old lady."

He started cheerily for the door.

"Mr. Langford!"

"Yes?"

"Please come back."

He came quickly to her.

"What is it?"

"Mr. Langford, will you grant me a favor?"

"Certainly, Miss Mary. Anything in this world that I can do for you I will do. You know that, don't you?"

"I am all right now. I don't think I shall get crazy again if you will let me sit here by this window and look out. If I can watch for him, it will give me something to do. You see, I could be watching all the time for the party to come back over that little rise up the road. I want you to promise me," she went on, steadily, "that I may sit here and wait for you—to come back."

"God knows you may, little girl, anyway till doc comes."

"You are wiser than doc," pursued the girl. "He is a good fellow, but foolish, you know, sometimes. He might not understand. He might like to use authority over me because I am his patient—when he did not understand. Promise that I may sit till you come back."

"I do promise, little girl. Tell him I said so. Tell him——"

"I will tell him you are—the boss," she said, with a pitiful little attempt at a jest, and smiling wanly. "He will mind—the boss."

Langford was in agony. Perspiration was springing out on his forehead though August was wearing away peacefully in soft coolness with drifting depths of white cloud as a lounging-robe—a blessed reprieve from the blazing sun of the long weeks which had gone before.

"I'll Have to Ride Like Kingdom Come."

"And then I want you to promise me," went on Mary, quietly, "that you will not think any more of staying behind. I could not bear that. I trust you to go. You will, won't you?"

"Yes, I will go. I will do anything you say. And I want you to believe that every thing will be all right. They would not dare to kill him now, knowing that we are after them. If we are not back to-night, you will not worry, will you? They had so much the start of us."

"I will try not to worry."

"Well, good-bye. Be a good girl, won't you?"

"I will try," she answered, wearily. With a last look into the brave, sweet face, and smothering a mad, uncowman-like desire to stay and comfort this dear little woman while others rode away in stirring quest, Langford strode from the sick-room into the kitchen.

The attention of renters of Safe Deposit Boxes in New York is called to the fact that New York State levies a tax on the contents of the Safe Deposit box of a non-resident at his or her death, which tax may, of course, be avoided by keeping one's valuables in the same state in which one resides. It is, therefore, greatly to the advantage of a resident of New Jersey to keep personal property in a Safe Deposit vault within the state.

FORM BOARD OF TRADE TO BOOM BERGEN COUNTY

Two dozen real estate dealers of Bergen county, stirred to action by the opening of the McAdoo tunnel in the adjoining county, and realizing the importance this improvement means to their district, met in the Hackensack office of the North Jersey Title Guarantee Company, at Hackensack, yesterday afternoon, and formed the Bergen County Board of Trade. These officers were elected: President, Surrogate David A. Pell; vice-presidents, Frank E. Knox, of Grantwood; James A. Romeyn, of Hackensack; Asabel Chapin, of Oradell; Freeholders A. E. Sage, of Englewood Cliffs; Leonard H. Wood, of Dumont; corresponding secretary, William H. Zabriskie, of Hackensack; financial secretary, J. A. Karet, of Hackensack; treasurer, Freeholder Walter Christie, of Bergen Fields; executive committee, Herman Walker, of Guttenburg; Wm. R. Squire, of Ridgefield Park; F. B. Ross, of Hackensack; A. H. Walton, of Allendale; William O. Grantz, of Leonia; A. Z. Bogert, of Riveredge; A. E. Neumann, of Cliffside; E. D. Paulin, of Leonia; E. P. Hinners, of Edgewater.

It was the general opinion that anywhere from $10,000 to $20,000 should be subscribed to advertise Bergen county, "in order to let the people of New York and other nearby cities know of the many advantages and beauties of the picturesque region for suburban homes." The executive committee will meet in a few days to determine upon a plan of campaign.

"NEW IDEA" REPUBLICANS WAR ON REGULARS

Declaring that their movement embraces at least nine counties of the State, the "new idea" Republicans, who have been holding meetings in Senator Colby's office, in Newark, with a view to rehabilitating the "new idea" forces throughout the State, will meet there tomorrow afternoon to elect officers and make other plans for carrying on the campaign.

It has been decided to continue the title of Republican State League for Limited Franchises and Equal Taxation. Subsidiary organizations will be formed in each of the nine counties in which it is believed there is a pronounced sentiment in favor of this movement. At the meeting tomorrow afternoon there will be adopted a set of principles which practically will be, it is said, a declaration of war against those who are at present at the head of the Republican party in the State. At the last conference it was suggested that a dollar dinner be given to start and advertise the movement, and this suggestion met with favor, a committee being appointed to report at the meeting tomorrow, when a date will be set. It is likely that this dinner will be held in Newark.

The plan of the "new idea" faction has caused uneasiness among the regulars, who were in hopes that they had heard the last of the factional strife in the party. That the "new idea" element is not pleased with the way things have been going since Governor Fort took office has been made plain at various club meetings in the last few weeks. At the meeting of the Palisade Republican Club in Jersey City, Monday night, there was another outbreak, James Crockett, one of the leading members of the club, denouncing Governor Fort.

"We were led to believe that the 'new idea' party would receive considerable patronage from Governor Fort," said he. "We don't get the patronage; instead, we were handed a lemon. George L. Record was handed the biggest lemon of all, and it was an unusually sour one, too. It was thought that he would get some sort of an appointment, but he didn't. So far as I am concerned, I am much disappointed in Governor Fort."

Andrew Knox, Street and Water Commissioner, replied that Mr. Crockett had judged Governor Fort too hastily. "I am confident that he will make good," he added.

ROBBED AND FIRED FLAT.

But for the Barking of a Dog Lives May Have Been Lost.

Fire started by burglars early yesterday caused $4,000 damage in the tenement house at 442 and 444 East 121st street, New York, and drove twenty families in panic to the street. The fire originated in the apartments of Jacob Rosenbloom on the fourth floor. Robenbloom's clothes and $107 in cash were stolen.

But for the barking of a dog which aroused some of the inmates, lives might have been lost in the fire.

Miss Elsa Cook Surprised.

Miss Elsa Mae Cook was pleasantly surprised by fifteen of her friends at her home on Summit avenue last night. The affair was arranged by her sister, Miss Anna Cook and Miss Hope I. Miller, and the arrival of the company was entirely unexpected. The evening was passed with dancing, music and games, and refreshments were served before the party broke up.

Funeral of Alexander Walter, Jr.

The funeral of Alexander Walter, Jr., was held this morning at Cole' undertaking rooms. It was conducted by Rev. J. W. Musson and was attended by gathering of relatives and friends. Burial was made in the Plainfield avenue cemetery.

Repair Men Made Taps.

The repairing of the North Plainfield fire bell, which did not sound for the Barry fire yesterday morning, caused several taps to be sounded at shortly after 9 o'clock last night. The bell is now in commission again.

Library Bill Passes.

The bill introduced by State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, relating to State Free Employment Bureaus, was passed in the Upper House of the Legislature, this morning, and will be sent to the Assembly at once.

HONOR EDWARDS TONIGHT

"The Heir to the Hocrah" to be Produced as a Testimonial to the Genial Major.

AT NEW PLAINFIELD THEATRE.

Some Choice Seats May Still Be Had for the High Class Theatrical Offering Arranged by His Friends.

With an unusually large advance sale already recorded and the prospects for a capacity audience, the testimonial to Major Maze Edwards takes place at the New Plainfield theatre tonight. The committee entrusted with the preliminary work has acquitted itself with credit and nothing has been left undone that might add to the success of the affair. It was thought that the genial major might be able to attend but his condition at the present time makes it unwise to contemplate the trip to and from Atlantic City. The boxes have all been subscribed for by his friends and many notables will occupy the seats.

Paul Armstrong's delightful play, "The Heir to the Hoorah," was selected as the attraction for the occasion and it will undoubtedly prove entirely satisfactory. The company closed a successful engagement in Philadelphia last Saturday and comes to Plainfield from Trenton where it appeared before an enthusiastic audience last night. The play was seen here last season and was talked about for many weeks afterward. It is filled with delightful humor and pathetic interludes and tells a story absorbing interest. Frank Monroe, formerly the star of "The Earl of Pawtucket," and Miss Helene Lackaye, sister of Wilton and James Lackaye, head the big cast.

There are still many choice seats to be had but further reservations should be made as soon as possible.

HIGH OR GRAMMER SCHOOL FIGHT DIVIDES BAYONNE

Residents in the Bergen Point section of Bayonne are much worked up over the proposal of the Republican members of the Board of Education to erect a new high school, while 1,300 children are obliged to attend the primary and grammar schools on half day sessions or else are unable to get any accommodations because of a lack of room. There was talk yesterday of calling a mass meeting to protest against the building of a high school for three hundred children while so many are out of school or receiving only half tuition.

At the next meeting of the Council a resolution, introduced by Dr. Lucius F. Donohue, a Democratic member of the Board of Education, asking for an appropriation of $150,000 to build an elementary school will come up for action, and it is rumored that it may not receive favorable consideration. Dr. Donohoe's plan is to erect the school on the site owned by the city in West Tenth street, between Avenue C and the Boulevard, in a district where many additional school accommodations are greatly needed. The Board of Education of last year contemplated building a $160,000 school on this site, and the committee adopted plans, but Mayor Garvan vetoed the ordinance providing for a sale of bonds. Then the Board became Republican and the plan was abandoned after the project had been taken to the courts on application of Park Commissioner E. P. Reichheim, a Republican, who contended that the Board could not go ahead, as the appropriation had not been granted. The proposed new high school plan will come up for discussion at the next meeting of the Board and lively times are expected.

SAVED BODY FROM FLAMES.

The body of Mrs. John Gardiner, who died Monday evening, was barely saved from being burned in a fire that partly destroyed her home, at No. 262 Second street, Elizabeth. The body was carried to the home of Mrs. Maria Smith, at 208 Clark place, by neighbors summoned by the screams of the occupants of the burning structure.

Mrs. Gardiner died just two hours before the fire was discovered. The undertaker had left the house a few minutes before, after embalming the body.

The blaze originated in a part of the house occupied by Richard Dowdell. Left alone in one of the rooms, one of Mr. Dowdell's children upset an oil lamp which exploded.

Aged Newspaper Man to Quit Work.

Elizabeth, Feb. 26.—Edward Kirk Drake, of this city, after spending forty-five years as a printer, compositor and newspaper worker, is now preparing to retire at an early date from active newspaper work. The death of Mrs. Sarah Aumack, his sister-in-law, at Louis River several weeks ago, has been a turning point in Drake's career, as in her will she bequeathed $20,000 to her sister Bella, who is Mr. Drake's wife.

OBITUARY.

Garrett T. Garretson.

Garrett T. Garretson, father of Mrs. T. R. Van Zandt, of Madison avenue, died at his home in East Millstone, Sunday night, following a stroke of paralysis. For over forty years he conducted an old-fashioned country store at East Millstone. He was eighty-four years old and was born at Bound Brook. He was married twice, his wives being the Misses Voorhees, sisters of Isaac Voorhees, of Franklin Park. He is survived by a wife and four children, two daughters and two sons. A curious coincidence is that his son-in-law, T. R. Van Zandt, married twice and both wives were daughters of Mr. Garretson. Mr. Garretson was one of the first commissioners of Franklin Township.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. George H. Robbins, of Norwood avenue, has gone to New Hampshire to visit friends.

GIVES RELATIVES MILLION

Mrs. Weightman Walker, Heir to $60,000,000, Shares with Kins on Eve of Wedding.

MRS. A. H. WEIGHTMAN ONE.

Husband of a Plainfielder Is Among Beneficiaries of a $600,000 Trust Fund Wealthy Bride Creates.

Mrs. Anne M. Weightman Walker, daughter of the late William Weightman, the multi-millionaire chemist, of Philadelphia, and one of the richest women in that city, was married in St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York, yesterday morning to Frederic Courtland Penfield, diplomat, yachtsman and clubman.

The ceremony was attended by Aubrey H. Weightman, Mrs. Walker's nephew; her niece, Mrs. Richard Wain Meirs, and Mr. Meirs, all of Philadelphia.

Five hours later it was announced that, just before the wedding, Mrs. Walker had given away $1,000,000. One of her beneficiaries is Aubrey H. Weightman, whose wedding to Miss Fanny Cox took place four years ago at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Rowland Cox, in West Seventh street, this city.

Sole heir to the $60,000,000 left by her father, whose only surviving child she is, Mrs. Walker, according to a statement issued through her counsel, ex-Attorney General Hampton L. Carson, in disposing of this sum, gives $200,000 to seven institutions. But of the $800,000 remaining, $600,000 is set aside as a trust fund for her nephew and five nieces and $200,000 as a similar fund for her four great-nephews and great-nieces.

Of these beneficiaries, all save one in the first group are Philadelphians. They are:

Aubrey H. Weightman, nephew, 1915 Walnut street, Philadelphia.

Bertha W. Norton, niece, wife of Nathaniel Ried Norton, of New York.

Mrs. Anne W. Weightman Meirs, niece, wife of Richard Waln Meirs, 1724 Walnut street, Philadelphia.

Louisa S. Weightman Strawbridge, niece, wife of John Strawbridge, 647 Westview avenue, Germantown, Philadelphia.

Ethel d'I. Weightman, niece, daughter of Mrs. Jones Wister, by her first husband, Mrs. Walker's brother, living with Mrs. Wister at 1819 Walnut street, Philadelphia.

Martha Rogers Weightman, niece, sister of the above and resident at the same address.

The great-nephews and great-nieces, for whom the trust fund of $200,000 is created, are William Weightman Ferris and his sisters, Marie L. and Emma G., the last three being the children of the late Mary Weightman Ferris, wife of William Ferris, of Wilmington, Del.

By this provision Mrs. Penfield, as she now is, gives the income of a large amount of money to the children of her brother, whose widow, the present Mrs. Jones Wister, endeavored, three years ago, in the interest of those children, to break the will of her former father-in-law, under which the then Mrs. Walker inherited the Weightman fortune.

That suit, with eminent lawyers representing both sides, attracted much attention at its beginning, and even more at its end, for the proceedings were scarcely begun in court than they were suddenly discontinued by the sensational production of a bit of paper, covered with the late William Weightman's handwriting.

It was never even offered in evidence, and its mere presentation was the signal for their abandonment of the case. Concerning the contents of the paper, all persons interested have since kept scrupulous silence.

Memorial to Dr. J. B. Probasco.

Last evening at the regular midweek prayer-meeting of the First Baptist church, about one hundred and fifty persons being present, the whole service was affected by the death of Dr. John B. Probasco. Several speakers made tender and appreciative reference to "the beloved physician," and a memorial offered by O. B. Leonard, church clerk, was adopted by a rising vote.

Spencer P. Kelley a Benedict.

Miss Frances B. Hardy and Spencer P. Kelley, both of this city, were married at the Mt. Zion A. M. E. church parsonage last night by the pastor, Rev. J. T. Diggs. The couple was attended by Miss Pearl Miller and C. E. Jefferson, of this city. Mr. and Mrs. Kelley will reside on Madison avenue, where the groom conducts a barber shop.

Clarence Drake Returns to Work.

Clarence Drake, of Grant avenue, ticket agent at the Grant Avenue station of the New Jersey Central, who was arrested on a charge of shooting Louis Mulford and later released in $500 bail, has returned to his position, awaiting the result of Mulford's injuries and a hearing.

CIVIL SERVICE HISTORY

Mr. Ackerman Reviews Facts Concerning Legislation in Advocating His Measure.

IN NEW JERSEY EFFECTS 1,600.

United States Government Adopted Civil Service Regulations in 1883—New York Also In Same Year.

A comprehensive review of civil service legislation in this country was given yesterday by State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, of this county, in the course of a speech in the Upper House at Trenton before the passage of his model civil service bill for New Jersey:

"Civil service regulations were adopted by the United States Government in 1883. Both houses of Congress were Republican at the time the bill was introduced by Senator Pendelton, a Democrat of Ohio, and the measure passed each house by a large majority, receiving the approval of President Arthur.

"At present there are 196,918 positions in the competitive classified civil service and of these 23,820 are located in Washington and 173,098 throughout the country. The annual compensation of these employes aggregates between $175,000,000 and $200,000,000.

"New York in 1883 incorporated the merit and fitness standard in its State Constitution applying to all civil divisions, including cities and villages—the first section of the bill under consideration follows very closely the provision of the New York Constitution.

"Massachusetts adopted civil service in 1884, Wisconsin in 1905, Illinois in 1905, Colorado in 1907.

"These States have a population of about 20,000,000 or one fifth of the population of the country.

"The civil service laws have worked satisfactorily to such an extent that no effort has been made to repeal them. They have been economical in operation and a striking illustration of this may be found in the administration of the Chicago Water Department. Local civil service was applied to Chicago in 1893. The total receipts for that year were $2,800,000, expenses $295,000, or 10½ per cent. At present the receipts are $4,000,000, expenses $260,000, or 6½ per cent. with the result of a saving of 4 per cent.

"There are 1,600 positions in the New Jersey State service which will be effected by this bill. The total expenses of the commission must not exceed $30,000 annually or between 1 and 2 per cent. of the gross salary list. As the commission must audit all pay rolls the chances are that the commission may soon be self-supporting, viewing the subject from the standpoint of efficiency and economy.

"Governor Hughes, of New York, in a recent speech at Buffalo said in referring to the civil service provision in the New York Constitution that he regarded that article as second only to the 'Bill of Rights' in safe-guarding the interests of the people.

"In conclusion, and while paying tribute to the honor and ability of those at present in the state's service, I think it it proper to say that everyone who helps in the effort to carry the colors of civil service reform further up the breastworks of the entrenched feudal or so-called spoils system, will have performed a service not surpassed in excellence by any other act during his legislative career.

"Let the note sound clear and harmonious that New Jersey ranks among the leaders in the fight for the principle that ability and faithfulness are to be rewarded and that merit and fitness are to be the standards for all time in the public service to the great advantage of the tax-payers and citizens of New Jersey. I predict that ere long every state in the Union not yet under the provisions of civil service will adopt the merit system."

RAILROAD WASHOUT.

Flood Causes Serious Block on the Lehigh & Hudson.

The heavy rainstorm of yesterday caused a serious break in the Lehigh & Hudson Railroad on the outskirts of Belvidere. Bulgin's brook, usually a sleepy stream, became greatly swollen in a few hours and cut a channel clean through the railroad embankment. A track walker discovered the washout in time to signal the 4 o'clock eastbound passenger train and prevent an accident. All trains were at once halted and a big force of men was sent for to make repairs.

YOUNG WOMAN A HEROINE

Removed an Undergarment to Provide Bandages for an Injured Man.

STOPPED THE FLOW OF BLOOD.

Edward Britton, the Victim, Attempted to Board o Moving Freight Train and Was Hurled to Station Platform.

In danger of bleeding to death after he had been badly injured in attempting to board a freight train at the North avenue station shortly before 7 o'clock last night, Edward Britton, of Orange place, received material assistance by the ready perception of a young woman witnessing the accident. Britton was hurled to the platform of the station and when picked up his scalp was badly torn and blood was flowing from ugly cuts on his forehead and body. It was apparent that prompt measures were needed to prevent his weakening from the after effects but the volunteers ready to give "first aid" were unable to secure bandages.

Miss Nora Donavan, of West Front street, was included in the crowd waiting at the station for a train and she quickly conceived a plan to help prevent the flow of blood. She withdrew to the women's retiring room in the depot and removed a linen underskirt, returning with it to the group about the injured man. It was quickly ripped to pieces by Patrolman John Kelley and by the time Dr. Lufburrow arrived in response to a call, bandages had been applied. The young woman was warmly complimented for her action.

Britton went to the station in company with another young man to see the latter away and while waiting for the train and eastbound freight came along. More in a spirit of fun than anything else he attempted to board it but it was going too fast and he was thrown. It was thought at first that he was under the wheels of a car and several women all but fainted. He was picked up by Kelley who took him into the main waiting room of the station.

After Dr. Lufburrow had given temporary treatment, the injured man was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital and it was said today that his condition is not serious. The scalp wounds are very severe and with other cuts and bruises he will be kept at the institution for several weeks. He is married and is well known as one of the city's best bowlers.

HAURAND'S PUZZLE IS HIS NEW BUILDING

Thwarted in his plans to open a saloon on East Front street by failing to secure a retail liquor license, Henry Haurand has not yet decided what he will do with the East Front street building, formerly police headquarters, which he purchased. Believing that he would have no difficulty in obtaining a license for the new place he had already purchased bar fixtures and equipment, which would have made the place one of the best fitted up cafes in this section.

Plans for the remodelling of the building have been made and the work on some improvements will be begun next week. The front of the building on the first floor will be extensively altered and the cost of the repairs will be about $7,000. In discussing his plans for the use of the building with a reporter for The Daily Press today, Mr. Haurand said that he had already received offers for the sale of the premises, and hinted that he would be willing to dispose of it at cost price. If he does not sell, he stated that he would probably conduct a business in the store, placing his brother in charge. The liquor dealer has already made expensive repairs to the roof and upper rooms of the building.

Arthur L. Titsworth Surprised.

In honor of the anniversary of his birthday, a few intimate friends gave Arthur L. Titsworth a surprise party at his home on West Fifth street, Tuesday night. The evening was spent informally, a program of vocal and instrumental music being enjoyed.

Belmont Comes Down.

August Belmont yesterday offered to sell his East River tunnel to the city of New York for $6,000,000. Recently he offered it for $8,000,000, and last week dropped to $7,000,000.

Plainfielders Who Cashed W. Fordham Morgan's Paper Lose by the Transaction.

THEY ASK CHIEF KIELY'S AID.

Hotel Man, Physician and Others Seek to Learn What Has Become of Man Who Has Left Town.

Chief of Police Kiely has been requested by several Plainfielders to institute a search for a man who spent three weeks here and was known as W. Fordham Morgan. He negotiated several checks and those who furnished the cash have had the checks returned stamped "no good." Among those who are out by the operation is a prominent physician, who cashed a check for $27.50. It was dated New York, and was drawn on the Fifth Avenue National Bank, payable to the order of W. F. Morgan, and was signed George C. Benson.

Henry Windham, proprietor of the Hotel Waldorf, cashed a check for Mr. Morgan for $20, and this also has been returned. It is said that a First National Bank counter check, made out for $18.75 and endorsed by a man of the name of Rosenthal, was received at the local bank, where there were no funds to meet it. A number of other checks, it is said, have also been negotiated by Mr. Morgan with the same result.

Shortly after Mr. Morgan came to Plainfield he announced himself as a representative of a Philadelphia publication called "Golf in America," and that he came here for the purpose of obtaining material and pictures for a write up of the Plainfield Country Club, which was to appear in his magazine about March 10. It is known that he collected many facts about the local golf club and also obtained several photographs, including those of the clubhouse, grounds and one of "Marty" O'Loughlin, the professional. It is said that in connection with his work of writing a special story he sought advertisements of local merchants which were to appear in "Golf of America" with the story. Whether he collected any money for the advertisements in advance is not known.

Inquiry was made today at Truell Court, where Mr. Morgan stopped while in town and the manager there said that she had no complaints to make about the stranger. Before leaving town on Saturday he paid his board bill in full in cash.

One of the Plainfielders who was caught by Mr. Morgan's checks, said today that he did not know whether the latter purposely intended to work off a lot of bad checks or whether he was in financial straights and would "make god" as soon as he got some cash.

It is not known whether Mr. Morgan returned to Philadelphia or not, but Chief Kiely will at once begin an investigation with a view to ascertaining the whereabouts of the stranger that the claims of the Plainfielders who cashed his checks may be satisfied.

COLLEGE MEN'S SMOKER AT CASINO, MARCH 13

At the urgent request of the college men of Plainfield, it has been decided to hold another college smoker at the Casino on Friday night, March 13, and Owen H. Fleming, of Park aenue, who has been the moving spirit in previous affairs of this kind, has again consented to act as chairman of the committee. Efforts will be made to obtain prominent speakers and there will be plenty of good music, with an abundance of things to eat, drink and smoke, as heretofore.

Lewis A. Williams, of East Ninth street, who is secretary of the Plainfield Yale Club, is assisting Mr. Fleming in the preliminary arrangements. Later the complete committee will be announced. It is proposed to carry the smoker out along the same lines as in the past and this will insure a good time for those who attend. All replies should be sent to Mr. Fleming or Mr. Williams.

Mayor Townsend After Trolley People

The settling of the trolley tracks on Somerset street, midway between the bridge and Pearl street, has caused great quantities of standing water to collect between the rails, throwing showers of spray when the trolleys pass. Mayor Samuel Townsend will take up the matter with the P. S. C. with a view of requesting them to install a catch basin at the point, between the rails.

Miss Addie Weaver, of Brooklyn, is visiting her father, Deputy Sheriff Peter V. Weaver, of the New Madison.

MRS. RUNYON'S FUNERAL

Judge Nelson Runyon's Wife, Who Died Yesterday, to be Buried Saturday.

MOTHER OF WM. N. RUNYON.

Woman Whose Life Was Devoted to Religion and Charity Work Passed Away In Her Fifty-seventh Year.

The funeral services of Mrs. Wilhelmina F. Runyon, wife of former Judge Nelson Runyon and mother of Judge William N. Runyon and Carroll T. Runyon, whose death occurred suddenly at noon yesterday, will be held from the late home on East Ninth street, Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Rev. A. E. Finn, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, will officiate and the burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

The death of Mrs. Runyon was a great shock to her many friends, although her condition was known to be serious. Her illness began the latter part of last July and except for a few weeks that she and her husband spent at Asbury Park last September she had been confined to her home since that time. During the past few weeks she failed rapidly.

Mrs. Runyon was fifty-seven years of age and was the daughter of William Trow, who was prominently connected with the family of that name for a great many years publishers of the Trow Directory. She was born in Brooklyn and spent her girlhood in that city. Following her marriage she and Mr. Runyon made their home here, where the latter was born and always lived.

Mrs. Runyon was especially active as a member of the Park Avenue Baptist church. She was a teacher in the Sunday-school and was identified with the foreign and home missionary societies, taking a prominent part in their meetings and always rendering every assistance possible to advance the cause of religion. She possessed exceptional musical talent and she was always willing and ready to assist in the musical parts of services held at the church. She was a woman of rare qualities and was greatly devoted to her home and family, believing her first duty to be there. She will be greatly missed both in the church of which she was a member for so many years and in her home.

COUNSELLOR BLATZ JOINS RANKS OF BENEDICTS

Miss Jeanette Claire Summers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Summers, of Orchard place, became the wife of Francis J. Blatz, of Somerset street, at a quiet wedding yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock. The ceremony was performed at St. Mary's church by Father B. M. Bogan, rector of the church. The couple were attended by Dr. A. H. Dundon as best man and Miss M. E. Brady as bridesmaid, and the only other members of the wedding party were Hillaire Blatz, brother of the groom, and his wife.

The bride wore a tan traveling dress and a brown hat, and Miss Brady was also in traveling costume. Immediately after the ceremony, the wedding party departed in a shower of rice and confetti for the North Avenue station, where they took an evening train for New York city. An informal dinner party was held at the Cafe Martin, after which the bride and groom left for a honeymoon in the South. They will spend a month touring the Southern States, going first to Washington, D. C.

At the conclusion of their wedding trip they will take up their residence in the Jackson building. Mr. Blatz is one of Union county's prominent lawyers. He is counsel for the North Plainfield Board of Health and a number of corporations. He has a host of friends throughout the county.

Cooper Gets Two Year's Sentence.

Emic Cooper, colored, who was recently convicted in the Court of Quarter Sessions, Elizabeth, of a charge of assault and battery on Mrs. Louisa Lang, was today sentenced to two years in State Prison. Cooper was president of the "Normal and Industrial Institute," at Union, and Mrs. Lang's home was near that of the so-called Institute. His act was considered a most cruel one. It is understood that Cooper, through his counsel, Edward Nugent, is preparing to appeal the case.

Entertained at Thimble Party.

Mrs. F. A. Dunham, of West Fifth street, entertained about fifty women at a thimble party at her home yesterday afternoon. The guests spent the time sewing and later refreshments were served.

HONOR MAJOR EDWARDS

Plainfield Theatre Packed by His Friends Who Witness "Heir to the Hoorah."

TESTIMONIAL NETS $600.

A Telegram from the Genial Major Is Read From the Stage by Manager William Counihan.

Success with a large S was spelled at the New Plainfield theatre, last night, when the testimonial to Major Maze Edwards was given in the form of a performance of "The Heir to the Hoorah." Practically every seat in the play house was occupied when the curtain rose on the first act and before 9 o'clock there were many standees. The attraction verified all the good things that had been said in advance about it and laughter was on tap all through the evening.

When all expenses are paid it is probable that the testimonial will yield about $600, all of which will be turned over to the genial major with the best wishes of the committee and everyone of his friends. A telegram was received from him, last night, in which he conveyed his best wishes to the audience and the hope that the production would prove entirely satisfactory. The message was delivered from the stage by Manager Counihan.

Plainfielders are familiar with "The Heir to the Hoorah" and its virile story, but it is the kind that always bears repeating. The cast was an excellent one, headed by Frank Monroe and Miss Helene Lackaye, and the standard that gave the play its great reputation was maintained. The screamingly funny banquet scene, in which the hero's "wild-and-woolly" friends have a terrific time getting into evening clothes and then forget to remove their guns and spurs, had the audience convulsed. A better attraction for the testimonial could hardly have been secured.

The local Elks and Masons were the prime movers in managing the affair and they were ably assisted by Manager Counihan and Treasurer Cunningham of the theatre, Mayor Fisk, George A. Beaton, W. C. Kinney, Harry L. Hall and Frederick W. Butler.

CAKE WALK TONIGHT.

Four Couples Will Cut Fancy Steps at the New Plainfield After the Amateur Numbers.

Something new in the way of amateur entertainment will be given at the New Plainfield theatre tonight. Manager Counihan has arranged for a prize cake walk with four local couples competing and it will be presented with all the elaborations that made this style of fancy stepping the "big scream" ten years ago. The couple cutting the best figures will be awarded a handsome cake, the audience deciding the winners.

In the early part of the evening, Salisbury's pictures will be given and the usual amateur numbers will have place on the bill previous to the cake walk. The program is one of the best the management has yet prepared and a capacity audience is looked for.

Social Affairs at Truell Hall.

A leap-year dance will be given at Truell Hall tomorrow night by a large number of young people residing in the Netherwood section of the city. The young women will perform the honors and elaborate arrangements have been completed for an enjoyable time. Saturday night a dance will be given at the Hall by the young people of St. Stephen's church for the benefit of the parish. This will be the second dance under these auspices and it promises to be a great success.

CHAPEYS BROUGHT HERE

Family of Swindlers Caught at Summit Now Locked Up at Headquarters.

WANTED IN MANY PLACES.

Plainfield and Westfield Charges to Be Given Preference in the Prosecution — Remarkable Career of Prisoners.

Their career of hotel beating, swindling and thievery ended temporarily, at least, the members of the Chapey family who have been operting in various parts of the State under the name of Vanoni and other aliases, were brought to this city yesterday from Summit, where they were arrested on orders from Chief Kiely. They were locked up at headquarters and this morning were remanded indefinitely to allow the police to straighten out the charges against them. The telephone at the station has been kept on a steady jingle since the news of their arrest became public and the authorities in nearly all the surrounding cities and towns have asked the privilege of aiding in the prosecution.

The prisoners have been entered on the docket as follows: Mrs. Catherine Gertrude Chapey, aged 45; Miss Gertrude Wallenhagen, her daughter, aged 20; Lucian Chapey, her son, aged 13; John Wallenhagen, her son-in-law, aged 21. Another son, Fred Chapey, is now in jail in Monmouth county, having been caught at Asbury Park on January 28 when the police of that city were making an effort to find the mother on a charge of giving a worthless check to a hotel proprietor. An Asbury Park paper containing an account of the arrest was found beneath Wallenhagen's underclothing when he was searched here yesterday.

The specific charges against the quartet are preferred by D. Demolli, a local caterer, who cashed two checks for Mrs. Chapey, aggregating $24, and County Detective John A. Galatian, appearing in behalf of John H. Willett, of Westfield, from whose hotel they stole $300 worth of clothing the latter part of January. Willett and his daughter, Miss Mabel Willett, positively identified the prisoners this morning and in addition the young woman proved that a waist worn by Gertrude Wallenhagen had been included in the articles taken away. Gertrude also had a muff belonging to Miss Willett.

The Plainfield and Westfield claims are to be given preference in placing the four on trial but Chief Brown, of Summit, insisted over the telephone this morning that he should be allowed to have the prisoners first. The only charge he has against them is the passing of a worthless check on John D. Bailey, the former Plainfielder who keeps a hotel in that place. It was Bailey who gave Chief Kiely the clue to the Chapeys whereabouts and Chief Brown knew nothing of their being in Summit until the Plainfield officer requested him to make the arrests. Detective Galatian attempted to show him that he should yield his claim but he remained insistent. This matter will be straightened out this afternoon.

Beside the places mentioned, the police of Trenton, Princeton, Orange, Bound Brook, Asbury Park and several Jersey coast towns have sent messages stating that they hold warrants for the quartet. In nearly every instance the complaint was made by a hotel man and is either for a board bill or for the cashing of "N. G." checks signed by Mrs. Chapey or Wallenhagen. She signed the name Chapey to the ones she gave Demolli, both being on a Long Island bank. The one given Mr. Bailey at Summit was for $70 and was drawn on the City National Bank, of this city. She never had an account there.

The history of the Chapeys is remarkable in many ways and cites a strange case of descent from a position of wealth and affluence to one of poverty and crime. Less than five years ago, when the husband and father was living, they were worth thousands of dollars and enjoyed all the comforts of life and many of its luxuries. The elder Chapey was a hotel man and at various times conducted the Hollywood at Asbury Park, the Rhode Island Point House at Belmar and the Tuxedo Hall at Madison avenue and Fifty-ninth street, New York. For the latter hostelry he paid a rental of $25,000 a year. He began to lose money just previous to his death and when it occurred in 1905 the mother and children quickly spent what was left. With their money gone and the memory of a life of ease still fresh in their minds, the Chapeys began their career of swindling and thievery. Just how far it extended and who they defrauded may never be known as they have maintained a discreet silence thus far and they operated under so many names it is hard to

DEFIES HEALTH BOARD.

Mrs. Frank J. Entwisle, of No. 147 Midland avenue, Arlington, and the Kearny Board of Health are at odds over the question whether or not she is committing a nuisance by airing her bed covers and pillows in an open window that overlooks the apartments of Mrs. John Anderson, No. 149 Midland avenue. Mrs. Anderson made the charge to the Health Board some time ago that the shaking of the bedding from the window caused a dust which she feared might carry bacteria. Dr. James A. Eton, of the Health Board, made an investigation and reported to the Board that he could find no reason why a complaint of a nuisance should be sustained. Despite this, the Board at a later meeting decided that a nuisance was being committed, and the secretary was ordered to write Mrs. Entwisle that she must stop the practice. When the Health Inspector, Albert E. Geisley, called upon the woman yesterday to ascertain if the order was being carried out he was told that, upon legal advice, she would not obey the mandate of the Board. The Board will take up the matter at the next meeting.

NEWARK CHILDREN HELD AS SHOPLIFTERS.

Fannie Schrenzel, of No. 14 Rankin street, and Mabel Beckel, of No. 16 Rankin street, each thirteen years of age, were arraigned before Judge Howell in the First Criminal Court, Newark, yesterday on a charge of shoplifting. They were arrested late Monday afternoon as they were emerging from a department store in Main street. They are said to have had several stolen articles upon them at the time. Later when a search of their rooms was made, the police say, about $100 worth of stuff was found.

At first the two girls refused to tell anything about themselves, but later, according to the police, they both broke down and confessed. The police later sent them home with their parents with orders to have them in court today.

Both the girls are small for their age, but the police say they are clever and have defied the watchfulness of detectives employed in several of the stores. Detectives Horter and Tuite, who arrested them, testified at the arraignment that they had recovered three lace waists, valued at $5 each; a black silk waist, a black jet hat with a big black plume, which would cost not less than $10; half a dozen crushed leather belts, spools of cotton and several little trinkets taken by the girls.

Judge Howell turned the two little girls over to Assistant Probation Officer Paul Laddy and the Juvenile Court will dispose of them.

CARICATURED THEIR TEACHER.

Bcause they caricatured the principal of the Montclair High School, Herbert W. Dutch, four pupils have been suspended. They are Earl G. Williams, No. 207 Walnut street; Goeffrey H. Bonnell, No. 10 Jefferson street; Joseph B. Renwyck, No. 223 Glenridge avenue, and Ellmore Bostwick, of No. 111 South Fullerton avenue.

Mr. Dutch says the boys painted a caricature of him on the base of the metal flagstaff on the high school grounds. Sentences of an uncomplimentary nature were also painted on nearby walks. All the boys are of good families and stood high in their classes. They keenly feel the disgrace of suspension and say what they did was done in a spirit of fun. Principal Dutch said he incurred the enmity of the boys because he made a change in athletics.

PAL OF FRANK IDES MAKES A CONFESSION.

Jewelry and other articles were found secreted in two cells at the First Precinct police station, Newark, yesterday afternoon. The cells had been occupied by Robert Cameron, of Elizabeth, and Charles Henderson, who with Grover Edwards, of Westfield, were with Frank Ides shortly before he was shot and killed by Policeman Weber, at Frelinghuysen avenue and Fenwick street, early Saturday morning.

When arrested Cameron and Henderson were searched at the station by Doorman Neitman, and he is unable to explain how he could have overlooked the jewelry.

Detective-Sergeants McGrail and Murphy, of Elizabeth, and Detective-Sergeant O'Neill, of Westfield, have obtained a description of the valuables found in the cells. The articles found consist of a silver open-faced watch, a silver stamp case, two gold-filled chains and a gold ring.

Grover Edwards, who was taken in Roselle, has made a confession to the police, showing to what lengths cracksmen will go in their robberies.

Edwards says: "I am 19 years old, and have been in trouble before for robbery. I have been sent away and have tried my hardest to quit the game. I was born over in Westfield, where 'Dutch' lived before he moved to Elizabeth. I didn't like farming because the work was hard and the money small.

"When 'Dutch' told me three years ago that he had an easy way to make money I fell to his game and became a thief.

"Last Thursday he came over to Westfield and made arrangements with me to go to Newark on Friday night to 'crack' a place. The 'nigger,' Henderson, and Cameron, the white fellow, were all with me when I met 'Dutch.'

"We went to Newark separately and met in a saloon about 10 o'clock Friday morning, and there 'Dutch' told us we were going to 'stick up' a jeweler that night.

"We kept under cover until dark that night and then walked to the jewelry store of Louis F. Weick, at 10 Pacific street. It looked easy the way are plans were laid out by 'Dutch.' He was to do the 'sticking up.' I mean he was the one who was to walk into the store, when no one but the proprietor was there, make him throw his hands up at the point of a revolver and Henderson was to clean up and get the valuable. Cameron and myself was to be the lookout guys.

"We were all ready for action when we got to the place, and just as 'Dutch' poked his gun into his pocket and was about to enter, two policemen showed up and we had to beat it."

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

BASEBALL.

While the members of the National Baseball Commission—Harry Pulliam, Garry Herrmann and Ban Johnson—were consulting in the St. St. James building, New York, Tuesday, Frank J. Farrell knocked on the door. Johnson opened it and Farrell, noticing that Herrmann and Pulliam were both standing up in the middle of the room, asked:

"What round is it? Will it go to a finish? The commissioners all laughed at this sally, while Pulliam and Herrmann looked at each other as if they were ready to embrace. In case of real friction Johnson would have made an admirable referee, while Secretary John E. Bruce, also present, could have held the watch. But hostilities, if there are any, had evidently been deferred.

Ben Shibe, the owner of the Philadelphia Americans, has confirmed the report that his club has secured a new ball park in Quakertown. The lot is 485 feet by 520 feet and contains 252,200 sqpare feet—a greater area than that of any other ball park in the country. Shibe said that the new grounds would not be ready until next season and that close to $500,000 would be spent in fitting them up. The stands, including a huge cantilever, will be built of steel, concrete and brick and will provide tains 252,200 square feet—a greater said that all of his players, except Eddie Plank, had signed contracts for the coming season.

Clark Griffith writes to the officials of the New York Americans that his players will be allowed to loaf while in the South in case of a cold wave there. Griff lays all the blame for the team's poor showing last year on the spring practice in the South. He says too much energy spent during the cold snap at Atlanta caused the men to contract colds and stiffened joints that lasted until the pennant race was well under way. "The men can take it easy this year if blizzards show up," says the manager, "and then they will come North in better shape than ever. I'd rather have the team reach home in a too fattened condition than have them begin the race stiff and sore."

Three changes are slated for the Baltimore infield next season. Manager Jack Dunn is after a heavy hitter to take the place of Fred Hunter on first base. Buster Burrell will be succeeded at third base by Knight, a Philadelphia Athletic recruit, and Brouthers, said to be a fast man, will fill Beach's place at shortstop. Dunn says he will take care of second base himself.

Fred Burchell, of last year's Baltimore team, is another ball player to join the matrimonial ranks. Burchell was married to a young lady of Jordan, N. Y., three weeks ago. Burchell will be with the Boston Americans next season.

President George Dovey, of the Boston Nationals,, has made the announcement that his team will not play Sunday ball at home next season. Dovey had the following to say on the subject: "Not for me. It would ruin the game. That has been proved conclusively. If you have big Sunday games, then you are bound to lose on your week-day attendance. So much for the business end of it. I'm more strongly against it for moral reasons. It would tend to lower the dignity and standing of the great national game. It couldn't help it. And then there is another thing—the men wouldn't play as good ball. That one day of rest a week just gives them ginger and nerve for the other six. They'd go stale from lack of interest with seven days a week games."

GOLF.

Willie Anderson, four times national open golf champion, won the annual amateur and professional golf tournament at Palm Beach on Monday. Anderson returned rounds of 69 and 66 for 135. His 66 is the best score made over the Palm Beach links this winter. Second place went to Walter Fairbanks, the Denver amateur, who had 139. Gilbert Nicholls, the Woodland "pro," was fourth with 141.

Most golfers would consider it a feat to make a hole in one at some time in their career. There seems to be one person, however, who can claim that the sensation of holing out from the tee in a single stroke has ceased to be a novelty. W. W. Crawford is credited with doing the trick three times at the Birmingham Country Club. His "ones" were made at the first hole, 225 yards; at the home hole, 170 yards up hill, and at a special hole, 200 yards across a ravine, which is only used on Sundays.

The threatening financial storm which kept the members of the Fox Hills Golf Club in a state of uneasiness for several weeks has passed over, and they are once more able to look into the future with the brightest of hopes. The extra assessment has been met, making it possible to liquidate the club's indebtedness, which had been accumulating for several years.

There is now talk of securing an automobile service between the railroad station and the clubhouse. Tournaments are also desired, and in addition to a three days' amateur affair there in the fall the club may try to secure the metropolitan open championship. This tournament was first held at Fox Hills in 1905, when Alec Smith won after a play-off of a tie with Willie Anderson.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Salisbury's moving pictures and illustrated songs, followed by amateur numbers, will be the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre tonight. There are a lot of entries for the amateur part of the show and a barrel of fun is looked for.

Headed by the Four Huntings, that clever family who characterize acrobatic comedy with real art, in the latest musical comedy success, "The Fool House," will appear at the New Plainfield theatre next Monday night. The comedy, a neat musical conceit, is agreeable diverting from the usual run of musical comedies, as it has a decided well rounded plot, a story capable of sustaining the interest from start to finish. The trials and tribulations of two lovers and their girls who all think each other crazy and treat each other accordingly until the mistake is finally discovered. In the meantime chance is offered to introduce the Smartest Dancing Acrobatic act on the stage. If you were to take the trouble to write a personal letter to the dramatic critic of any large city daily paper, and ask what is known of The Four Huntings, you would undoubtedly get a reply equivalent that they are the electric singers and acrobatic dancers whose antique and spirited work captivates everybody. Every character in "The Fool House" imagines the other one is crazy. This affords unlimited opportunity for the clever company of forty people to display all their talent for entertaining in musical comedy.

Girl Now Editor-in-Chief.

The Plainfield High School "Oracle" for February, the first issue under the new board of editors of whom Miss Sadie Brouwer is editor-in-chief, appeared yesterday. This issue of the school paper shows that the new editorial board, although its chairman is a girl, is capable of at least maintaining the literary and news standard of the publication. Charles E. Prior, formerly second assistant business manager, has temporarily been elected business manager in place of Charles Loizeaux, resigned. The regular election for business manager will be held next month.

PURPOSE OF WATER ACT

Introduced in the Interest of Union Co. Concerns and not to Harm Jersey City.

DEMAND FOR AN AMENDMENT.

Senator Ernest R. Ackerman Says Unless the "Snake" Can Be Killed, He'll Fight His Own Bill.

Representing the legislative committee of the central Republican committee of Hudson county, Edward A. Ransom, Jr., today asked Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, of Union county, why he had not withdrawn his water merger bill, which contains a provision permitting water companies to lay pipes through the streets of municipalities without the consent of the governing bodies. Senator Ackerman admits that this provision is bad.

It is generally understood that he sponsered the bill on the request of the Elizabethtown Water Company. Some months ago, the Elizabethtown Water Company, which was incorporated under a special act, merged with the East Jersey Water Company and which had been incorporated under the general act. It is said that the Ackerman measure would cure alleged minor defects in the merger.

The Union man said that instead of withdrawing the bill he had asked Senator James F. Fielder, of Hudson, to prepare an amendment to protect Jersey City's interests. Jersey City has for two years been fighting to prevent the East Jersey Water Company from stealing its best customers and is maintaining a day and night police guard to prevent the water combine from laying mains in its streets to connect with the Erie and Lackawanna Railroad terminals.

"Can there be any amendment which can make such a bad bill good?" Mr. Ackerman was asked. "Is it possible to draw an amendment which would prevent the accomplishment of what the bill now contemplates without killing the whole measure?"

"If there can not," said the Senator, "and I find there is an insurmountable joker in it, I will go on the floor of the Senate and make a speech denouncing the bill. I took the bill in good faith, When it was handed to me I said in the presence of a witness: 'Are there any snakes in it?' I was assured there were not. The bill was drawn by Richard V. Lindabury, of Newark.

"I was assured by the man who handed it to me that it was only intended to relieve a Union county situation. The law at present permits a water company incorporated under a special act to make contracts with another company incorporated under a general act to make contracts with companies incorporated under general acts, but it does not permit a company organized under a special act to contract with a company incorporated under a general act, or vice versa.

"In Union county there are a number of small water companies, some of which are incorporated under special acts and some under general laws. It is necessary that they be permitted to unite for the benefit of the communities that they supply.

"My only interest in the bill is to accomplish this object for the benefit of the people of my county. I want to be fair to all sides and do no injustice to any municipality or to the corporations."

Dr. Richard Moldenke, of Watchung, has returned from a business trip to Pittsburg.

L. J. BUSBY WAS ONE OF GOD'S NOBLEMEN

Editor, The Daily Press:

The brief notice of the death of Leonard J. Busby in your yesterday's issue prompts one who knew and loved him to ask for space to pay his poor tribute to the memory of one of the rarest, truest and best of men. The standard of character which he set up for his guidance was a high one, and an intimate acquaintance of thirty-seven years warrants the assertion that he lived nearer to it than most men do to one held just a little above the earth. He moved away from Plainfield twenty-nine years ago, while yet on the threshold of an unusually successful business career. Of the young men and women of Plainfield who were his friends and companions then, many of the best have since joined the silent majority, but many are here yet, who, like the writer, have felt at his death the pang of personal bereavement.

It was no perfunctory grief which tugged at the hearts of those who looked at his face for the last time on Tuesday evening and listened to the simple and eloquent tribute paid to his memory by Dr. Rush Rhees, of Rochester, himself a Plainfield boy. It was the sincere testimony of one who appreciated his rare qualities of mind and heart; one who knew what a wealth of tenderness and sympathy lay beneath his calm and rarely demonstrative exterior. For his life current was emphatically an illustration of the maxim that "Still waters run deep," and his manifold charities were seldom or never published to the world. And his eulogist might with fitness and propriety have closed his discourse with words not long ago uttered at the unveiling of a statue of one of the founders of America:

"Above the shifting dust of man's philosophy; above the crumbling spires of human creeds; above the darkness of doubt and disbelief: out of the pure blue of everlasting truth, a good life radiates forever."

H. E. DABOLL.

Plainfield, Feb. 27, 1908.

IN MEMORIAM.

In his passing from the earth life to the life eternal our brother, John B. Probasco, has left a void in the home, the church and the community. For his useful, active services among us there is reason to be thankful to our Heavenly Father. We bless the Lord for the unimpeachable integrity which marked all his conduct as a public man. We magnify our God for what our brother was as a member of this household of faith,—so conscientious in his duties as an office bearer twenty-three years in sustaining the interests of the Church and the cause of religion in our midst.

We desire to place on record our esteem for "the beloved physician" as he went among us for a generation in his chosen profession, allaying our bodily pains, healing our infirmities of the flesh and bringing cheer to our troubled life.

For a period of nearly forty years the life and influence of Dr. Probasco have been so inwrought with the history of Plainfield, with its general civic interests, its public schools, its moral, religious and philanthropic activities, that the history of one could not be accurately written, without largely introducing the history of the other.

We herewith express our sincere sympathy with the bereaved family and commend them to the God of all comfort, invoking for them and ourselves those heavenly consolations which alone can satisfy in such sad hours.

Resolutions of Condolence.

The Medical Board of Muhlenberg Hospital has heard with sorrow of the death of its friend and colleague, Dr. J. B. Probasco.

Dr. Probasco was one of the original members of the Medical Board, and served faithfully and conscientiously as attending surgeon until his resignation a few years ago. At this time he was appointed by the Board of Governors as consulting surgeon. His colleagues on the Medical Board feel that they have sustained at his death a great loss; for Dr. Probasco was a true and firm friend of Muhlenberg Hospital and to every member of the Medical Board.

To his sorrowing family the members of the Medical Board extend their deepest sympathy.

MENTAL HEALING FOR JERSEY.

The Rev. Dr. Robert MacDonald, pastor of the Washington Avenue Baptist church, Brooklyn, who is delivering a series of sermons on the Boston Emmanuel movement, which looks to the restoration of the power of healing mental afflictions to the Christian church, has been invited to address the members of the New Jersey Conference of Congregational Ministers at a meeting to be held in Jersey City onMarch 12.

This invitation is only one of the many evidences of the widespread interest aroused by the sermons of Dr. MacDonald. Every day his mail is heavy with appeals of persons who desire to be treated for diseases of the mind or to learn more about the movement, of which Dr. Worcester, of Boston, is the head.

VERDICT IN READY FORGERY CASE UPHELD

Application to set aside the verdict in the case of Matthew J. Ready, a lawyer, recently convicted of forging the name of the late John W. Russell, of East Orange, to a will, was denied yesterday by Judge Ten Eyck, in the Essex county courts, in Newark. Judge Ten Eyck also denied an application made at the same time for a new trial and announced that he will sentence Ready on Saturday. Samuel Kalisch and Thomas S. Henry, counsel for Ready, gave notice that they will apply for a writ of error to carry the case to the New Jersey Supreme Court for review.

In seeking to have the verdict set aside counsel for Ready contended that it was illegally rendered owing to the fact that it was received by a clerk of the court and while the court was not in session. Prosecutor Young contended that the court had the power to direct the clerk to receive the verdict, and Judge Ten Eyck said that he had done so, and therefore would not set aside the verdict.

It was expected that an affidavit made by David Davis, of Nutley, a member of the jury which convicted Ready, that he had voted to convict. Ready against his will would figure considerably in the proceedings, but it did not reach the court. Reference to it was made, however, by Judge Ten Eyck and by Prosecutor Young. The former said that in circumstances such as existed in the Ready case a juror was liable to indictment under the ruling of the higher courts for assenting to a verdict which he believed to be false.

"Such action and such an affidavit by a juror," declared Prosecutor Young, "should be condemned. A juror can be indicted for such action. If this was permitted the judgment of the courts would be useless. It should be understood that a juror cannot impeach a verdict."

Judge Ten Eyck in finally disposing of the matter remarked that there are other ways to show coercion of a juror than by the affidavit of a talesman.

WAVES MASONIC APRON IN THE COURT ROOM

When James M. Cooper, of Orange, pleaded guilty to bigamy before Judge Blair in Jersey City yesterday Miss Frances Gormally, of No. 212 Lafayette street, Newark, the complainant, arose from a front seat and leaning over a railing held, so that Cooper and many others could see it, his thirty-second degree Masonic apon on which was written following his name: "Who destroyed the sanctity of our home."

Constable George Schoppe escorted her from the room, and her counsel, former Police Judge James W. McCarthy, persuaded her to go home to Newark. In the corridor she tore up Cooper's certificate of membership in the Masonic order. Cooper has wealthy parents in Orange. Miss Gormally married him in October, 1906, one month after his marriage with his lawful wife. The Chancery Court has annulled Miss Gormally's marriage and restored her maiden name. Cooper gave $2,500 bail to appear for sentence today. His first wife was Miss Margaret E. Lee, of New York, whom he married September 10, 1906, at Mount Vernon.

GEORGE MORRELL DEAD.

Expires Suddenly in Hospital, a Victim of Bright's Disease.

George Morrell, sixty-one years old, died Tuesday night at the General Hospital in Elizabeth from an acute attack of Bright's disease. He was born in Philadelphia, but lived nearly all his life in Elizabeth. He had been engaged for many years in the general towing and coal transportation business in New York Harbor, and owned several boats.

Mr. Morrell was a communicant of Trinity Episcopal church of Elizabeth and a member of the Masonic order. He leaves a widow, three sons, Percy E., Robert W. and Clarence F. Morrell, and three daughters. He was one of the founders of the Elizabeth Athletic Club and a member of the Town and Country Club.

Several years ago Mr. Morrell was elected a Republican member of the Union County Board of Freeholders from Elizabeth for two years. He attended the first meeting of the new board, got angry because the man whom he favored was beaten for one of the county offices and never attended another meeting during the two years of his term. At the initial session he walked out saying that he was "through with dirty Union county politics." He declared his candidate had been beaten by "a crooked deal."

TONS OF LITERATURE FOR 1,500,000 SAILORS

The fact that several Plainfield churches are now regular contributors of literature to the Mission Yacht Association, has aroused much interest. Captain George E. Benn, of Brooklyn, who has visited here frequently and presented the claims of the association in the churches, is the founder of the worthy enterprise which dates back to November, 1897, when twenty persons met at the home of a Baptist deacon in the City of Churches and formed the association as outlined by Captain Benn, himself a seafaring man for many years.

There are a million and a half sailors reaching New York during the year and last year the association distributed thousands of tons of literature among these sailors. When they get through with the books and papers they are passed on to others.

In speaking of his work, Captain Benn says: "I preached the first sermon on the movement and the collection amounted to sixty-seven cents. The funds were secured and the mission yacht obtained. Five years ago a larger boat was purchased. 'The Messenger' and other yachts have since been put in commission, and now I am fitting out a mission yacht for the Christian Herald, for work in the Philippine Islands. I was once a sailor and my heart aches when the ships go to sea at this time of the year, for I know that some will never return."

Last year the Park Avenue Baptist church contributed nearly a ton of literature for this work and proposes to do the same this year. Other local churches are preparing to send Captain Benn contributions of literature.

PLANS A NOVEL BANQUET.

What promises to be a unique and interesting banquet will be given at Russ' cafe, Elizabeth, Wednesday, March 4, by J. Cooper Price, once well known in that city, now residing in Toledo, Ohio. Mr. Cooper extends a general invitation to Elizabethians. In the invitation, which Mr. Cooper caused to be printed in various newspapers, he says:

"Any person, be he Christian or blasphemer, who can show he was among the five hundred passengers on the Elizabeth Ellen, which sailed from New York for San Francisco on February 13, 1849, or whose birth date is March 4, 1833, is asked to be my guest at a banquet I propose to give March 4, 1908, in honor of Andrew Jackson's inauguration as President."

"This must be looked into," as the lady said, When she came opposite

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

A well organized movement is on foot in the borough to petition for leniency in the sentence of Charles Robinson, found guilty on five charges for mistreatment of small boys by the New Brunswick court last week. Rev. W. W. Casselberry is at the head of the petitioners, and the list of names on the petition is growing from day to day. When a canvass of the borough has been made, the petition will be forwarded to the New Brunswick judge. No date has been set for sentence, but it will probably be some time next week.

Work of erection of the new building for the Dunellen Lumber and Stone Co. has been commenced and the building will probably be ready for occupancy by April 1. It is to be a frame structure two stories in height, and is situated a hundred feet east of the present office on Front street. M. A. Gallagher is the new owner of the corner property, and is planning to take possession April 1. Rimmer, Apgar and Cruzen are the contractors for the new building.

Camp Washington, P. O. S. of A., will hold its first anniversary meeting tonght in their lodge rooms. The entertainment committee has planned a program of entertainment and there will be a "box" social by the members. State officers of the order are expected to be present and address the meeting on what the order is doing throughout the State.

The storm yesterday morning interfered with the attendance at the all-day sewing meeting of the First Baptist church. The meeting was held at the home of Mrs. A. G. Nelson and the time was spent in sewing on articles for the coming fafr.

John Dutcher played centre on the 1908 basketball team yesterday at the Plainfield High School, when his team defeated the Sophomore in the inter-class basketball league of the school by a score of 47-20.

A party of Dunellenites were at the New Plainfield theatre last night to witness the performance of "The Heir to the Hoorah" for the benefit of Major Maze Edwards.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

A well attended social and dance was held last night in Excelsior Hall by the members of St. Mary's R. C. church parish of Stony Hill. The floor was filled with the younger members of the parish and their friends, while the older ones enjoyed the evening in social chat. Refreshments were served at midnight by the women of the church. Music for dancing was furnished by Naylor, of Plainfield.

The members of the Baptist Sunday-school and their friends enjoyed another of the series of winter socials last night in the church parlors. The affair was well attended considering the weather, and a pleasing program of music and some stereopticon views on "The Life of Napoleon" was enjoyed, after which refreshments were served.

The agitation for a borough which showed itself sometime ago seems to have died out. There is no question but what Fanwood has thrived under a borough government and there are many who believe the town would be benefitted if the residents should make the change.

Now that the plans for the baseball season are completed, the fans are beginning to get interested in the game. The locals should be able to put a strong team in the field this season as Manager Alberts has plenty of material to select from.

Mr. and Mrs. William Deegan, who have been living in New York State for some time, have removed back to town. Mr. Deegan will again resume the management of his hotel which has been conducted by Adam Muff during his absence.

Maze Edwards' benefit, "The Heir to the Horah," at the New Plainfield theatre last night, was well attended by the local lovers of amusement.

Mrs. Frederick Clawson has returned from a visit with relatives at New Market.

Squier Reick has been detained at home for a week with a severe cold.

(Additional suburban news on page 2.)

TAKES "CROSSING CENSUS."

In order to ascertain just how many lives are imperilled each day at the dangerous grade crossing of the Lackawanna Railroad in Bloomfield avenue, the town of Montclair will place two men on duty there for a week to take a record of every person who passes, as well as the steam trains, trolley cars, automobiles and horse drawn vehicles that go by.

This crossing census is being obtained by the town in order that it may have convincing data to present to the court when Montclair's suit to compel the Lackawanna to remove the crossing comes up for trial. The town authorities have appropriated $50 to pay the cost of the census.

Recently the crossing was reported to the State Railroad Commission as one of the most dangerous, if not the most dangerous, in New Jersey, and there have been many narrow escapes from collisions between trains and trolley cars at this point.

FIGHT FOR LOCAL OPTION

Plainfield Christian Endeavorers, the W. C. T. U. and Business Men Active.

MANY TO GO TO TRENTON.

Arrangements for Big Delegation at Public Hearing of Bill Before Assembly's Committee On Monday.

Anticipating strong opposition by the saloon faction at the public hearing for the Local Option bill at the public hearing in Trenton Monday afternoon, the anti-liquor forces are beseiging the Senators and Assemblymen with petitions for their support. The local societies and individuals in favor of the bill are planning to attend the hearing in force. Especially active in the support of the measure is the Plainfield Christian Endeavor Union, comprising thirteen church societies in this city, Watchung, New Market and Dunellen.

Charles F. Windham, secretary of the local union, has sent out personal letters to the presidents of the various Christian Endeavor societies in the Union, urging them to arouse interest in the members to attend the Trenton hearing. Along with the letter in each case, several letters of endorsement have been sent, which are to be signed and forwarded to the Senators and Assemblymen from individual members of each society and church.

It is the belief of the anti-liquor forces that an effort will be made to have the bill modified, or sidetracked. The Local Option people want the bill passed just as it is now framed, and the tone of the personal letters being sent out to the representatives at Trenton is in emphasis of their support of the measure as it reads.

The public hearing will be held in the Assembly chamber at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon, and will be attended by Local Option supporters from all parts of the State. The local organizations to be represented will probably include the Christian Endeavor societies of the First Presbyterian church, Seventh-Day Baptist church, Warren chapel, Faith chapel, Hope chapel, Trinity Reformed church, Congregational church, Park Avenue Baptist church, Watchung Union church, South Plainfield Baptist church, New Market First Baptist and Seventh-Day Baptist churches, and Dunellen Presbyterian church. With these delegates will go representatives of the local W. C. T. U. and a delegation of business men from city and borough.

The principal speaker for Local Option at the hearing will be Governor J. Frank Hanley, of Indiana, who will cancel an engagement to be able to be present at Trenton Monday. Governor Hanley is known in the West as "The Local Option Governor," having been elected on the Local Option ticket. He has been active in the fight against liquor, and at present 762 of the 1,016 townships in the State are "dry." Members of the Municipal Corporations Committee of the State Assembly, to which the bill was submitted, are Assemblyman John R. Moxon, of Union, chairman; Assemblymen Joseph Potter, of Camden; John F. Clark, of Essex; William C. Voorhees, of Middlesex, and Levi H. Morris, of Sussex.

The Local Option people have made special arrangements for the accommodation of their supporters on a special train over the Pennsylvania Railroad. As a counter move, to secure just as complete representation in numbers, the saloon faction leaders have also chartered a special train and are reported to be giving away tickets to all those who will make the trip.

SAYS SPY HAS WARNED SALOON MEN OF PLANS.

Rev. Dr. John L. Scudder yesterday announced that on Monday next a warm time will come to some one in Trenton, when the Jersey City delegation of clergymen march into the capital city, bent on downing the liquor dealers at the hearing on the Crosby local option bill.

In referring to the announcement made several days ago that a special train for the anti-saloon men had been engaged, Dr. Scudder said:

"We went about the hiring of this train secretly, so as to not let the saloon men know of our movements.

"We have a spy in our ranks. Some one has let the cat out of the bag, and it is now whispered from grog-keeper to grog-keeper, putting them wise to our movement. The saloon-keepers are not asleep. They have hired a special train on their own account, and are now giving away free tickets to all who care to make the trip in their interest.

Merchants Want Sunday Closing.

The Retail Merchant's Protective Association of New Brunswick has petitioned Common Council to compel a stricter enforcement of the Sabbath observance laws. In their petition the merchants say that there is developing in New Brunswick a spirit of laxity with respect to the Sabbath, manifest in the tolerance of many sorts of retail business. The merchants think that all such retailing, except of drugs and medicines, should be prohibited. The petition has been referred to the Police Committee.

CHILD LABOR LAW IS DECLARED TO BE VALID.

Supreme Court Upholds Judge Macpherson, Who Imposed Fine For Violations.

The decision of Judge Macpherson, of the District Court in Trenton, in the suit of the State against the Skillman Hardware Company, has been upheld by the Supreme Court, which has decided the child labor law is constitutional. The court's memorandum to that effect was filed yesterday.

About a year ago the Skillman company was charged with employing boys under fourteen years of age. The complaint was made by Colonel Lewis T. Bryant, commissioner of labor. There were charges of three violations of the law, and a fine of $50 was imposed by Judge Macpherson in each case.

The Skillman company carried the matter to the Supreme Court, where Lawyer Ellery Robbins contended that the law was unconstitutional.

Josiah Stryker, of the attorney-general's department, appeared for the department of labor.

BOYCOTT AT THE GRAVE OF AN NON-UNION MAN.

Juneau, Alaska, Feb. 27—Two Servian miners, one union and the other non-union, died Tuesday, and the burial yesterday of one almost precipitated a riot, in which the police were called on to restore order.

The union man was buried peaceably, but when the priest in charge of the funeral services attempted to say mass for the non-union miner he found the church door locked. A mob of 200 union men requested the priest to refuse to bury the non-unionist. He declined to listen to them, and they, in their turn, refused to permit the body to be taken into the church. The disturbers attempted to stop the hearse by holding the horses' bridles, and succeeded in dragging men away from the funeral procession.

The marshal attempted to restore order, but for a time was powerless. The crowd followed the body to the cemetery and made another disturbance there. Order was finally restored. No one was injured.

PLAINFIELD LIBRARY NOTES

Books That Are Being Talked About —All of These Are In the Public Library.

Chittenden, Russell H.—The Nutrition of Man.

"It is probable that no book published will stir up as great an amount of beneficial criticism, discussion, and controversy as the volume in which Russell H. Chittenden sums up the results of the many extremely important dietary experiments he has been engaged upon for the last six years."

Colquhoun, A. R.—Whirlpool of Europe.

"In his 'Whirlpool of Europe' may be studied the eddying currents of five or six different races, religions, and national ambitions. Every phase of European civilization, every question, racial, political or social, that has agitated Europe in the last two centuries may be studied here."—Literary Digest.

Finot, M.—Race prejudice.

"M. Finot's volume, while it does not escape the exaggeration natural to an enthusiastic advocate, contains much matter that is of interest to students of international relations and racial history."—Nation.

Huntington, Ellsworth.—Pulse of Asia.

"Mr. Huntington gathers up the various hypotheses relating to geography, archeology, folk-lore and history and combines them into a consistent theory of history. The book is the outcome of personal adventure from which an analytical mind has deduced material which is a worthy contribution to science."

James, William.—Pragmatism.

"Professor James' volume is interesting and stimulating throughout, and it is needless to add that it contains a deal of practical wisdom and much useful advice which all philosophers would do well to heed. And it seems to me to be much stronger in what it affirms than in what it denies."—Charles W. Bakewell.—Philosophical Review.

Johnson, Willis Fletcher.—Four centuries of the Panama Canal.

"This is the most thorough and comprehensive work that has yet appeared on the Panama Canal. The discussion of the engineering side of the question is very inadequate. For a week of such detail, covering a new field, it is—except when the author gets enthusiastic and eloquent—remarkably free from errors."—Nation.

Metchinkoff, Elie. — Nature of Man.

"The scientific importance of this work is so great that it is spoken of in England as the most valuable production since Garwin's Origin of Species."

Metchinkoff, Elie. — Prolongation of life.

"A great deal of attention is given in this book to the subject of old age. The author suggests means of prolonging life and health, while contemplating natural death with serenity. Some of the essays concern themselves with psychological matters, with optimism and pessimism, and in general with questions of science and morals."

Kellogg, V. L.—Darwinism today.

"The value of Professor Kellogg's book to the working student of organic evolution cannot be overestimated. It is a book that the student must have at hand at all times, and it takes the place of a whole library. No other writer has attempted to gather together the scattered literature of this vast subject and none has subjected this literature to such uniformly trenchant and uniformly kindly criticism."—David Starr Jordan.—Dial.

Sager, D. S.—Art of living in good health.

"This book furnishes in convenient form practical information regarding digestion and nutrition. It covers practically every subject connected with hygiene in a way that the layman can understand."

Sakurai, Tadayoshi.—Human bullets, a soldier's story of Port Arthur.

"A curious study in race psychology is afforded by this 'soldier's story of Port Arthur.' The book furnishes a striking picture of what war actually is, even under its most humane aspects. And at a time when the eyes of the whole world are on Japan, it is worth while to be told so authoritatively just what manner of fighting man the Japanese soldier is."—Ward Clark.—Bookman.

Salisbury, Rollin D.—Physiography.

"Professor Salisbury's book meets a real want and the character of its compilation, based as it is, on many years of experience in teaching, gives the book a completeness far beyond any other physiography published up to this time."—Science.

Thomson, W. H.—Brain and personality; or the physical relations of the brain to the mind.

Trevelyan, Sir George Otto.—American Revolution. v. 3.

"The rounded and highly sustained style of the earlier volumes, which some have likened to that of Trevelyan's uncle, Lord Macauley, is maintained, and there is just enough of the British point of view to give new zest to a subject so frequently treated by our own writers."—Lit. D.

Victoria, Alexandria, Queen of Great Britain and Ireland.—Letters, 1837-1861.

"Those who only know Queen Victoria's gifts as a writer through her 'Highland Journals' will be astonished when they read these volumes. To say that the book is of absorbing interest does it scant justice, for it is one of the great books of the century."—Jeannette L. Gilder.—Review of rev.

Weale, B. L. P.—Truce in the East.

"His book is not convincing. It is too confident in statement, too dramatic in expression, and knows more of the future of half of Asia than it is possible for any one even to guess at—above all, any European. Mr. Weale is always lucid, and even when we are least convinced by his conclusions, we feel that they have been honestly formed upon a fairly wide basis of knowledge, experience, and thought."—Athenaeum.

Wendell, Barrett.—France of today.

"I greatly admire the book, it is full of excellent things; the author combines acument with sympathy. He knows how to praise and he knows also how to blame, a much rarer art."—J. A. J. Jusserand.—N. Y. Times.

Wiley, Harvey Washington.—Foods and their adulteration.

"This is the most authoritative and comprehensive book that has appeared on this important subject, and there is no other man in America who is better fitted to handle it from both the scientific and the legislative sides than the author," who is the Chief of the Bureau of Chemistry, U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Woman's Wit.

A man found that his wife had brought a few puffs of false hair. This displeased him. So one day he hid in the hall outside of her room, and just as the lady was adjusting the false puffs he darted in upon her.

"Mary," he said reproachfully, "why do you put the hair of another woman upon your head?"

"John," retorted Mary, with a glance at her husband's shoes, "why do you put the skin of another calf upon your feet?"—Everybody's.

Just Like a Man.

Mr. Kadley—How mannish she is.

Miss Bright—Isn't she, though?

Mr. Kadley—And the funny part of it is she thinks people admire her for being so. She doesn't seem to see that people are merely laughing at her.

Miss Bright—Yes; she's mannish even to that extent—Philadelphia Press.

The Real Need.

"They say that laziness is caused by a germ. What a fine thing it would be if we could find something to kill the thing."

"Oh, no. I know somehting finer than that. Think how much nicer it would be if we could all find some way to gratify it."—The Hebrew Standard.

"An Even Exchange."

"Oh, Mr. Schmidt, our cashier has skipped with a hundred thousand marks!"

"Did my wife go with him?"

"No; your daughter."

"Anyway, he's done something for the money."—Fliegende Blatter.

A Roland for an Oliver.

"What do you suppose old Skinem said the other day when I told him I aws going to nail him for a subscription?"

"What?"

"'You're on the wrong tack.'"—Baltimore American.

In the Present.

"And before I accept him," Miss Passay was saying, "I asked him if he would love me when I was old."

"The idea!" eclaimed Miss Bright, "why if he proposed to you he had already proven that, hadn't he?"—Philadelphia Press.

WHEN FASHION MEETS.

Gems of rare radiance adorn
A matron's loveliness,
The silkworm from its nest is torn
That she may have a dress.
Bold divers search the ocean blue
For pearls to grace her neck.
Admiring guests say "How-dy-do,"
and father writes a check.

The music sounds throughout the hall,
Where glad, bewitching girls
Bring treasures that make wealth seem small—
Bright eyes and golden curls.
The world its affluence here has cast,
In choicest gifts to deck
The scene of beauty unsurpassed,
And father writes a check.

He hears the music from afar;
Afar he scans the type
Of some dull book o'er his cigar—
Or maybe it's a pipe.
He's really not expected to Respond to pleasure's beck.
There's nothing much for him to do—
He simply writes a check.
—Washington Star.

WORTH KNOWING.

A school of languages for parrots has been established in Paris. The birds are taught to speak English, French, German and Italian.

Roumania is the most illiterate country in Europe. The last census shows that in a population of about 6,000,000 nearly 4,000,000 neither write nor read.

A decade ago, in the fiscal year, 1896-97, this country did a business with the Latin-American countries amounting to $234,000,000. In the fiscal year 1906-07 it has done a business with the Latin-American countries in excess of $600,000,000.

Why animal charcoal removes the color from colored liquids while wood charcoal has no effect has not been understood. A European chemist now finds that the action of the former is due to the presence of 5 to 7 per cent. of nitrogen.

Privets For Street Planting.

Out at Montebello, Cal., on at least two streets there is planted a species of ligustrum or privet of a decidedly arborescent habit that makes an ideal street tree. In addition to the general points of excellence common to our best street trees, this privet has the desirable qualification of being easily and safely moved when of a considerable size with a comparatively small ball of soil. Trees of two to three inches in diameter of stem and a height of ten feet will not wilt, but readily take root and resume normal growth when moved with fifty pounds of soil. With a tree so easily handled we may have effective street tree alignment at the end of the first year after planting.

Constantinople Shoemakers.

In Constantinople the shoemakers are all poets. While a customer is having a heel repaired or a shoe relaced the attendant recites extemporized or memorized verses to him. As the language is Arabic or Turkish, the listener rarely knows whether he is hearing a good or bad verse. On the Muski, the Broadway of old Cairo, one can buy the red leather, sharp toed slippers, universally worn in a land where there is rarely any rain, for about 60 cents. They are not worth more, being very flimsy articles in construction. They are not representative of the expert English or American handmade shoe, which is a thing of beauty, of comfort and of enduring utility.—Argonaut.

Temperance.

A mollycoddle writer who is too cowardly to sign his name writes asking us if we are against "temperance."

We are not.

We believe in temperance in eating, in drinking, in sleeping, in resting, in working, in studying, in thinking, in speaking and in everything else.

Excesses of every kind are harmful and to be condemned.

But they are not to be cured by legislation.

LANGFORD of the THREE BARS

By KATE AND VIRGIL D. BOYLES

(Copyright by A. C. McClurg & Co., 1907.)

"Don't let her be alone any more than you can help, Mother White," he said, brusquely, "and don't worry her about going to bed."

"Have a bite afore you start, Mr. Langford, do," urged the good woman, hospitably. "You're that worn out you're white around the gills. I'll bet you havn't had ary bite o' breakfast."

"I had forgotten—but you are right. No, thank you, I'll not stop for anything now. I'll have to ride like kingdom come. I'm late. Be good to her, Mother White," this last over his shoulder as he sprang to his mount from the kitchen stoop.

The long day wore along. Mother White was baking. The men would be ravenous when they came back. Many would stop there for something to eat before going on to their homes. It might be to-night, it might be to-morrow, it might not be until the day after, but whenever the time did come, knowing the men of the range country, she must have something "by her."

At last came the doctor and Gordon, driving up in the doctor's top-buggy, weather-stained, mud-bedaubed with the mud of last spring, of many springs. The doctor was a badly dressed, pleasant-eyed man, past middle age, with a fringe of gray whiskers. He was a sort of journeyman doctor, and he had drifted hither one day two summers ago from the Lake Andes country in this self-same travel-worn conveyance with its same bony sorrel. He had found good picking, he had often jovially remarked since, chewing serenely away on a brand of vile plug the while. He had elected to remain. He was part and parcel of the cattle country now. He was an established condition. People had learned to accept him as he was and be grateful. Haste was a mental and physical impossibility to him. He took his own time. All must perforce acquiesce.

"You have worked yourself into a high fever, Miss Williston, that's what you've done," he said, with professional mournfulness.

"I know it," she smiled wanly. "I couldn't help it. I'm sorry."

Gordon drew up a chair and sat down by her, saying with grave kindness, "You are fretting. We must not let you. I am going to stay with you all night and shoo the goblins away."

"You are kind," said Mary, gratefully. "May I tell you when they come? If some one speaks to me they go away."

"Indeed you may, dear child," he exclaimed, heartily. He had been half joking when he spoke of keeping things away. He now perceived that these things were more serious than he knew.

The doctor administered medicine to reduce the fever, dressed the wounded arm, with Gordon's ready assistance, and then called in Mother White to prepare the bed for his patient; but he paused nonplussed before the weight of entreaty in Mary's eyes and voice.

"Please don't," she cried out, in actual terror. "Oh, Mr. Gordon, don't let him! I see such awful things when I lie down. Please! Please! And Mr. Langford said I might sit up till he came. Mr. Gordon, you will not let him put me to bed, will you?"

"I think it would be better to let her have her way, Lockhart," said Gordon in a low voice.

"Maybe it would, Dick," said the doctor, with susprising meekness.

"I'll stay all night and I'll take good care of her, Lockhart. There's Mother White beckoning to supper. You'll eat before you go? No, I won't take any supper now, thank you, mother, I will stay with Mary."

And he did stay with her all through the long watches of that long night. He never closed his eyes in sleep. Sometimes Mary would drop off into uneasy slumber—always of short duration. When she awakened suddenly in wide-eyed fright, he soothed her with all tenderness. Sometimes when he thought she was sleeping, she would clutch his arm desperately and cry out that there was some one behind the big cottonwood. Again it would be to ask him in a terrified whisper if he did not hear hoof-beats, galloping, galloping, galloping, and begged him to listen. He could always quiet her, and she tried hard to keep from wandering; but after a short, broken rest, she would cry out again in endless repetition of the terrors of that awful night.

Mrs. White and several of her small progeny breathed loudly from an adjoining room. A lamp burned dimly on the table. It grew late—12 o'clock and after. At last she rested. She passed from light, broken slumber to deep sleep without crying out and thus awakening herself. Gordon was tired and sad. Now that the flush of fever was gone, he saw how white and miserable she really looked. The circles under her eyes were so dark they were like bruises. The mantle of his misfortune was spreading to bring others besides himself into its somber folds.

The men were coming back. But they were coming quietly, in grim silence. He dared not awaken Mary for the news he knew they must carry. He stepped noiselessly to the door to warn them to a yet greater stillness and met Langford on the threshold.

The two surveyed each other gravely with clasped hands.

"You tell her, Dick. I—I can't," said Langford. His big shoulders drooped as under a heavy burden.

"Must I?" asked Gordon.

"Dick, I—I can't," said Langford, brokenly. "Don't you see?—if I had been just a minute sooner—and I promised."

"Yes, I see, Paul," said Gordon, quietly. "I will tell her."

"You need not," said a sweet clear voice from across the room. "I know. I heard. I think I knew all the time—but you were all so good to make me hope. Don't worry about me any more, dear friends. I am all right now. It is much better to know. I hope they didn't hang him. You think they shot him, don't you?"

"Little girl, little girl," cried Langford, on his knees beside her, "it is not that! It is only that we have not found him. But no news is good news. That we have found no trace proves that they have to guard him well because he is alive. We are going on a new track to-morrow. Believe me, little girl, and go to bed now, won't you, and rest?"

"Yes," she said, wearily, as one in whom no hope was left, "I will mind—the boss."

As he laid her gently on the bed, while Mrs. White, aroused from sleep, fluttered aimlessly and drowsily about, he whispered, his breath carressing her cheek:

"You will go to sleep right away, won't you?"

"I will try. You are the boss."

CHAPTER XII.

Waiting.

The man found dead the night the Lazy S was burned out was not easily identified. He was a half-breed, but half-breeds were many west of the river, and the places where they laid their heads at night were as shifting as the sands of that rapid, ominous, changing stream of theirs, which ever cut them off from the world of their fathers and kept them bound, but restless, chafing, in that same land where their mothers had stared stolidly at a strange little boatload tugging up the river that was the forerunner of the ultimate destiny of this broad northwest country, but which brought in incidentally—as do all big destinies in the great scheme bring sorrow to some one—wrong, misunderstanding, forgetfulness, to a once proud, free people now in subjection.

At last the authorities found trace of him far away at Standing Rock, through the agent there, who knew him as of an ugly reputation—a dissipated, roving profligate, who had long since squandered his government patrimony. He had been mixed up in sundry bad affairs in the past, and had been an inveterate gambler. So much only were the Kemah county authorities able to uncover of the wayward earthly career of the dead man. Of his haunts and cronies of the period immediately preceding his death, the agent could tell nothing. He had not been seen at the agency for nearly a year. The reprobate band had covered its tracks well. There was nothing to do but lay the dead body away and shovel oblivion over its secret.

In the early morning after the return of the men from their unsuccessful man hunt, Gordon, gray and haggard from loss of sleep and from hard thought, stepped out into the kitchen to stretch his cramped limbs. He stumbled over the figure of Langford prone upon the floor, dead asleep in utter exhaustion. He smiled understandingly and opened the outerdoor quietly, hoping he had not aroused the wornout boss. The air was fresh and cool, with a hint of autumn sharpness, and a premature Indian summer haze, that softened the gauntness of the landscape, and made the distances blue and rest-giving. He felt the need of invigoration after his night's virgil, and struck off down the road with long strides, in pleasant anticipation of a coming appetite for breakfast.

Thus it was that Langford, struggling to a sitting posture, rubbing his heavy eyes with a dim consciousness that he had been disturbed, and wondering drowsily why he was so stupid, felt something seeping through his senses that told him he did not do well to sleep. So he decided he would take a plunge into the cold artesian pond, and with such drastic measures banish once and for all the elusive yet all-pervading cobwebs which clung to him. Rising to his feet with unusual awkwardness, he looked with scorn upon the bare floor and accused it blindly and bitterly as the direct cause of the strange soreness that beset his whole anatomy. The lay of the floor had changed in a night. Where was he? He glanced helplessly about. Then he knew.

Thus it was, that when Mary languidly opened her eyes a little later it was the boss who sat beside her and smiled reassuringly.

"You have not slept a wink," she creid, accusingly.

"Indeed I have," he said. "Three whole hours, I feel tip-top."

"You are—fibbing," she said. "Your eyes look so tired, and your face is all worn."

His heart leaped with the joy of her solicitude.

"You are wrong," he laughed, teasingly. "I slept on the floor; and a good bed it was, too. No, Miss Williston, I am not 'all in' yet, by any means."

In his new consciousness, a new formality crept into his way of addressing her. She did not seem to notice it.

"Forgive me for forgetting, last night," she said, earnestly. "I was very selfish. I forgot that you had not slept for nearly two days and were riding all the while in—our behalf. I forgot. I was tired, and I went to sleep. I want you to forgive me. I want you to believe that I do appreciate what you have done. My father——"

"Don't, don't, little girl," cried Langford, forgetting his new awe of her maidenhood in his pity for the stricken child.

"My father," she went on steadily, "would thank you if he were here. I thank you, too, even if I did forget to think whether or no you and all the men had any sleep or anything to eat last night. Will you try to believe that I did not forget wittingly? I was so tired."

When Langford answered her, which was not immediately, his face was white and he spoke quietly with a touch of injured pride.

"If you want to hurt us, Miss Williston, that is the way to talk. We cowmen do not do things for thanks."

She looked at him wonderingly a moment, then said, simply, "Forgive me," but her lips were trembling and she turned to the wall to hide the tears that would come. After all, she was only a woman—with nerves—and the reaction had come.

The sheriff and his party of deputies made a diligent search for Williston that day and for many days to come. It was of no avail. He had disappeared, and all trace with him, as completely as if he had been spirited away in the night to another world—body and soul. That the soul of him had really gone to another world came to be generally believed—Mary held no hope after the return of the first expedition; but why could they find no trace of his body? Where was it? Where had it found a resting place? Was it possible for a man, quick or dead, even west of the river in an early day of its civilization when the law had a winking eye, to fall away from his wonted haunts in a night and leave no print, neither a bone nor a rag nor a memory, to give mute witness that this way he passed, that way he rested a bit, here he took horse, there he slept, with this man he had converse, that man saw his still body borne hence? Could such a thing be? It seemed so.

After a gallant and dauntless search, which lasted through the best days of September, Langford was forced to let cold reason have its sway. He had thought, honestly, that the ruffians would not dare commit murder, knowing that they were being pursued; but now he was forced to the opinion that they had dared the worst, after all. For, though it would be hard to hide all trace of a dead man, infinitely greater would be the difficulty in covering the trail of a living one—one who must eat and drink, who had a mouth to be silenced and strength to be restrained. It came gradually to him, the belief that Williston was dead; but it came surely. With it came the jeer of the specter that would not let him forget that he should have foreseen what would surely happen. With it came also a great tenderness for Mary, and a redoubled vigilance to keep his unruly tongue from blurting out things that would hurt her who was looking to him, in the serene confidence in his good friendship, for brotherly counsel and comfort.

In the first dark days of his new belief, he spoke to Gordon, and the young lawyer had written a second letter to the "gal reporter." In response, she came at once to Kemah and from thence to the White homestead in the boss's "own private." This time the boss did the driving himself, bringing consternation to the heart of one Jim Munson, cow-puncher, who viewed the advent of her and her "mouse-colored hair" with serious trepidation and alarm. What he had dreaded had come to pass. 'Twas but a step now to the Three Bars. A fussy woman would be the means of again losing man his Eden. It was monstrous. He sulked, aggrievedly, systematically.

Louise slipped into the sad life at the Whites' easily, sweetly, adaptably. Mary rallied under her gentle ministrations. There was—would ever be—a haunting pathos in the dark eyes, but she arose from her bed, grateful for any kindness shown her, strong in her determination not be a trouble to any one by giving way to weak and unavailing tears.

Mary, because of her abounding health, healed of her wound rapidly. Langford took advantage of the girls' absorption in each other's company to ride often and at length on guests or his own creation. With October, Louise must join Judge Dale for the autumn term of court. He haunted the hills. He was not looking now for a living man; he was seeking a cleverly concealed grave. He flouted the opinion—held by many—that the body had been thrown into the Missiuri and would wash ashore some later day many and many a mile below. He held firmly to his fixed idea that impenetrable mystery clouding the ultimate close of Williston's earthly career was the sought aim of his murderers, and they would risk no river's giving up its dead to their undoing.

It had been ascertained beyond reasonable doubt that Williston could not have left the country in any of the usual modes. His description was at all the stations along the line, together with the theory that he would be leaving under compulsion.

Meanwhile, Gordon had buckled down for the big fight. He was sadly handicapped, with the whole prop of his testimony struck from under him by Williston's disappearance. However, those who knew him best—the number was not large—looked for things to happen in those days. They, the few, the courageous minority, through all the ups and downs—with the balance in favor of the downs most of the time—of the hardest-fought battle of his life, the end of which left him gray at the temples, maintained a deep and abiding faith in this quiet, unassuming young man, who had squared his shoulders to this new paralyzing blow and refused to be knocked out, who walked with them and talked with them, but kept his own counsel, abided his time, and in the meantime—worked.

One day Langford was closeted with him for a long two hours in his dingy, one-roomed office on the ground floor. The building was a plain wooden affair with its square front rising above the roof. In the rear was a lean-to where Gordon slept and had his few hours of privacy.

"It won't do, Paul," Gordon said in conclusion. "I have thought it all out. We have absolutely nothing to go upon—nothing at least but our own convictions and a bandaged arm, and they won't hang a man with Jesse's diabolical influence. We'll fight it out on the sole question of 'Mag,' Paul. After that—well—who knows? Something else may turn up. There may be developments. Meanwhile, just wait. There will be justice for Williston yet."

Ship Canals in Scotland.

An old plan for a ship canal across the narrowest part of Scotland has been revived and is being pushed by business interests of Edinburgh and Glasgow. Glasgow has one plan for cutting the canal at a coat of $40,000,000. Edinburgh has another, which is estimated to call for an expenditure of $85,000,000. Originally it was suggested that the existing Fourth and Clyde barge canal should be enlarged and made into a tidal canal, without locks, at a cost of $70,000,000. As yet the cost has barred progress, but the canal would be of great value to commerce, and it is expected to become a reality in time.

The Irishman's Retort.

An Irishman was hurrying along past a ten-story building recently, when suddenly the falling body of a man struck him from above and knocked him to the sidewalk.

"Phat did ye do that for?" demanded the Irishman, rising painfully to his feet.

"You saved my life!" cried the other man in return, following the Irishman's example and scrambling to his feet. "I fell out of that second-story window up there, and you broke my fall."

"Begorry!" retorted the dazed Celt, "Oi hope some day Oi'll fall down on ye frum th' top of th' buildin' an' break yure neck!"—Judge.

The attention of renters of Safe Deposit Boxes in New York is called to the fact that New York State levies a tax on the contents of the Safe Deposit box of a non-resident at his or her death, which tax may, of course, be avoided by keeping one's valuables in the same state in which one resides. It is, therefore, greatly to the advantage of a resident of New Jersey to keep personal property in a Safe Deposit vault within the state.
An inspection of our facilities is invited.

SENIOR AND JUNIOR FIVES WIN IN P. H. S. BASKETBALL.

The freshman five of the Plainfield High School lost their first game of the season in the inter-class league yesterday afternoon, when they were defeated by the junior class five at the school auditorium by a score of 18-10. The freshmen were weakened by the absence of Elmer Bohan but put up a hard fight for the game from whistle to whistle.

The sophomore five, tail-enders in the league, had another defeat yesterday afternoon, when the senior five trimmed them 47-20. Of the two, this was the better game, and the score can give no idea of the hotly contested game. Throughout the first half, the teams played about even, guarding closely and scoring largely on individual play. In the second period, the senior five established a definite lead, which they maintained until the whistle. The lineups follow:

Seniors—Murphey and Line, forwards; John Dutcher, centre; Pound, Hammond and Titsworth, guards. Sophomores—Ricketts and Bond, forwards; Brick, centre; Morris and Phillips, guards.

Juniors—Bingamin and Riffert, forwards; Day, centre; Wilcox and Prior, guards. Freshmen—Clark and Van Zandt, forwards; Little, centre; Bristol and Lindzey, guards. Referee, Paul Collier. Twenty minute halves.

SHOT POLICEMAN FOUND WITH JERSEYMAN'S DAUGHTER

Frederick Hoffman, a son of a well-known horse trainer of Somerville, with a crowd of 1,000 persons on his heels, chased Policeman Edward W. Willi from Ninth avenue and Forty-fifth street to Forty-fourth street and Eighth avenue, New York, trying to kill him.

Hoffman had the policeman's revolver, from which one ball had already been sent into Willi's hip, inflicting a wound that left a trail of blood from the Forty-fifth street house in which Hoffman found Willi with his fifteen-year-old sister, Rose, to the place where he was captured.

Willi was locked up as a suspicious person, while Hoffman was detained on a charge of felonious assault.

FATHER SEES SON KILLED.

Percy Clements, the seven-year-old son of J. P. Clements, of Newark, was struck and instantly killed by a passenger train yesterday morning while trying to cross the tracks in front of a locomotive at Lakewood. He was playing with another boy on the other side of the track, when his father called to him, and he at once dropped his sport to obey, reaching the track just as the train got to the crossing.

Mr. Clements told a reporter later that there was no flagman on the crossing, which was an open one, and, as the train was partly hidden by buildings, the boy did not know the danger till it was upon him. He nearly escaped, but was drawn back by the suction of the train, which knocked him to one side.

BRYAN NOT MENTIONED.

The Bryan Democratic League failed to put in an appearance at the meeting of the Democratic State Committee at Harrisburg, Pa., yesterday, and there was no mention of the Nebraskan or of a recommendation that the coming State convention instruct for him.

The Bryan resolution was withheld in deference to Colonel Guey, who had the situation well in hand.

CHAPEYS BROUGHT HERE

trace back. The police are of the one opinion, however, that their methods were crude and bungling and it is beyond them to figure out how they managed to elude capture so long. They always traveled together, changed dress but very little and in several places gave the same name. They frequently called themselves the "Vanonis," the name of a reputable family in this city the Chapeys knew when they lived in New York. This fact resulted in a lot of inconvenience and unpleasant notoriety for the real Vanonis and Mr. Vanoni has been in the city for the past week to disabuse the minds of his friends that he and his relatives are the law-breakers.

The Chapeys are somewhat refined in appearance and would not be taken at first glance for swindlers. The daughter, Mrs. Wallenhagen, is rather pretty though not strikingly handsome as reports from other places have stated. The son and son-in-law are mild speaking individuals and Mrs. Chapey has a motherly look about her. All four have taken their arrest rather indifferently but warily parry all questions put to them.

"My wife, Mrs. Lillian Burkitt, having left my bed and board, I will not be responsible for debts contracted by her.

"(Signed)

"WILLIAM BURKITT.

"February 24, 1908."

"My husband, William Burkitt, of 67 Speedway avenue, Irvington, never owned my bed; my board I was compelled to earn at the wash tubs.

"MRS. BURKITT."

Part one of this matrimonial set-to in two installments was given to the public by William Burkitt, of the Manhattan Park section of Irvington, in the first personal Monday. Installment No. 2 was a reply by the wife yesterday afternoon and under the surface is a drama which a Charles E. Blaney would probably have utilized some such a title as "Parted at the Hearth; or, They Didn't Like Each Other the Way They Thought They Would."

The truth is, Mr. and Mrs. Burkitt are a young couple who were married a few months ago. Trouble soon cropped out. Mrs. Burkitt leaves it to be inferred that she had to supply the necessaries of existence.

Mr. Burkitt wanted the world to know that he would not assume responsibility for his wife's actions, and so the family war was waged in the newspapers.

A reporter could not find either Mr. or Mrs. Burkitt at home. Mrs. Burkitt, the neighbors said, was away washing clothes to earn a livlihood, as she wont to do every day in the week except Sundays. She was staying with some relatives. They couldn't say anything about the row. The neighbors spoke very kindly of Mrs. Burkitt and not so well of her husband.

"From Equator to Artic Circle."

"From the Equator to the Artic Circle," will be the subject of an interesting illustrated lecture to be given at the Warren chapel, tonight, by State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman for the benefit of the Christian Endeavor Society. The views to be shown were taken by Mr. Ackerman on the several trips abroad and they are unusually fine. The lecture will describe a great many unusual incidents and facts brought to Mr. Ackerman's attention while traveling through foreign countries.

—For the remainder of the week Neuman Brothers will quote the following special prices on flour by the barrel: Pillsbury, $6.85; Heckers, $6.65; Gold Medal, $6.50. Place orders at once.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, of the First Baptist church, will be the speaker at the Plainfield Rescue Mission meeting at 8 o'clock tonight.

The Christian Endeavor Society meeting at the Park Avenue Baptist church, tomorrow night, will be of special interest. Mrs. A. E. Finn and Irving Van Winkle will be the leaders.

The Young People's Association meeting at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church will be postponed tomorrow night for one week, on account of the preparatory services to be held at that time.

The Plainfield Rescue Mission, 100 Madison avenue, desires cast-off clothing for the poor. Persons having such clothing to contribute are requested to communicate with Superintendent John La Matty.

Ira W. Travell, principal of the Plainfield High School, will take charge of the prayer meeting at Hope chapel, tonight, and will give a report of the recent Men's Club conference held in Philadelphia.

The vested choir of Grace church under the direction of W. E. MacClymont, organist and choirmaster, will sing Barnby's "Rebekah" at the church on Monday night. Members of the Cranford Choral Union will assist.

Rev. J. W. Musson, pastor, and the other officials of Faith chapel, are making arrangements for a series of revival meetings to be held at the chapel this spring. Efforts are being made to obtain a well-known religious worker and evangelist from New York.

DANGEROUS TRESTLE CUTS OFF MONTCLAIR.

Made unsafe by the heavy rain, the Lackawanna Railroad trestle over Moffat's Pond, between Montclair and Glen Ridge, was abandoned yesterday by the company, which decided to discontinue running trains over it until repairs can be made. In consequence all trains for Montclair came to a stop at Glen Ridge, and passengers were transported to and from Montclair via trolley. The tie-up was the cause of great inconvenience to the army of commuters that returns to Montclair every evening, the annoyance of the transfer in such disagreeable weather being augmented by crowded trolley cars and ignorance of the schedule.

There was much condemnation of the railroad company for the conditions which would allow such a large town as Montclair to be cut off in the manner that it was yesterday. The trouble that the trestle caused the Lackawanna, it is believed, will hurry construction of a double track between Montclair and Bloomfield, which has long been promised. Commuters assert that if the railroad company had properly attended to the interests of Montclair the double track would have been placed ere this, and the trestle which succumbed to yesterday's rain storm would have been replaced by a substantial structure.

COMES FROM ROME IN EFFORT TO SAVE SON.

Trenton, Feb. 27.—Cosmo Tomasi, a man of some political prominence in Rome, Italy, has crossed the Atlantic and come to this city in an effort to save the life of his son, Michael Tomasi, who is under sentence to be electrocuted at State prison the week beginning March 9. Tomasi was convicted last September of killing Delia Congilio at Lambertville and was sentenced to the electric chair.

Mrs. Congilio was the boarding mistress of Tomasi and the murder occurred during a quarrel. Tomasi shot the women and she died in St. Francis' Hospital in this city. He fled from Lambertville and was captured at Hopewell. He is twenty-five years old.

Cosmo Tomasi called on J. Lefferts Conard, a lawyer, today, and asked him to take up the matter of saving his son's life. Mr. Conard has taken the case under advisement and will probably apply for a reprieve to Governor Fort. The conviction of Tomasi has already been passed by the Court of Errors and Appeals and sustained, so the only recourse now is a reprieve in order to get the sentence before the Court of Pardons.

The elder Tomasi is a man of good family and some means, and says that he will do everything in his power to save his son from execution.

Letter-carrier Charles B. Stephens, who has been detained at home with a severe attack of grip, has returned to duty.

CONTESTS OF SLEEP-FASTING.

Peculiar Entertainment That Was Popular in the '60s.

"Sleep-fasting matches, before the law put a stop to them, took place frequently in this country," said a specialist in insomnia. "Yes, back in the '50s and '60s sleep-fasting was as popular a form of sport as football. Champion sleep-fasters were idolized by the girls in hoopskirts and waterfalls. The ordinary youth who had to sleep once in 24 hours wasn't one, two three in those days. W. C. Woodford of San Francisco was the champion of all the sleep-fasters. In the famous contest of 1860 this man kept awake for 168 hours, 48 minutes—over a week. He was a little, thin man of a nervous temperament. Henry K. Jackson of Detroit held the next best record—144 hours 17 minutes. Third came Adolph Mueller of Milwaukee, whose record was 142 hours 57 minutes. These men are all dead now. Why were sleep fasts so popular with our fathers? Besides their unhealthfulness, they were tame beyond belief. What, when you come to think of it, could be tamer than merely watching a lot of men keep awake?"

WHY THE BASQUE COW DIED.

The Owner Had Seen a Woman the First Thing in the Morning.

Prof. Beziat de Bordes of the University of Michigan faculty was lecturing on the Basque people and their customs. On the subject of their superstitions he told the following: "I was walking down the street in a little Basque village one day when a man came excitedly toward me. After glancing furtively about he whispered: 'Hush! She is dead.' 'Who?' I asked, wondering whether the man had lost a lovely daughter or a dutiful wife. 'My cow! She died this morning,' was the answer. 'And,' he added, 'it isn't hard to explain. The first thing I saw this morning when I glanced out of the window was—a woman. Fate is against me.'"

A Good Loser.

"But," said the girl's father, "what qualifications have you? What is there about you to make you consider yourself worthy of my daughter? Why do you think I ought to accept you as a son-in-law?" "Since you pin me down to it, I will tell you candidly," the young man replied, "that I have never had a very high opinion of my qualifications. I am here strictly because I hate to give pain. Your daughter accepted me before I had a chance to finish what I had started to say, which was not what she seemed to think it was going to be. If you do not think I am worthy of her and if you are convinced that I am not the man you desire for a son-in-law I will inform you right now that I am one of the best losers you ever saw."

The Prevalence of Drug Habits.

The daily press recently has again drawn public attention in connection with an inquest upon a woman who died of an overdose of cocaine to the deadly results of drug habits. All these habits are carried on in secret, and they are far more common than might be supposed. Those who know this best are the chemists and druggists, for they know how much of each of these drugs is sold for consumption in this way. They cannot help it, for the licensed druggists are not in a position to refuse to supply the drugs, provided the poison book is properly signed.—London Hospital.

Motherly Care.

Six-year-old Marion has an eminently practical mind, and the delights of dolls' tea parties, games, and other infantile joys are easily eclipsed by the promise of being allowed to dust the parlor or help cook. Marion has just acquired a new canary bird of tender age, and has added the care of Dick to her other small duties. On saying her prayers the other night she astonished her mother by adding as a postscript: "And God bless my birdie, and let him grow up to be a strong, healthy useful little canary bird!"

Saving Grace of Humor.

Blessed are the cartoonists and the satirists and the funmakers. For by enlarging upon our follies and foibles and conspicuities they awaken us to their elements of the ridiculous and lead us with wisdom to temper exuberance. Blessed is the saving grace of humor. For where humor is, treason finds no fertile soil, deceit flourishes not, hypocrisy withers and dies, greed is tempered and reason only rules.

An Exception.

"Children," observed the teacher, "you must not use the expression, 'Up against it.' It is slang." "Well," said a bright lad, "I saw an automobile go into a wall full tilt yesterday." "Yes, but we're talking about something else now." "But I was goin' to say," continued the lad, "if the machine wasn't up against it I'd like to know what."

A Joy to Him.

"Hey! wait?" cried the first boy, "ain't yer vaccination healed up yet?" "Naw!" replied the other. "Huh! don't it make yer mad?" "Naw! de doctor told mom I mustn't take a bath till it's all healed."

Didn't Appreciate His Blessings.

POLICE PLAY "COME ONS," GET "GOLD BRICK" MEN

Victims of two constables, whom they are charged with attempting to swindle by a "gold brick" game, Joseph Martin and Herman, alias John Eisenberg, are prisoners in the Essex county jail, Newark. When arrested Martin first said that he lives at No. 640 Market street, Philadelphia, but when it was pointed out to him that is a business house, he concluded that his proper address is New York and said that he lives at the Broadway Central Hotel when he is home. Eisenberg is a New Yorker, but has been for some time in San Francisco, having recently returned East.

They were arrested by Constables Thomas and Meyer, of the office of Sheriff Frank H. Sommer, after Thomas had successfully played the part of a "come-on" for several days. On information received by the Sheriff the constables had been detailed to investigate stories that two men, who were alleged to be Martin and Eisenberg, were working a "gold brick" game in Newark. Thomas and Meyer made the acquaintance of the two men and were offered $20,000 worth of gold for $2,000 in cash. Thomas, professing to have money to invest in the deal, said he would pay the $2,000 if he could get a look at the $20,000, which Martin and Eisenberg told him was partly the accumulation of gold stolen by miners in California and partly gold resulting from the looting of San Francisco immediately after the earthquake.

The four met by appointment at High street and Springfield avenue, and the plan was to go to the place where the gold was secreted, but instead, Thomas and Meyer declared their identity and took Martin and Eisenberg to the county jail. Postal cards and registered letter receipts from cities in various parts of the country, money orders and a small amount of cash were found on Martin.

Martin and Eisenberg were taken to the Newark police headquarters yesterday afternoon and photographed and measured in the Bertillon Bureau. They were then charged with being disorderly persons and returned to jail to be held pending further investigation of their "gold brick" scheme. Detective Sergeant Tuite has been assigned from police headquarters to aid the Sheriff's men in the case.

Commuters Misrepresented.

Many commuters are much indignant over the report published in another paper that they had signed a petition to the court asking that the extreme penalty for assault and battery be meted out to James Wagner. They declare that what they signed was a petition testifying to the good character and standing of Jeremiah Garretson.

Lieut. T. G. Gottschalk, who has been spending the past week with Miss Grant, of Randolph road, left today for Milwaukee.

COMMEND ACKERMAN BILL

How Leading Newspapers View Civil Service Measure Passed by Senate.

COMPLIMENT UNION'S SENATOR.

New York Tribune Praises Bill, Whose Author It Says Is One of the Greatest of Jersey Lawmakers.

Following are some editorial references to the Ackerman bill which are worth reading:

NEWARK EVENING NEWS.

The indications are now favorable for the enactment by the Legislature of a civil service law that will be acceptable to the people and that will bring about greater efficiency in the conduct of public offices. The Ackerman bill that passed the Senate yesterday, with only three votes against it, is a well digested measure. It was drawn with infinite pains, after long consideration, and was then revised with the advice of experts from this and other States, who have made a serious study of civil service reform, not only theoretically, but practically. The best features of other bills that had been presented to the Legislature were engrafted in the Ackerman measure, and there can be no good reason offered why it should not be made into law.

It seems to be the sentiment of the leaders of both parties in the Assembly that there will be no difficulty in passing the bill through that body. Democratic Leader Sullivan has denied that there has been a combination formed between members of his party and certain Republicans to bring about the defeat of the bill, and he expects to vote for it unless he discovers what he considers some great defect in it. In other words, there is to be no opposition to the proposed law on merely partizan grounds, as has been the case in the past. This is the most encouraging feature of the situation, as it is a guarantee that the bill is drawn with so much fairness that a fight against it could not be justified in the eyes of the people of the State. Its passage will add considerable expense to the cost of government, but that outlay ought to be more than offset by the improvement of the service that will be rendered under the provisions of the act. The law is mandatory so far as State officials are concerned, and in counties and municipalities it can be made effective wherever the voters desire it. If it works well in the State, there should be no question but that it would be taken advantage of generally.

The struggle to bring about this reform has been a long and arduous one. It has been opposed for years by the politicians, without regard to party, and had it not been for the "new idea" movement there is little reason to believe that it would have been adopted for many more years. The agitation for the change brought about the placing in both party platforms of the pledge for civil service reform, and this pledge is now about to be carried out, with the consequence that New Jersey will take its place with other progressive States which have adopted the merit system in filling the public offices.

NEW YORK TRIBUNE.

Senator Ackerman, one of the most enlightened and efficient of New Jersey's lawmakers, has secured the passage of his civil service bill through the Senate of that state by the decisive majority of 13 votes to 3. How it will fare in the Assembly is yet to be determined, but there is reason for hoping and expecting that the latter body, under the admirable leadership of Mr. Martin, will also pass it without material change, and that it will promptly be enacted into law.

Of the desirability, we might say the necessity, of such a measure there can be little doubt. It is an anomaly that New Jersey, a state so well governed in many respects, should so long have left its civil service in the bondage and darkness of the old spoils system. Last year there were searching investigations of various departments of the government, some of which revealed deplorable abuses, nearly all of which were pretty directly attributable to the spoils system of appointment.

The measure prepared by Senator Ackerman seems on the whole to be well adapted to remedy existing evils and to place the civil service of the state upon the basis of an enlightened merit system. It provides not only for tenure of place during good behavior but also for appointments after examination for the ascertainment of fitness. Obviously these two principles are of equal and fundamental importance. It would be mockery to make such a law as that which was proposed as a substitute for Senator Ackerman's bill, provid-

KELLY AGAIN JAILED ON WIFE'S COMPLAINT

Nicholas Kelly is in a cell at North Plainfield headquarters, charged with an attempt to beat his wife, whom previous attacks forced her to leave him and take lodgings on Pearl street. Mrs. Kelly bears marks of a brutal attack made by the husband when he met her on Grant avenue Wednesday night, bruising her about the face and head before she could escape from his wrath. Last night Chief Marshal Weiss was notified by telephone that Kelly, again on the war path, was breaking down the door of his wife's lodging on Pearl street, in an effort to again attack the frightened woman who had taken refuge behind the locked door.

The Chief arrested the man after a short struggle and took him to the lock-up, where he is awaiting a hearing before Borough Recorder Dolliver. Kelly has a sentence hanging over his head from the borough judge, and will probably get a stiff term tonight. Mrs. Kelly said that she would appear against him to press charges at the hearing, but she has such fear of the man that she may not put in an appearance. This has been the case on other occasions.

Kelly's record is a series of charges of cruelty against his wife. The two have not been living together for several years past, Mrs. Kelly boards with the Misses Lane, on Pearl street, and her husband lives a free life as far as lodgings are concerned. The attack on her on Grant avenue has aroused the sympathies of several boroughites, who will appear in her behalf at the hearing.

INTERDENOMINATIONAL PRAYER-MEETING HELD

A largely-attended interdenominational prayer meeting was held in Vincent chapel, yesterday afternoon, under the auspices of the Women's Home Missionary Society of the First M. E. church. An invitation was extended to the women's missionary societies of all the Protestant churches of the city and borough and there were representatives present from the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian, First Presbyterian, Trinity Reformed, Park Avenue Baptist, First Baptist, Grace M. E. Monroe Avenue M. E. and Congregational churches.

As president of the Women's Auxiliary of the First M. E. church, Mrs. Noah W. Pike was the leader of the meeting and directed the program. A majority of the women present took part in the service, commenting on selected Scriptures, texts and reading items concerning home mission work in the interest of which the service was held.

An additional feature was the singing by a quartet composed of Miss Jessie Haynes, alto; Mrs. Thomas MacDonald, soprano; George Smith, tenor, and B. F. Tallamy, bass. They opened the service with the singing of "My Faith Looks Up to Thee," and later two other numbers were given in a pleasing manner. The meeting proved to be a helpful and inspiring one, arousing deeper thought and interest in the cause of home missions which it is believed will result in greater efforts in the future.

GEO. CUBBERLEY SURPRISED BY FRIENDS ON BIRTHDAY.

George J. Cubberley, whose birthday came yesterday, was surprised at his home on Pearl street last night when a party of friends "dropped in" on him with presents and felicitations of the occasion. The affair was arranged by Mr. Cubberley's brother, Walter Cubberley, and proved a complete surprise. The evening was passed with games and music and later refreshments were served.

Among those present were the Misses Edna Gould, Lillian Peterson, Lillian Hansen, Henrietta Hansen Caroline Martin, Louisa Martin, Miss Snyder and Miss Otilla Dentle, of Trenton; Charles Frederickson, William Milligan, George Van Horn, Augustus Van Arsdale, Martin Hansen, William, George and Walter Cubberley.

"Camp Fair" at Mt. Zion Church.

The army workers of the Mt. Zion A. M. E. church will hold a "Camp Fair," in the church, beginning Tuesday night, March 17, and closing Friday night, March 20. A program will be presented each night in the upper room of the church from 8:30 to 9:30, after which there will be a sale of goods in the Sunday-school rooms. The workers have been divided into four companies, known as Co.'s A, B, C and D, with Captains Rev. E. B. Maynard, John Jones, A. P. White and Oliver Floyd in charge. Rev. J. T. Diggs, the pastor, will have general supervision of the fair.

RED MEN HOLD POW WOW

Heap Big Indians Smoke the Pipe as Representatives of 193 Tribes in N. J.

PLAINFIELDERS AT COUNCIL.

Second Strongest Order In State Numerically Holding Sessions Today at the Y. M. C. A. Building n Trenton.

Great Sachem Frank P. Jackson, of Camden, is presiding today over the sessions of the Improved Order of Red Men in their fifty-seventh annual council fire, and the town is full of "Indians," at Trenton. The sessions are being held in the Y. M. C. A. building in that city. District Court Judge William Newcorn and Charles Holstein were prominent among the Plainfield delegation.

In the annual address yesterday Great Sachem Jackson declared that it gave him much satisfaction to announce that the spirit of unrest which prevailed in the ranks of the Red Men one year ago had almost entirely disappeared.

He said he had traveled thousands of miles, and suggested the redistricting of the reservation. He also recommended the order's organ to every member and tribe. In concluding he said: "I wish you all the blessings that can come to a well-ordered life, and that when we are summoned to make our final surrender we may meet in the celestial wigwam, where the council fire of love and glory burneth forever in righteousness."

In the afternoon the following were elected officers, after one of the hottest contested elections in years; Great prophet, Frank P. Jackson, Camden; great sachem, Emil Schabilon, Hackensack; great senior sagamore, Harry J. Rathbone, Trenton; great junior sagamore, John Thompson, Avon-by-the-Sea; great chief of records, Daniel M. Stevens, Camden; great keeper of wampum, William J. Smythe, Long Branch; representatives to the Grand Council of the United States, Frank P. Jackson, Sr., Camden; Herbert F. Stetser, Gloucester; James M. Coleman, Atlantic City; Clark Cole, Phillipsburg.

Sessions will continue until late this afternoon, when Great Senior Sagamore Joseph Farrar, of Philadelphia, will instal the newly-elected officers with special ceremonies. The attendance at the session this year is the largest in years, and is due to the large gathering of past sachems from the upper end of the State to elect Mr. Thompson great junior sagamore, which is equal to election to all of the higher offices of the State order in rotation, and to contest for representatives to the great council of the United States.

Reading of reports of the various officers were encouraging to the members. The report of Great Sachem Jackson was a lengthy one, and showed that during the year the order in the State gained a membership of 564 over the previous year, and, after the number of dismissals and withdrawals had been deducted, the total membership of the 193 tribes in the State is 26,638, and the order is now the second largest in the State, and in course of a year or two, Mr. Jackson declared, it will be the largest.

During the year he instituted two new tribes, one at Pitman Grove and the other at Montvale, and held district sessions in all districts of the State, and the receptions tendered him were very encouraging, and in closing his report he paid a high compliment to the other members of the board of great chiefs for their assistance.

Great Chief of Records Daniel M. Stevens, of Camden, who has just completed twenty-two years in that office, reported that the wealth of the tribes in the State is $559,048.36, an increase in assets of $36,605.55, notwithstanding that during the year $87,099.29 was paid out for relief of members, $31,766.95 for funeral benefits and $2,150.70 for widows and orphans, or a total of $121,006.94 for these three purposes.

The general expenses of the tribes for the year, outside of the above items, aggregated $130,555.79. The report of Great Keeper of Wampum Smythe showed that there is a balance in the general fund of $5,535.23; aged men's fund, $1,735.31; orphans' fund, $1,331.40.

Charles H. Fitzgerald, of Mount Holly, was the opponent of Great Chief of Records Stevens for re-election and made a good run.

At the closing session yesterday Great Sachem Jackson and Great Senior Sagamore Schabilon, who will take the great sachem's office at the close of the session, will be tendered receptions by the past sachems of their respective districts.

For two hours there was a hot discussion on a resolution introduced by Great Sachem David B. Peterson, to have a circular sent to every tribe in the United States in the interest of

HUNDREDS AT FUNERAL OF DR. J. B. PROBASCO

Attended by hundreds of prominent business and professional men, friends from every walk of life and scores of school children as well as public school teachers who have realized what he did for the cause of education, the funeral of Dr. John Buck Probasco was held in the First Baptist church this afternoon. The gathering was one of the largest that has attended a similar service in this city in years and included delegations from nearly a dozen organizations to which he belonged. The schools of the city closed at noon in order that the teachers and pupils might honor the memory of the departed president of the Board of Education and practically every local physician was in attendance.

The service was in charge of Rev. Dr. John A. Chambliss, pastor of the church and co-worker with Dr. Probasco, who has held the office of deacon in the congregation for many years. The clergymen paid a deserving tribute to the man who had been a friend to all men and who in the rush and hurry of every day life had not neglected to show consideration for others. Howard Case presided at the organ and during the service several selections were rendered by a quartet. The floral tributes numbered over a score of set pieces, among them being one from the school children.

Burial was made in Hillside cemetery, the following acting as honorary pall bearers: Dr. Henry M. Maxson and Leander N. Lovell, representing the Board of Education; J. E. Erickson and George H. Goddard, from the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital; Dr. George W. Endicott and Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, representing the Union County Medical Society; E. L. Bonny and Oliver B. Leonard, representing the First Baptist church; Dr. Frank C. Ard, for the Plainfield Clinic and Dr. Halsey, of New York.

PASTORS' ORGANIZATION

Rev. J. A. Chambliss Chosen President of the Plainfield Ministers' Association.

HOLD FIVE MEETINGS A YEAR.

Grace Church Parish House to Be the Meeting Place—Committees Are Appointed.

Plainfield pastors, both active and retired, met yesterday afternoon in the parish house of Grace Episcopal church for the purpose of effecting a reorganization of the Plainfield Ministers' Association. The body had been allowed to become inactive because there was no president and at the suggestion of several members the association met, elected officers, adopted a constitution and by-laws and transacted other business.

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, of the First Baptist church, was chosen president; Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, vice, president, and Rev. A. C. McCrea, of the First M. E. church, secretary and treasurer. Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, Rev. Dr. Zelie and Rev. E. E. Roberson were named a committee on program and entertainment for the coming year.

Rev. Dr. Zelie, Rev. Dr. Chambliss, Rev. L. R. Howard and Rev. Mr. McCrea were appointed a committee on constitution and by-laws and the report presented was adopted. Stated meetings of the association will be held on the second Thursday in February, April, June, October, December, while provisions were made for special meetings at the call of the president.

Upon the invitation of Mr. Stevenson it was decided to hold the meetings in the parish house of Grace church, unless the association is invited to meet elsewhere at any time. After the meeting yesterday refreshments were served at the direction of Mr. Stevenson and a social hour enjoyed.

The ministers present yesterday were Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, Rev. C. H. Schneegas, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, Rev. Dr. George H. Whitney, Rev. Edward Love, Rev. A. E. Finn, Rev. E. E. Roberson, Rev. J. O. McKelvey, Rev. C. L. Goodrich and Rev. A. C. McCrea. Several other divines who received invitations to attend the meeting were prevented from doing so for various reasons, but they signified their intention to identify themselves with the association.

CHARGED WITH THEFT.

Colored Man Only Recently Released from State Prison Accused By Two Women.

Thomas Holland, colored, of Plainfield avenue, was arrested by Patrolman Vanderweg, last night, charged with stealing a watch from one woman living in the neighborhood and $2 from another. The complainants stated that he had entered their homes while they were out and taken the watch and money from bureau drawers. The prisoner was arraigned in the city court, this morning, but at Chief Kiely's request the matter was adjourned until Monday morning.

Holland was only recently released from the State prison having been one of the local men committed two years ago on charges preferred by little girls.

Louis Mulford to Undergo Operation.

Having located the bullet, a consultation of physicians was held this morning at the hospital in the case of Louis Mulford, the 18-year-old boy who was shot last Sunday by Clarence Drake, the ticket agent at the Grant Avenue station. It was decided that an operation was imperative and arrangements were made to remove the piece of lead. The condition of the lad was today reported to be very good and it is believed that he will recover unless complications should develop.

His First Wedding Anniversary.

In honor of the first anniversary of his wedding, Bertram C. Firstbrook, of Liberty street, entertained the Gold Medal minstrels, of which he is a member, at his home last night. Vocal and instrumental music were the features of the informal program and at midnight supper was served. During the evening the guests presented Mr. and Mrs. Firstbrook with a silver loving cup suitably inscribed.

"SUSPICIOUS CHARACTERS" WERE WOULD-BE CALLERS

Three Polaks, one of whom was looking for his sister, who is employed as a servant at a residence on Prospect place, got an awful scare early last night when they were arrested by the borough police as suspicious characters. None of them could "speak-a da English" or even give their names intelligibly, but there were three distinctly interpretable sighs of relief, when, after a third degree hearing, in which several interpreters figured, they were allowed to depart in freedom from the green-lighted home of the Somerset street brass-buttoned bluecoats.

Mrs. Samuel Cunningham noticed the men standing at Grove street and Prospect place early in the evening, and borough police headquarters was notified. Marshals Pope and Keller went out to arrest the men, but the foreigners' fear of the uniformed officials caused them to take flight at the approach of the officers. They were taken to headquarters, petrified with fear, but after much discordant conversation through interpreters, satisfied the court that they were only looking for the sister of one of the trio, and, instead of being out on Black Hand business, were decked for a social call. Through the proprietor of an intelligence office, the sister was located later in the evening.

SENATOR ACKERMAN'S PICTURES OF FOREIGN TRIP

Exhibiting more than a hundred beautiful steriopticon slides from photographs taken on recent trips abroad, State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman gave an interesting lecture at Warren chapel last night under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society. The views shown were in many instances colored and won appreciative admiration, especially those from photographs taken by the Senator in Japan, "the country of the cherry blossoms." Perhaps the picture which proved of the greatest interest was one taken by the Senator in "the land of the mid-night sun," during his trip through the far North. This photograph was taken at 2 o'clock in the morning.

Photographs of scenes in Mexico, the Yosemite Valley, China, India and Japan were also shown, as well as some excellent pictures taken by the Senator on board the Lusitania, on which he was a passenger on the maiden voyage. Photographs of the big ship, taken by Rolland D. Rice upon her arrival in port, were also shown on the screen. In the course of his remarks upon Japan the Senator showed views of the floral beauties of the country and a series of Japanese signs in English, so ludicrously worded as to prove that "a little learning is a dangerous thing" in the idiomatic language of this country.

The lecture was well attended and $37 was netted for the work of the church Christian Endeavor Society.

EVANGELIST MUNHALL TO SPEAK AT Y. M. C. A.

Dr. L. W. Munhall, an evangelist who will speak at the men's meeting at the Y. M. C. A. auditorium Sunday afternoon, is known to many in Plainfield as the leader of the great Ocean Grove Bible class. This class numbers over 4,000 members and includes prominent clerical and lay representatives. Hundreds of these are attracted to Ocean Grove solely by Dr. Munhall's masterful teaching and his wonderful ability as leader of the open paliament and general question box discussion following the lecture hour.

The work of teaching is, however, purely incidental with Dr. Munhall. He is pre-eminently an evangelist, and one of the most prominent evangelists of the time. Professor Luther T. Townsend, of Boston, in writing of one of Dr. Munhall's addresses in Tremont Temple, states: "It was the most masterful address I ever heard in Tremont Temple, and I have heard there some mighty men."

A special musical program has been arranged for Sunday afternoon. This will include a short orchestral concert by the association symphony orchestra under the direction of Martin A. Korff, and a baritone solo by Charles L. Lewis, of the Lotus Glee Club. The doors of the auditorium will be open at 3:15 o'clock.

Decision Favors Mrs. Frucht.

The case of Abram Kunzman against Mrs. Rosa Frucht in the Supreme Court to recover damages through the failure of the latter to convey a house and lot on West Fourth street to the plaintiff, has been decided in favor of Mrs. Frucht. Her counsel, Codington & Swackhamer filed a demurrer at the last term of the Supreme Court and it has been upheld by the decision of the court.

THE CHAPEYS CONFESS

Daughter Weakens Under "Third Degree" and Tells of Family's Wrongdoing.

LOOT STORED IN NEW YORK.

Robbed Hotels in All Parts of the State—Prisoners Held in $500 Bail Each for the Grand Jury.

Efforts on the part of the local police to secure a confession from the Chapey family met with success last night, when Gertrude Wallenhagen, the daughter, succumbed to the "third degree" and gave Chief Kiely a complete statement as to the swindling and thievery of herself and husband, her mother and brothers. When the others became convinced that she had weakened, they broke the silence they had maintained since their arrest and corroborated all told. Their operations have covered even a wider field than was at first surmised and it may be several weeks before the amount of money they secured on worthless checks and from the sale of stolen property can be determined.

Mrs. Wallenhagen told Chief Kiely that the family had stolen silverware, clothing and other property from hotels in all parts of the State and that most of it had been taken to New York and placed in a storage warehouse to be disposed of whenever convenient. A considerable amount of loot secured from Messer's hotel at East Orange, she said, had been stored in a vacant barber shop at Summit. In company with Detective-Sergeant John Flynn and County Detective Galatian, the young woman went to New York this morning and will secure the release of the goods held at the warehouse. An effort will then be made to have it identified and returned to the owners.

The four prisoners here, Mrs. Chapey, Gertrude and John Paul Wallenhagen and Lucian Chapey, were arraigned before Judge William N. Runyon this morning on a specific charge of securing $24 from D. Demolli, a local caterer, on two worthless checks. They were signed by Mrs. Chapey, and Wallenhagen and Lucian Chapey had taken them to be cashed, thus being included in the complaint for aiding and abetting. Gertrude admitted that she had also asked Demolli to cash the checks and was held on the same charge. They were remanded in $500 bail each for the Grand Jury and will be committed to Elizabeth this afternoon unless they secure the bonds.

In the confession made by the daughter, she stated that the family had either beaten hotels out of board bills or stolen property from them and passed checks at Trenton, Princeton, Asbury Park, Bound Brook, Plainfield, Westfield, Summit, East Orange, Jersey City and Long Branch. In some instances she was unable to recall the names of the hostelries or what had been secured and the others were equally as forgetful. They secured $300 worth of clothing from Willett's hotel at Westfield and most of the apparel the women had on when arrested was included in this lot.

Chief Bell, of East Orange, in company with J. M. Messer, proprietor of Messer's hotel, called at headquarters yesterday and the latter positively identified the four prisoners as the family that had stolen a lot of silverware, table linen and clothing from his place. Another son of Mrs. Chapey, it was stated by her, had been arrested at Asbury Park and as far as she could tell, had been committed to the Monmouth county jail at Freehold.

A search of the young Wallenhagen after his arest at Summit, disclosed a false pocket in the waistband of his trousers in which was found a pair of diomand ear-rings, several pairs of gold cuff buttons and three gold studs, and in other pockets were found a bunch of skeleton keys which were found to open any one of the 150 rooms in the Beechwood Hotel at Summit. Small mirrors and a lot of bathroom fixtures were also found in the man's pocket.

Prize Cake Was Demolished.

In addition to the regular amateur numbers at the weekly "hook night" at the New Plainfield theatre, last night, four colored couples gave a prize cake walk. The cake was awarded "Skinny" Wilson and his lady friend but before it could be given him another colored gentleman picked it up and accidentally dropped it on the floor. "Skinny" and his partner were given its equivalent in cash. The performance throughout was one of the best yet provided and was witnessed by a capacity audience.

STOMACH IS SEAT OF HUMAN LIFE

New Theory Advanced by Young Man Is Spreading Over Entire Country.

L. T. Cooper's theory concerning the human stomach, which he claims to prove with his new medicine, is being given more respect and comment every day.

Cooper claims that 90 per cent. of all ill health is due to stomach trouble. When interviewed about his theory recently, he said: "Stomach trouble is the great curse of the 20th century so far as the civilized races are concerned. Practically all of the chronic ill health of this generation is caused by abnormal stomachic conditions. In earlier days, when the human race was closer to nature, and men and women worked all day out of doors, digging their frugal existence from the soil, the tired, droopy, half-sick people that are now so common, did not exist.

"To be sure, there was sickness in those days, but it was of a virulent character, and only temporary. There was none of this half-sick condition all the time with which so many are afflicted nowadays.

"I know positively that every bit of this chronic ill health is caused by stomach trouble. The human stomach in civilized people today is degenerate. It lacks tone and strength. This weakness has gradually come through a sedentary existence. I further know that few people can be sick with the digestive apparatus in perfect shape. The sole reason for my success is because my New Discovery medicine tones the stomach up to required strength in about six weeks' time. That is why I have had more people come and thank me wherever I have gone to introduce my medicine, than I have had time to talk with."

Among the immense numbers of people who are now strong believers in Cooper's theory and medicine is Mrs. M. E. Delano, a prominent resident of the suburb of Brookline, Boston, Mass. She says: "For several years I was broken in health, caused primarily by stomach and nerve troubles. I gradually became worse, until recently I was compelled to go without solid food for days at a time. I had sour stomach, palpitation of the nerves of stomach and heart, dyspepsia, and extreme nervousness. I suffered terribly with insomnia, and my liver, bowels and whole system gradually became deranged. I felt instant relief the first day I began this Cooper medicine. I now feel like a new being. Today I walked all over town, shopping—something I have not done for years

"I make this statement wholly from a sense of duty. I feel I owe it to anyone who might find relief and renewed happiness as I have done."

The record made by the Cooper medicines is astonishing. We will take pleasure in discussing it with anyone who wishes to know about them —T. S. Armstrong.

WOULD HONOR MEMORY OF BRAVE ENGINEER.

Hoboken, Feb. 28.—Several commuters on the Dover express of the Lackawannat Railroad have started a movement along the line to express in some substantial way their appreciation of the heroic self-sacrifice displayed by Engineer John Lyman, who lost his life February 7 when his engine jumped the rails just beyond the Bergen tunnel and turned over, pinning him under it.

Trainmen and passengers say that Lyman might have jumped and saved his life, in which case many passengers might have been injured and the railroad company put to great expense for damage suits. Instead, Lyman stuck to his post of duty, with the result that the passengers were left in their seats and he was the only victim.

So far the Lackawanna officials have made no sign that they intend doing anything for Lyman's young widow and child, who are living at 1112 Hudson street, this city. Mrs. Lyman recently lost her father, John Peters, who also was a Lackawanna engineer. Deprived of her natural source of income, Mrs. Lyman is facing the future with doubt, and if the movement toward a testimonial meets with success, it will probably take the form of financial aid for the widow and child.

WOMAN DIES ON TRAIN.

Mrs. M. E. Clemmens, sixty-eight years old, of East Orange, succumbed to apoplexy yesterday morning while riding on a Pennsylvania express train between Elizabeth and Newark. The body was taken to the baggage room of the Pennsylvania station when the train reached Elizabeth.

With her niece, Mrs. E. T. Wellford, Mrs. Clemmens got on the train in Newark at fifteen minutes past eight. She was going to her home, at Newport News, Va. Shortly after the train left the Newark station Mrs. Clemmens was stricken.

Mrs. Wellford telegraphed to her husband, who is pastor of the First Presbyterian church at Newport News. He in turn telegraphed to the Rev. Eben B. Cobb, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church, of Elizabeth, and the latter immediately rendered all assistance possible. Arrangements have been made to send the body to Baltimore.

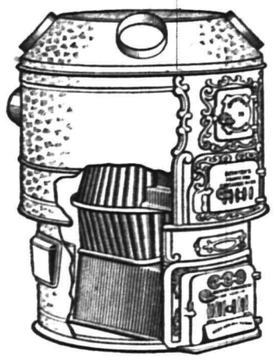
Did You Burn TooMuchCoal?



It's cheaper to have a good furnace, to say nothing of the comfort. The best furnace is the

BOYNTON

The Furnace with the Square Fire Pot

It has the only fire pot that furnishes perfect combustion, burns all the coal cleanly, without clinkers or clogging, and at the same time saves coal and labor. Look up a Boynton dealer and ask him to explain.

There are BOYNTON heating plants of all kinds. Ask about our Round or Sectional Boilers for steam or hot water. Also ranges.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

BASEBALL.

Playing dates for the coming season as reported by the schedule committee were formally adopted Wednesday at the regular spring meeting of the American League at the Hotel Breslin. Outside of this action the business transacted at the session, lasting two hours, was largely of a routine nature.

The American League season opens on April 14 at Chicago, New York, Boston and Cleveland. There are only fifteen conflicting dates between the teams of the two leagues, and New York escapes entirely, with no days on which both league teams will be playing.

On the opening day, Tuesday, April 14, the Yankees will have the Philadelphia Athletics as their opponents at American League Park. For four days Connie Mack's men will be on the hill-top, and then come the Washington Senators for a three-game series. Clark Griffith will then go down to Philadelphia for four days, returning on April 27, to play Boston. After the Boston series the Yankees will be on the road playing Eastern teams until May 21, when Chicago plays in New York for the first time.

There will be games on twelve Saturdays at American League Park, while the holiday dates for the Yankees are Memorial Day and Labor Day. Philadelphia will be the opposing team in the double-header on Memorial Day, and Washington will help entertain the hill-top crowd on Labor Day. The Yankees will play two games at Washington on July 4.

The greatest number of conflicting dates occur in Chicago, both teams playing in that city on May 3, 10 and 31, June 28, July 5, September 6 and October 4. There are four conflicting dates for St. Louis, three for Philadelphia and one for Boston. Chicago will play at home on seventeen Sundays, twelve Saturdays and July 4.

Griffith's men will meet the first Western team away from home, on June 4, when they begin a four-game series at Cleveland. Then in order come Detroit, Chicago and St. Louis, all being four-game series except Chicago. The Yankees get home from their first Western invasion on June 27.

Pitcher Doscher, formerly of the Brooklyns, has been reinstated by the National Commission. The Brooklyn club was fined $250 for covering up Doscher several seasons ago. Pitcher Oscar Knolls, who played in one game for Brooklyn in 1906 and then jumped, appealed for reinstatement, but his appeal was rejected. The case of Frank Arellanes, the pitcher who signed with the New York Americans last summer, was taken up. It was shown that Arellanes previously had accepted terms with the San Francisco club and he was awarded to San Francisco by the commission.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

A preliminary organization of the School Athletic League of Jersey City was effected Wednesday night at a meeting of principals, teachers, members of the Board of Education and business men in the City Hall, Jersey City. The league will be similar to the School Athletic League organized in New York four years ago, and pupils of every public, parochial and private school in Jersey City will be eligible. Each school will have a separate athletic association, with representation in the central league.

Addresses were made by Lee F. Harmer, assistant secretary of the school athletic league of New York, who said that the league was an unqualified success, George G. Tennant, president of the Board of Education; Henry Snyder, City Superintendent of Schools; P. P. Pearce, physical director of the People's Palace, and several principals. The following chairmen of committees were appointed: Joseph H. Bernstein, organization; Eugene F. Kinkead, president of the Board of Aldermen, constitution, and Henry Snyder, nominations.

Pennsylvania defeated Columbia at basketball in an extra period game in the local gymnasium Wednesday night by a score of 16 to 15, and incidentally won the intercollegiate championship, although several games must still be played. The contest was marred by much rough and foul playing, and more nearly resembled a wrestling or boxing match at times.

Charles M. Daniels, of the New York Athletic Club, the world's champion amateur swimmer, broke another record Wednesday night in a special match race against his club mate, C. D. Trubenbach, at the Motor Boat and Sportsman's Show at Madison Square Garden. Daniels covered the eighty yards in 0:43 flat. This is two-fifths of a second better than the previous record made by himself at Pittsburg.

Three of the five cars in the 22,000-mile race from New York to Paris reached Chicago Wednesday night, while the other two were still 120-odd miles in the rear. The Thomas (American) car, which arrived Tuesday, got a careful overhauling, and Montague Roberts, the driver, a much needed rest. Roberts left yesterday for DeKalb and expects to make better time from now on.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

The Four Huntings, who are playing a three act version of their big vaudeville success, "The Fool House," a musical comedy along new lines, including acrobatic comedy which none do better because of their training in the circus for years, appear at the New Plainfield theatre next Monday night. Harry Dull, their manager, has engaged a company of forty, including singers and dancers to accentuate the tumbling stunts of the famous four. The Funny Dutchman, the comic Jew, and a bunch of pretty girls. The comedy with a plot keeps the characters in and out of hot water all the time and other people's mishaps are always delightful. The Four Huntings display skill and agility until you can't rest. The Four Huntings come right from New York with songs and characteristics that tickle the imagination and set the auditor a merry pace.

Joe Hertiz, who has been known as a singer and a comedian, makes his appearance at the New Plainfield theatre next Friday night in a play called "Our Friend Fritz." It was written by Langdon McCormick and the leading role, that of a young German, provides Mr. Hertiz with many opportunities to display his vocal talents, as well as his growing ability as a player. The play is a musical comedy drama, and is said to be never wanting in situations that afford the hero chances to defy all sorts of dangers, rescue imperiled innocence at the right moment, hunt the villains down and make himself the centre of other important events. Amid this strenuous stage existence he finds time to add to the interest with a tender ballad or lullaby. The excellent support includes Augusta West, R. J. Moy, Conrad Cantzon, Constance Glover, Walter Capfman, Aline Bennett, Carol Daly and others.

Al. H. Tyrrell, "that phunny pheller" with John W. Vogel's Big City Minstrels, which comes to the New Plainfield theatre, Saturday afternoon and night, March 7, is a wonder. Mr. Tyrrell is unique as a monologue artist, as he possesses a singing voice of much clarity and sweetness, something very few in his special line of stage work enjoy. He is as clever as the best and performs it with much more ease than any other performer in his line. He responds to his encores and exhausts his responses to the audience. Wherever Mr. Tyrrell appears he wins a loyal clientele.

CIVIL SERVICE.

What Senator Colby set out to do is being accomplished by Senator Ackerman. In other words, the Union parties in New Jersey placed on their to effect that which the Essex county leader has been aiming to bring about ever since he first espoused the cause and was placed in command of the New Idea forces. The issue is civil service, a political principle that both parties in New Jersey placed in their banners last fall, but it is quite certain that unless there had been such high-minded men in the legislative councills as Ackerman, Colby and Freilinghuysen the campaign promise would have been mere "pie crust." There was a time not long ago when people did not take seriously platform promises but that day is past as is shown in the hearty reception given to the Ackerman bill, the Perkins tax law and such other salutary legislation.

That the Ackerman measure, whose provisions have been fully explained in these columns, will be acceptable to the general public irrespective of political affiliations cannot be doubted. Almost without exception, the expressions of opinion both by public and private citizens as well as by the public press have been most favorable and indeed highly flattering to the committee having charge of the bill. Few there are who will agree with Senator Hichcliffe and the Trenton True American that the proposed law is too expensive. It entails an annual cost of approximately $30,000 to the State but verily that is a mere trifle when it is considered what a great evolution in government will be brought about by such means.

In another column will be found some expressions of the public press and to these we commend the attention of our readers.

ing merely for security of tenure and leaving all appointments to be made in the old way.

The Republican party of New Jersey, which now has overwhelming control of all branches of the State government, stands pledged to the enactment of an adequate measure of civil service reform. Senator Ackerman's is such a measure. The complete enactment of it will vindicate the good faith of the party and commend it to the confidence and gratitude of the people of the State.

ELIZABETH DAILY JOURNAL.

The success of the Ackerman civil service bill in the Senate yesterday is a source of congratulation to the friends of reform. But the bill has yet to run the gauntlet of the Assembly, and may not have easy sledding. The proposed law is one which does not appeal to certain legislators. No real reform ever does. If the measure becomes a law it will be because public opinion supports it, and because its friends put up the strangest kind of a fight for it.

the past sachems, who are making an effort to have the Great Council of the United States repeal the law prohibiting past sachems from being representatives to that body, and it was passed by a large majority.

For three years the past sachems from the Camden district have been trying to get this resolution through, and they look upon it as a great victory. The circulars will be sent out with all of the great chiefs' names attached.

Hospital Governors, Baptists and Doctors Take Action on J. B. Probasco's Death

APPROPRIATE RESOLUTIONS.

Tributes of County and City Medical Socities, First Baptist Church and Muhlenberg Hospital Board of Governors.

Following are some of the resolutions of condolence passed on the death of Dr. John B. Probasco, whose funeral took place this afternoon:

THE FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH.

At the regular mid-week prayermeeting of the First Baptist church, Wednesday evening, about one hundred and fifty persons being present, the whole service was affected by the death of Dr. John B. Probasco. Several speakers made tender and appreciative reference to "the beloved physician," and the following memorial offered by O. B. Leonard, church clerk, was adopted by a rising vote:

In his passing from the earth life to the life eternal our brother, John B. Probasco, has left a void in the home, the church and the community. For his useful, active services among us there is reason to be thankful to our Havenly Father. We bless the Lord for the unimpeachable integrity which marked all his conduct as a public man. We magnify our God for what our brother was as a member of this household of faith,—so conscientious in his duties as an office bearer twenty-three years in sustaining the interests of the Church and the cause of religion in our midst.

We desire to place on record our esteem for "the beloved physician" as he went among us for a generation in his chosen profession, allaying our bodily pains, healing our infirmities of the flesh and bringing cheer to our troubled life.

For a period of nearly forty years the life and influence of Dr. Probasco have been so inwrought with the history of Plainfield, with its general civic interests, its public schools, its moral, religious and philanthropic activities, that the history of one could not be accurately written without largely introducing the history of the other.

We herewith express our sincere sympathy with the bereaved family and commend them to the God of all comfort, invoking for them and ourselves those heavenly consolations which alone can satisfy in such sad hours.

BOARD OF GOVERNORS OF MUHLENBERG HOSPITAL.

The Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital at a special meeting last night (Thursday) directed that the following entry be made upon its minutes:

Dr. John Buck Probasco was appointed a member of the visiting staff of Muhlenberg Hospital on November 26, 1880, and served in that capacity until September 29, 1902, when his resignation, induced by advancing years, impaired health and the weight of many public and private duties, was accepted by this Board. He was elected consulting surgeon on November 24, 1902, and held that office until his death, which occurred in the early morning of February 25, 1908. His official connection with the Hospital, therefore, covered a period of twenty-seven years.

His death has brought to the members of this Board deep regret and sense of bereavement in the loss of a fellow-worker and personal friend.

The Board hereby records its appreciation of his long-continued, patient and kindly work in and for the Hospital, and of the faithfulness and ability which characterized it.

We remember his uniform courtesy and the simple and unaffected dignity of manner which was the outward expression of the pure and upright nature of the man; and we offer his family our sincere sympathy.

UNION COUNTY DISTRICT MEDICAL SOCIETY.

The following resolutions of condolence have been adopted by the Union County District Medical Society:

WHEREAS, An over-ruling Providence has taken from among us Dr. John B. Probasco, for many years a valued member of the Union County District Medical Society, be it

RESOLVED, That we, the members of this society, hereby express our sense of loss in his death and our appreciation of his character and virtues as a man, and his unending and conscientious devotion to his profession.

RESOLVED, That we hereby express our very deep sympathy with his family, and that as far as possible we will attend the funeral services.

RESOLVED, That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the minutes and published in each of the daily papers of Plainfield, N. J., and that a copy be sent to the family of the deceased.

ELLIS W. HEDGES,
WM. H. MURRAY,
Committee.

The resolutions passed by the Medical Board of Muhlenberg Hospital were contained in yesterday's issue.

PLAINFIELD MEDICAL SOCIETY.

These resolutions were passed yesterday by the Plainfield Medical Society at a meeting at the Y. M. C. A.:

By the death of Dr. John B. Probasco the Plainfield Medical Society has lost one of its oldest and most valued members. His genial nature, his frank, honest manliness endeared him to us all. His unselfish devotion to his life work, ministering on his daily rounds, with equal care and graciousness to rich and poor alike; giving freely of his time and energy to the larger needs of the city where he lived; his undeviating adherence to what he believed to be true and right, stamped him as a man whom we all delighted to honor.

To his bereaved family we extend our sympathy. Living the last few years under the constant shadow of death, it is good for us to know that he has gone where there are no shadows and where there is no more death.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of the deceased and published in the Plainfield daily papers.

ATTEMPT TO BLOW UP HOUSE WITH DYNAMITE

Failure of an attempt to blow up with dynamite a frame tenement at No. 14 Bedford street, Newark, on Wednesday night was discovered early yesterday morning when Scally Caruso, a building contractor, whose family is one of three occpying the house, started for his place of business.

On the front stoop he found a condensed milk can containing a sufficient quantity of dynamite to wreck the house and shake up the whole neighborhood. The top of the can was tied on with a strong cord and in the centre of the cover was a hole through which a wax taper had been placed to act as a fuse. The fuse had been lighted and had burned down close to the top of the can and then gone out.

Caruso at once notified the police and the can of dynamite was taken to the Fourth precinct police station and deposited in a bucket of water for safe keeping. An explosive expert who examined the can and its contents expressed the belief that it must have been prepared by some one ignorant of such matters, as it probably would not have caused a deadly or destructive explosion, even if the fuse had burned down to the dynamite, owing to the several openings in the can.

In the house, besides Caruso and his wife and two children, apartments are occupied by Edward I. Annilly, a brother-in-law of Caruso, and Mr. and Mrs. Danneano, the latter being a sister of Mrs. Annilly. All deny knowledge of anything which can be regarded as a motive for an attempt to kill them and wreck the house, but the police are inclined to regard the placing of the dynamite on the stoop as the work of a "Black Hand," or at least of the same persons who in January sent Annilly a letter demanding that he give $5,000 to Salvatore Musumesce, a neighbor.

P. M. Van Cleef, of Richmond street, who has been detained at home for some time by illness, is much improved and is now able to go out occasionally.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

There are no houses for rent in this village. Almost every week would-be residents go away to seek homes in some other far less attractive suburb. This week two families were disappointed. Won't some enterprising land owner erect a few dozen houses to meet the needs of this growing place?

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Baptist church seems to have been unfortunate in their selection of a date of meeting lately for the last two dates fell in such stormy weather that the members could not attend. This was the case this week as well as last.

Tonight the talent of the Baptist church and their friends will render a musicale and literary for the benefit of the Christian Endeavorers in the auditorium of the church.

Colonel and Mrs. Deets have left here on their return journey to the Indian Reservation. They will, however, take in the sights of the Eastern States on their way.

TAFT'S AS TRENTON'S GUEST.

Fort Also, with Katzenbach as Toastmaster, at Banquet.

At the Trenton Chamber of Commerce dinner to be given at Trenton March 23, in honor of Secretary of War Taft and Governor Fort, there will be the novelty of a defeated Democratic Gubernatorial candidate presiding at a banquet tendered to the men who may be the Republican Presidential and Vice-Presidential candidates in the coming campaign. Counselor Frank S. Katzenbach, Jr., of Trenton, having yesterday consented to serve as master of toasts.

Officers of the Chamber of Commerce declare that the dinner has no political significance but it is generally believed that it is for the purpose of introducing Secretary Taft to New Jersey citizens and giving them an opportunity to see him and Governor Fort together. William J. Bryan was invited to address the meeting of the chamber some time ago but he was obliged to decline by reason of the press of other engagements.

$30,000 FOR A CIBORIUM.

Thirteenth Century Curio That Came From Malmesbury Abbey.

London, Feb. 28.—At Christie's auction rooms yesterday £6,000 (about $30,000) was paid for a ciborium, probably of English thirteenth century workmanship, 7 inches high and 6 inches in diameter, made of copper gilt and enamel, which it is believed came from Malmesbury Abbey.

A thousand guineas, the opening bid, was quickly capped by one of £1,600. Then followed a series of £100 advances until the choice object was knocked down.

The superb Henry VII, mazor, or drinking bowl, of maple wood with silver mounts, fetched £2,300. As the silver mounts weighed between five and six ounces, the price paid exceeded £400 an ounce. These articles were from the Braikenridge collection.

GETS "BLACK HAND" THREAT.

Charles Kind and his son, Otto, of Vineland, are much disturbed over a Black Hand letter, which bears the Millville postmark. Kind has a beer bottling business on the outskirts of Vineland, in Atlantic county. When he opened his mail Wednesday he found this warning:

"We will git you and your son Otto if you don't put to thousand dollars under the big stone at Brewster and Oke rode saterday nite by 12 o'clock."

The spot is near a clump of woods. The writing was a poor attempt at printing with a pen. In the left hand corner of the paper was a skull and crossbones; in the right corner a coffin; at the bottom on the left a stiletto, and the signature was a black hand. Kind turned the letter over to the police.

RECORD FOR CONGRESS FROM THE 9TH DISTRICT

Something like a boom has been started for George L. Record, former ex-corporation counsel, for the Republican nomination for Representative in Congress from the 9th District. The Democrats mentioned are William M. Smith, courthouse commissioner, and Eugene Kinkead, president of the Board of Aldermen. The district is now represented by Eugene Leake, a Democrat, who has declared he will not seek a renomination. He would encounter bitter opposition if he did because of his attack on Bryan in the House recently. The district has a small Republican plurality, as Governor Fort carried it by a margin of 311.

The first Representative from it was Allan Benny, a Democrat, who defeated Robert Carey by over eight hundred. Two years later, in 1904, Benny was beaten by Marshall Van Winkle by 2,425. In 1906, owing to the factional fight, the Republican nominee, Charles E. Pickett, was defeated by more than 5,000 by Leake. It has been a one-term district thus far.

Robert Davis, the Democratic chief of Hudson county, will be the guest of honor at a dinner next Thursday night, the sixtieth anniversary of his birth. It will be held in the hall of the Columbian Club, in Jersey City. Two of the speakers will be Robert Hudspeth, chairman of the Democratic State Committee, and Representative James Hamill.

ROW DISRUPTS HEALTH BOARD.

After an exciting meeting of the Hoboken Board of Health yesterday Dr. Henry B. Rue, who was appointed to membership on January 1, 1908, resigned. His resignation was brought about by the action of the Board in abolishing the office of attorney to the Board and the appointment of an inspector, and analyst. The salary of the attorney was $600 a year. The salary of the analyst, which office was created at the meeting, will be $1,200 a year.

During the meeting a delegation from the Board of Trade opposed the office of analyst. When the majority of the Board, overriding E. T. Stedman, president of the Board, and Dr. Rue, created the office Dr. Rue declared that he could see no economy in abolishing one office and establishing another at twice the salary.

Mr. Stedman was displeased by the action of the Board and threatened to resign.

Harry W. Lange, the attorney who was legislated out of office, said he would contest the action of the Board in the courts.

WIFE SUES WEALTHY BROKER.

Application was made yesterday to Judge Carr in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, for alimony for Mrs. Mary Bernardini, in her suit for separation from her husband, Michael Bernardini, a wealthy broker of Staten Island. As counsel for the husband had not had time to become familiar with the case, an adjournment was granted until Wednesday next.

Neither L. Lafflin Kellogg, who appeared for Mrs. Bernardini, nor David McClure, counsel for her husband, would permit the voluminous papers concerning the case to be seen. Bernardini is said to have started in business in Mulberry street, Manhattan. His counsel admitted that his income is now $40,000 or $50,000 a year. Mr. Kellogg said that while Mr. Bernardini and his wife are still living in the same house she is not provided with the necessities of life. This was denied by Mr. McClure, who said that even luxuries were provided for her and the children.

PROJECT NEW TROLLEY LINE.

Several capitalists of the West and South will make application to the City Council of Elizabeth for right of way covering the construction of a more direct trolley line between Perth Amboy and Elizabeth. The plans call for an expenditure of at least $200,000. It is said the new trolley company will compete for trolley passenger traffic between Elizabeth and all the points now touched by the Public Service Corporation lines in Middlesex and Union counties.

The route of the new trolley line is to be through the undeveloped southwestern section of the city, along Rahway avenue to De Hart place or Grove street to Washington avenue and the Essex and Middlesex turnpike at Rahway and thence to Carteret, Woodbridge and Perth Amboy.

Consents of property owners along the line of the road have been obtained.

WANTS GENERALS INCLUDED.

Hearing on Military Retirement Bill Will Be Held Monday Next.

Brigadier-General Campbell has asked for a hearing on the military retirement bill recently introduced by Assemblyman Lewis, of Burlington, in the Legislature. The hearing will take place next Monday afternoon.

The bill as put in does not provide for the retirement at the age of sixty-five of major-generals, adjutant-generals and quartermaster-generals, and General Campbell is anxious to have the measure amended so as to include them. His claim is that they are practically life appointments as they are made now.

COUNTY ENGINEERS ELECT NEW OFFICERS.

Trenton, Feb. 28.—The New Jersey Association of County Engineers met in annual session in the office of State Road Commissioner Frederick Gilkyson yesterday. President J. J. Albertson, of Magnolia, called the meeting to order, and spoke on "The Prevention of Dust and Result on Our Highways."

During his remarks he paid numerous compliments to former State Commissioner of Roads Hutchinson in connection with his work with State roads.

The following officers were re-elected for the ensuing year: President, J. J. Albertson, of Magnolia; secretary, Robert A. Meeker, of Plainfield, and treasurer, Joshua Doughty, of Somerville.

Jersey City Rector Resigns.

The Rev. Elmer Severance Forbes has sent in his resignation as rector of St. John Protestant Episcopal church, Jersey City, to the vestry. He succeeded the Rev. Dr. Edward L. Stoddard, the rector emeritus, who retired from the rectorship two years ago. Mr. Forbes said yesterday that he might go to Boston and engage in social work. It is said that the Rev. George Daniel Hadley, rector of St. John's church, in West Hoboken, and formerly curate of St. John's church, in Jersey City, may return as rector.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Agents for the Window Glass Trust in Vineland are trying to hire workmen to go to Lancaster, Ohio, where a boom in the trade is on.

At a meeting of City Council in Woodbury Tuesday night, a resolution favoring the abolition of the county tax boards was unanimously adopted.

Accidentally shot in the left wrist by a companion, Allen Johnson, fifteen years old, of 439 West street, Camden, was cared for at the Homeopathic Hospital, last night.

The body of a man who died in the Gloucester jail Tuesday was identified yesterday as that of a farmhand, formerly employed by Farmer Sharp, at Bridgeport. Mr. Sharp will give him proper burial.

At the election held at Woodstown there was a heavy vote in favor of the proposed road to be built between there and Manningon Hill. When completed it will make a stretch of State road from Salem to Jersey City.

From a fractured skull sustained by a fall from a scaffold at the New York Ship Yard, in Camden, Monday, Emil Oelschlagle, twenty-one years old, of 1129 East Montgomery avenue, Philadelphia, died at Cooper Hospital, Camden, yesterday.

Falling through the staging of a scaffold at the New York Ship Yard, in Camden, yesterday, William Murray, forty-seven years old, of Gloucester City, sustained lacerations of the head and face, and was cared for at Cooper Hospital.

Members of the Atlantic City Y. M. C. A. have decided to erect a fine gymnasium on land owned by the association on Pacific avenue. A swimming pool and baths will be features of the new building, which will be begun immediately.

Pleading guilty to a charge of assault and battery on his niece, Samuel Yetnick was yesterday sentenced to nine months in jail and $100 fine by Judge Joline, in Camden. The girl, Alice Samuels, was shot in the face, but her uncle said the shooting was accidental.

Teachers in Atlantic City schools who informed visiting members of City Council's Education Committee that they had never met members of the School Board may cause passage of an ordinance compelling members of the board to visit the schools at least once a month.

Lewis Bakley, the meter inspector of the Public Service Corporation, who was so severely bitten last Friday by a dog owned by Walter C. Barclay, at Collingswood, caused Barclay's arrest on a charge of keeping a vicious dog and Recorder Gross held the accused under $300 bail for trial.

Maintaining the high standard for efficiency that has been their record in past years, members of Company A, Third Regiment, at the annual inspection in Burlington last night attained a percentage which it is believed will aid in procuring a legislative appropriation for an armory.

The engagement of Miss Claire Kulp and Orville D. Oliphant, both of Trenton, was announced yesterday. Miss Kulp is an actress now, playing in "Strongheart." Miss Kulp is to retire from the stage at the end of the present season, and soon after that will be married. Mr. Oliphant is a member of a well-known New Jersey family.

Twenty-five hundred dollars' damages were awarded to Miss Fannie McCullom by a jury at May's Landing yesterday, following a tumble taken from a trolley at Massachusetts and Atlantic avenue, Atlantic City, last summer. She declared she had been badly injured, and the only defense made by the Atlantic City and Shore Company was that she arose before the car stopped.

Archie Hepburn, aged twenty-one, accused of having stolen jewelry from a prominent society woman of Rosemont, Pa., was arrested in Atlantic City last night by Detective Wilson. Hepburn is also wanted in Atlantic City to answer to a charge of embezzlement, and will probably be tried on that charge before he is sent to the Pennsylvania authorities.

NEWSPAPER EMBARRASSED.

Orange Chronicle Placed in the Hands of a Receiver.

Because its publishers, the Orange Chronicle Company, have been unable for some time past to secure ready cash to meet obligations, the Orange Chronicle was Wednesday placed in a receiver's hands. The application was made by the company, and Harry L. Holmes, cashier of the Orange National Bank, was named as receiver. He took charge Wednesday.

The Orange Chronicle first appeared on January 30, 1869, and since that time it has been enlarged three times. It was started by Frank W. Baldwin and Joseph Atkinson, now with the Prudential Insurance Company. Early the next year J. B. Lumis purchased Mr. Atkinson's interest and a short time later Mr. Baldwin bought out Mr. Lumis, assuming complete control of the paper. Mr. Baldwin has since conducted the paper.

The Chronicle is the second paper in the Oranges to get into financial difficulties within a year, the Orange Journal having recently passed through a similar experience.

Rev. Dr. W. H. Neilson, of East Ninth street, will preach in St. John's church, Somerville, Sunday morning.

CHAPTER XIII.

Mrs. Higgins Rallies to Her Colors.

The Kemah county court convened on a Tuesday, the second week in December. The judge coming with his court reporter to Velpen on Monday found the river still open. December had crept softly to its appointed place in the march of months with a gentle heralding of warm, southwest winds.

"Weather breeder," said Mrs. Higgins of the Bon Ami, with a mournful shake of her head. "You mark my words and remember I said it. It's a sorry day for the cows when the river's running in December."

She was serving the judicial party herself, and capably, too. She dearly loved the time the courts met, on either side of the river. It brought many interesting people to the Bon Ami, although not often the judge. His coming for supper was a most unusual honor, and it was due to Louise, who had playfully insisted. He had humored her much against his will, it must be confessed; for he had a deeply worn habit of making straight for the hotel from the station and there remaining until Hank Bruebacher, liveryman, who never permitted anything to interfere with or any one to usurp his prerogative of driving his honor to and from Kemah when court was in session, whistled with shameless familiarity the following morning to make his honor cognizant of the fact that he, Hank, was ready. But he had come to the Bon Ami because Louise wished it, and he reflected whimsically on the astonishment, amounting almost to horror, on the face of his good landlord at the Velpen house when it became an assured fact that he was not and had not been in the dining-room.

"You are right, Mrs. Higgins," assented the judge gravely to her weather predictions, "and the supper you have prepared for us is worthy the hand that serves it. Kings and potentates could ask no better. Louise, dear child, I am fond of you and I hope you will never go back east."

"Thank you, Uncle Hammond," said Louise, who knew that an amusing thought was seeping through this declaration of affection. "I am sorry to give you a heartache, but I am going back to God's country some day, nevertheless."

"Maybe so—maybe not," said the judge. "Mrs. Higgins, my good woman, how is our friend, the canker-worm, coming on these days?"

"Canker-worm?" repeated Mrs. Higgins. "Meanin', your honor——"

"Just what I say—canker-worm. Isn't he the worm gnawing in discontent at the very core of the fair fruit of established order and peace in the cow country?"

"I—I—don't understand, your honor," faltered the woman in great trepidation. Would his honor consider her a hopeless stupid? But what was the man talking about? Louise looked up, a flush of color staining her cheeks.

"Maybe fire-brand would suit you better, madame? My young friend, the fire-brand," resumed the judge, rising. "That is good—fire-brand. Is he not inciting the populace to 'open rebellion, false doctrine and schism?' Is it not because of him that roofs are burned over the very heads of the helpless homesteader?"

"For shame, Uncle Hammond," exclaimed Louise, still flushed and with a mutinous little sparkle in her eyes. "You are poking fun at me. You haven't any right to, you know; but that's your way. I don't care, but Mrs. Higgins doesn't understand."

"Don't you, Mrs. Higgins?" asked the judge.

"No, I don't," snapped Mrs. Higgins, and she didn't, but she thought she did. "Only if you mean Mr. Richard Gordon, I'll tell you now there ain't no one in this here God-forsaken country who can hold a tallow candle to him. Just put that in your pipe and smoke it, will you?"

She piled up dishes viciously. She did not wait for her guests to depart before she began demolishing the table. It was a tremendous breach of etiquette, but she didn't care. To have an ideal shattered ruthlessly is ever a heart-breaking thing.

"But my dear Mrs. Higgins," expostulated the judge.

"You needn't," said that lady, shortly. "I don't care," she went on, "if the president himself or an archangel from heaven came down here and plastered Dick Gordon with bad-smellin' names from the crown of his little toe to the tip of his head, I'd tell 'em to their very faces that they didn't know what they was a talkin' about, and what's more they'd better go back to where they belong and not come nosin' round in other people's business when they don't understand one single mite about it. We don't want 'em puttin' their fingers in our pie when they don't know a thing about us or our ways. That's my say," she closed, with appalling significance, flattering herself that no one could dream but that she was dealing in the most off-hand generalities. She was far too politic to antagonize, and withal too good a woman not to strike for a friend. She congratulated herself she had been true to all her gods—and she had been.

Louise smiled in complete sympathy, challenging the judge meanwhile with laughing eyes. But the judge—he was still much of a boy in spite of his grave calling and mature years—just threw back his blonde head and shouted in rapturous glee. He laughed till the very ceiling rang in loud response; laughed till the tears shone in his big blue eyes. Mrs. Higgins looked on in undisguised amazement, hands on hips.

"Dear me, suz!" she sputtered, "is the man gone clean daffy?"

"Won't you shake hands with me, Mrs. Higgins?" he asked, gravely. "I ask your pardon for my levity, and I assure you there isn't a man in the whole world I esteem more or hold greater faith in than Dick Gordon—or love so much. I thank you for your championship of him. I would that he had more friends like you. Louise, are you ready?"

Their walk to the hotel was a silent one. Later, as she was leaving him to go to her own room, Louise laid her head caressingly on her uncle's sleeve.

"Uncle Hammond," she said, impulsively, "you are—incorrigible, but you are the best man in all the world."

"The very best?" he asked, smilingly.

"The very best," she repeated, firmly.

There was a full calender that term, and the close of the first week found the court still wrestling with criminal cases, with that of Jesse Black yet uncalled. Gordon reckoned that Black's trial could not possibly be taken up until Tuesday or Wednesday of the following week. Long before that, the town began filling up for the big rustling case. There were other rustling cases on the criminal docket, but they paled before this one where the suspected leader of a gang was on trial. The interested and the curious did not mean to miss any part of it. They began coming in early in the week. They kept coming the remainder of that week and Sunday as well. Even as late as Monday, delayed range riders came scurrying in, leaving the cattle mostly to shift for themselves. The Velpen aggregation, better informed, kept to its own side of the river pretty generally until the Sunday, at least, should be past.

The flats southeast of town became the camping grounds for those unable to find quarters at the hotel, and who lived too far out to make the nightly ride home and back in the morning. They were tempted by the unusually mild weather. These were mostly Indians and half-breeds, but with a goodly sprinkling of cowboys of the rougher order. Camp-fires spotted the plain, burning redly at night. There was plenty of drift-wood to be had for the hauling. Blanketed Indians squatted and smoked around their fires—a revival of an older and better day for them. Sometimes they stalked majestically through the one street of the town.

The judicial party was safely housed in the hotel, with the best service it was possible for the management to give in this busy season of congested patronage. It was impossible to accommodate the crowds. Even the office was jammed with cots at night. Mary Williston had come in from White's to be with Louise. She was physically strong again, but ever strangely quiet, always somber-eyed.

John Foster Kicked by a Horse.

John Foster, employed by H. B. MacDonald at the Central Stables, was kicked by a horse which he was exercising yesterday afternoon on West Fourth street, at Plainfield avenue, receiving a compound fracture of the left leg. The ambulance was summoned and the injured man was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital. While the break is a bad one, the physicians believe that they will be able to save the leg.

Saved Her Life; Weds Her.

David Naar, of Trenton, has married Mrs. E. R. Lenox, of Perth Amboy, whom he saved from drowning twenty-five years ago. When a girl Mrs. Lenox's life was imperilled when she fell through the ice while skating. Naar, who was skating near her, risked his life to save her.

LOCAL NEGRO BOXER DEAD AS RESULT OF BATTLE

After engaging in a prizefight, said by the police to have been held in the saloon of John Milharik, at 1341 Avenue A, New York, Emmet Brown, a negro, was found unconscious on the sidewalk at 72d street and First avenue in that city Wednesday night. He died yesterday in the Presbyterian Hospital.

The dead man was well known in this city. Two years ago he was employed as a barber by Charles G. Mann, of Watchung avenue, this city, and he was popular with the patrons of the place. At that time it was known that he was an athlete of considerable ability and frequently engaged in boxing bouts. He was very clever in this respect and was admired by thec olored sporting fraternity, which was always willing to back him in a match.

The police arrested John Holmes, of 235 West 63rd street, New York, who was with the injured man when he was discovered;; Milharik, Harry Francis, an elevator boy at 71 West 100th street, New York, who is alleged to have acted as Brown's second; George Armstrong, of 209 East 58th street, New York, the supposed promoter of the fight, and Fred Lucas the other principal. Lucas was held in $5,000 bail by Coroner Acritelli on a charge of manslaughter. Francis and Armstrong were held in similar bail, while Milharik was paroled in the custody of his counsel.

PRESENT DAY PROBLEMS ISSUES OF BIBLE TIMES, TOO.

Discussing the relation of the book of Luke to the present day problems, Miss Caroline Palmer, a resident worker at the Christidora House, New York city, gave an interesting talk at a meeting of members of the Y. W. C. A. yesterday afternoon. Miss Palmer, who is especially active in the field of association and church work, showed a thorough knowledge of the book of Luke in the course of her remarks, drawing some powerful lessons and parallels of conditions as they exist today.

By citations from the scripture, Miss Palmer emphasized the fact that the element of Christian brother-hood was as vital in the times when Luke wrote as it is today. He spoke of the visitation of the homes by Christ, and drew the parallel for the success of Christian work, in association and church, by the same religious policy today. She also spoke of the relation between poor and rich, and the problem it presented then as now. There were about forty members of the association present.

SUCCESSFUL CONCERT HELD AT Y. M. C. A.

Under the auspices of the Jr. O. U. A. M., No. 293, the New York Ladies' Concert Company, gave a highly successful entertainment at the Y. M. C. A. auditorium last night. The program included songs by Miss Edna Kimball, whistling solos by Miss Jennie Cooper and recitations and impersonations by Miss Augusta Grimm. There was a good-sized audience, which enthusiastically applauded the numbers of the program, and was especially pleased with the work of Miss Grim.

As the result of the affair, a neat sum was netted for the lodgemen. The committee in charge of the affair consisted of P. H. Bennett and E. G. Smith.

Chancery Proceedings.

The taking of further testimony in the Chancery proceeding brought by Justus H. Cooley against James B. Wilson and others, defendants, was resumed yesterday afternoon before John H. VanWinkle, examiner in Chancery. There have been already many sessions in this matter and the taking of testimony is not yet concluded. G. W. V. Moy represents the complainant and Paul Q. Oliver and Lloyd Thompson represent the defendants.

Funeral Service from the Church.

In response to the many requests from relatives and friends it has been decided to hold the funeral service of Mrs. Nelson Runyon at the Park Avenue Baptist church tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, instead of at the late home as announced yesterday. Mrs. Runyon was so closely identified with the church and all of its interests that it was thought wise to make the change.

SECRET SERVICE MEN HUNTING COUNTERFEITERS.

Secret service officers last night were scouring the Hudson City section of Hudson county for the members of a gang of counterfetiers who have been flooding the city with bogus silver half dollars. Up to a late hour they had not succeeded in rounding up the gang.

Archibald Simpson, one of the gang, was arrested last week, after laying down one of the bogus pieces. He fought two policemen to regain his liberty and had to be clubbed into submission.

Simpson had an examination yesterday before United States Commissioner Lindsley Rowe and acknowledged his guilt. Before he was returned to the county jail he gave information that started the secret service men on the trial of his accomplices.

Simpson, it is said, admitted that he had been arrested in Europe for counterfeiting and had managed to escape imprisonment. He boasted of having influential friends who would get him out of his present scrape.

NURSE AND COACHMAN INJURED WHILE DRIVING

Mrs. Mamie Hansen, a governess at the home of Albert B. Davies, of Belvidere avenue, was painfully cut and bruised, and Whitfield Kirby, his colored coachman, was bruised about the hip by being thrown from the Davies carriage at Second street and Watchung avenue shortly before noon today. The accident happened when the blind horse Kirby was driving took fright at the noise of a delivery wagon with which it narrowly escaped collision, and bolted, throwing the coachman from the rig. The animal, which was being driven toward North avenue, turned east into Second street at a high speed and crashed against the house occupied by Mrs. Lunger, at the corner, falling and breaking the shaft of the vehicle.

When the horse fell, Mrs. Hansen was thrown against the front of the carriage, splintering the glass and cutting herself severely about the chin. Her eye-glasses broke and cut her cheeks and nose. She was taken to Mrs. Lunger's house, and after a short rest was able to return to the Davies. Kirby, who was thrown out on Watchung avenue, was bruised about the right hip, head and hands. He went to a physician, who found that his injuries were not serious.

DRESS HER BANK, LOSES ALL.

Jersey City police are trying to find $900 lost recently by an elderly woman who lives on the west side of the Heights, near Montgomery street. The money was in a bag she wore under her skirt when she went shopping. She missed the bag after she got home.

This money represented the savings of thirty years, the police say. The woman was afraid her husband would kill her if she told him, she said. She withdrew the money from a savings bank during the recent flurry.

A large number of interested men attended the meeting and many signified their intention of joining the lodge. It was decided to hold another meeting two weeks from last night when a permanent organization will be accomplished.

RECOVER GEMS BEFORE OWNER HEARS OF LOSS.

Jewelry and heirlooms valued at $700, were taken from the home of the Rev. Claudius M. Roome, rector of St. John's Episcopal church, in Montclair avenue, Montclair, and recovered by the New York police before the owner knew that he had been robbed.

The New York police late Wednesday night acquainted Police Chief Harry Gallagher that Charles Turner, a negro, had been arrested in New York while attempting to pawn jewelry, which, he alleged, had been placed in his possession of Lee Reynolds, a butler employed by the Rev. Mr. Roome. Chief Gallagher called upon Mr. Roome and told him that his home had probably been robbed. The minister upon examining the family jewel box found that several valuable pieces had been taken. They included his wife's diamond engagement ring, his mother's diamond engagement ring and several pearl brooches.

Reynolds was arrested in his room. A few months ago a box containing a large sum of money belonging to St. John's Sunday-school was stolen from the home of the Rev. Mr. Roome.

Surprised On Her Birthday.

Mrs. C. F. Debele was pleasantly surprised at her home on Pine Grove farm, last night, when a score of her friends came to dinner and spent the evening. The occasion was Mrs. Debele's birthday, and the dinner party, arranged by her daughters, the Misses Madeline and Margaret Debele, proved a complete surprise. The guests were twenty in number and the evening was passed with music and games, refreshments being served before the party broke up late in the evening. Mrs. Debele was remembered by the presents brought by her unexpected guests.

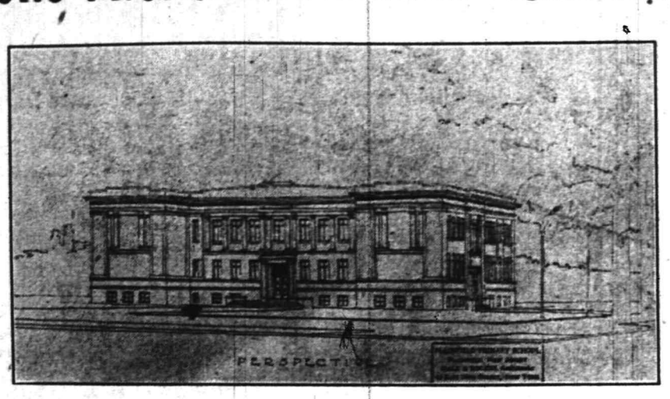
WHY BOARD FAVORS PROPOSED PRIMARY BUILDING

Official Explanation of the Why and Wherefore as to the Selection of Location and Designs for Proposed School Structure at Darrow Ave. to Cost $109,000.

WILL ACCOMODATE 500



Accepted Plans for New Primary School Building.

So much misunderstanding has arisen over the plans of the Board of Education for the relief of inadequate school accommodations, and particularly concerning its purpose to erect a suitable school building at a desirable location in the West End with the consent of the Board of Estimate and the Common Council, that The Daily Press, believes that an authorative statement of the facts will be appreciated by many taxpayers who have obtained little reliable information on the subject. With this end in view, officials in educational work in this city have generously consented to outline the whole scheme. Dr. Henry M. Maxson, superintendent of schools, at the request of Mayor Charles J. Fisk, makes an official statement as to the necessity for the proposed primary school building at Darrow avenue and Essex street. Charles W. Abbott, a prominent member of the Board of Education, explains what pains were taken to get suitable designs for the needed building and why he and his colleagues sanction the plans and estimates agreed upon.

The Location.
(By Dr. Henry M. Maxson.)

"To locate a school building, decide how large it shall be, and say how much it will cost is very easy—if one is a private citizen responsible to no one for what he says. It is a very different matter when one is a member of the Board of Education. Then his oath of office compels him to locate the building where it will really best serve the interests of the children, and to include the accommodations that are necessary. His duty to the citizens requires him to include such features and select such a design as will add to the dignity and attractiveness of the city. When he has done this, the bid of the contractor decides how much it will cost. All this requires a careful, thorough study not only of a certain locality but the whole city.

"The Board of Education have been studying the question of a new school building for several years. Two years ago the members were of the opinion that two new buildings should be erected, one at Darrow avenue and another in the West End north of the railroad, and it was only the question of cost that caused them to ask for one building instead of two. In deciding to erect one building now, it was with the intention of building another on the North Side as soon as this was done.

"Examination of the school registers showed that there were then about 70 children north of the railroad attending the Irving School. There are also ten living on the extreme edge of the city, who are attending the Dunellen schools. (The census recently taken by Mr. Kriney shows about the same situation. He found 105 between the ages of 5 and 12, but he included all who attend private and parochial schools and also some of the older children who attend the grammar school on Madison avenue.) South of the track were found about 40 children who could be transferred to a new school north of the track, although the walk would be only a little shorter than to the Irving. This would make a school of three or four classes, but to provide for the future the building should contain six rooms and the plan should be such that it can later be enlarged to include 12 rooms and an auditorium and so plan to serve all that part of town for years to come.

"Those not familiar with the conditions have proposed making the Darrow avenue building smaller and using the money to build two buildings now, but if $110,000 would build twelve school rooms in one building, it would not be enough if they were separated and eight rooms built at Darrow avenue and four rooms built north of the railroad. It would require much more money to carry out that plan and when the two buildings were done, they would be filled as soon as ready and one or both would need enlarging immediately.

Structure Described.

The building has six class rooms, a principal's office, and a teachers' wardrobe on the first flor; and six class rooms and a recitation room on the second floor with store rooms for school supplies.

Enclosed between the two wings is an assembly room of about the size of that in the Irving School, but it is entered from the halls of the first story. Its seating capacity is increased by a gallery entered from the second floor halls.

The main toilets are in the basement, but there are also toilets on the second floor so that pupils on that floor will be saved going up and down two flights of stairs. The basement will also provide a good room for manual training.

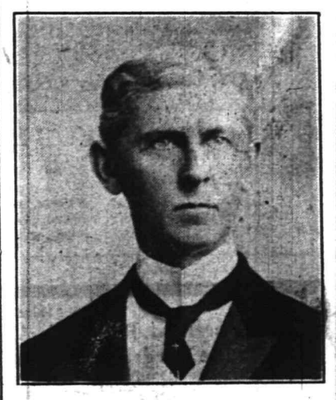
The stairs are five feet wide, of iron frame and slate treads all enclosed in brick walls on three sides, so that they are absolutely fireproof. They are broken by a broad landing half way in each flight, as required by State law.

The front of the building has a little resemblance to the High School, the plans being made by the same architect, but the construction will be cheaper in every way, brick being substitued for the terra cotta and for all stone except the water table.

The ends of the wings are blank, the windows being omitted because it is the generally accepted opinion that school rooms should have light on only one side, and all the class rooms in the buildings are constructed on that plan. The assembly room will seat about 600, and since it is on the ground floor, it will be of great value to that end of the city as a place for general meetings of various kinds.

The building is to be of water struck brick, the cornices and ornamental work being of sheet iron.

The whole structure is to be fireproof, the floors and partitions all being of cement or porous tile.



The Designs.
(By Charles F. Abbott.)

"When the High School was under consideration, a large number of architects desired to make plans, and it seemed wise to the Board of Education to secure some expert architect to aid them in handling the matter. In searching for such a man, the Board sought the advice of Walter Cook, one of the leading architects of New York, with a national reputation, who has acted as a judge in determining a number of the largest competitions in the country, including the plans for West Point, and the University of California. Mr. Cook gave us the names of a number of men that he deemed suitable for the work, but we were so impressed with his personality that, with much diffedence, we asked the question whether he could himself be induced to undertake the work. To our great satisfaction, Mr. Cook consented to act himself, and for the very small consideration of $250. Mr. Cook made the arrangements for the competition and aided the Board in selecting fifteen from the long list of architects to prepare plans. To secure competitions of high character, it was arranged that the maker of the plans chosen as the best should be declared architect of the building, while for the second and third best, prizes of $400 and $300 should be given. When the plans were submitted, Mr. Cook studied them carefully and then discussed them with the Board. Supt. Maxson also made a study of the plans separately from Mr. Cook, but when he and Mr. Cook compared notes, it was found that both were agreed on the same set of plans as the best of those presented. The Board then adopted this set of plans as those to be used for the new building. All were handed in without names, the names of the authors being in sealed envelopes, all of which were locked up in the safe as soon as received. After the plans had been adopted by the Board, the envelopes were opened and the maker was found to be Herbert D. Hale, of Boston, a man unknown to any of the Board or to the superintendent.

"When the question of a school at Darrow avenue came up, the former scheme was so satisfactory that the Board decided to use it again, and Mr. Cook very kindly consented to act as advising architect in this case also. As the building is less important than the High school, it was decided to have only four competitors, two from Plainfield and two from outside, and it was arranged that after the Board had chosen one set of plans as the best, the three unsuccessful competitors should be given $200 each to pay for their expenses in making plans. The same method of studying the plans and making a choice that was followed with the High school was followed this time, and Mr. Cook and Supt. Maxson each making a separate study of the plans chose the same set as

YOUNGER SET'S DANCE A BRILLIANT FUNCTION

The second annual bachelor dance of the younger set held at the Casino last night was a great success. It was a brilliant social function in every respect. More than 125 guests were present, including a number from out-of-town. The large auditorium, which was used for dancing, was tastefully decorated with a profusion of greens and smilax, which together with the shaded lights, made a pretty picture.

An attractive feature was the music. Brooks & Denton's banjo orchestra of six pieces furnished the music for the two-steps, while Austin's Orchestra rendered the waltz numbers. By this arrangement the dancing was continuous from about 9 o'clock in the evening until 2:30 o'clock this morning, with the exception of the intermission at midnight, when supper was served.

The patronesses for the affair included Mrs. H. E. Butler, Mrs. H. Reeve Stockton, Mrs. Daniel Runkle, Mrs. Lewis E. Waring, Mrs. Clifford W. McGee and Mrs. W. L. Righter. The committee in charge comprised C. Ames Brooks, Willard Wadsworth, Harvey Fisk, Lewis Williams, Jr., Roy Cox and J. Hartley Mellick, the last named being treasurer.

Delegates to Reformed Church Classis

Elders H. J. Martin and Robert Clark, Jr., were last night elected as delegates to the spring and fall meetings of the Classis of Newark to represent Trinity Reformed church of this city.

G. O. P. PLANS BANQUET

FEAST TO BE AT ELIZABETH.

State Senator Ackerman and His Colleagues from Union in the Assembly Also to Talk.

Letters received by the committee in charge of the dollar dinner scheduled for April 23, under the auspices of the Downtown Republican Club, of Elizabeth, contain acceptances from Governor Fort as speaker and United States Senator John Kean as toastmaster. The latter was practically certain since the conception of the plan, but it was impossible to set the date for the affair until Governor Fort had been heard from. The Governor has sent word that he will be glad to accept the invitation for April 23.

The program of speakers so far prepared includes, besides Senator Kean and Governor Fort, President Hillery of the Senate, former Governor Foster M. Voorhees, Representatives Charles N. Fowler, William P. Martin, leader of the House; Frank B. Jess, Speaker of the House; John I. Blair Reilly, of Warren county, Daniel S. Voorhees, of Morris county; Senator Ernest R. Ackerman and Assemblymen Moxon, Pierce and Kirstein, of Union county.

KELLY GETS 60 DAYS ON WIFE'S COMPLAINT

Though he pleaded "not guilty" before Borough Recorder Dolliver at his hearing at the North Plainfield police court, Nicholas Kelly, formerly a member of the Plainfield police force, was committed to the Somerville county jail for sixty days. He was taken to Somerville this afternoon by Chief Weiss, of the North Plainfield police. Kelly, who was arrested Thursday night in an attempt to break into his wife's lodging on Pearl street, was confronted by three charges at his hearing,—brutality to his wife, resisting arrest, and drunk and disorderly conduct. The judge gave him twenty days or $20 on each charge and he took the time.

The most important witness at the hearing last night was his wife, whose face is still bruised as the result of an attack upon her by her husband on Grant avenue Wednesday night. She testified that he had threatened her and came to her Pearl street lodging in an intoxicated condition. He went to the back door, where he broke the knob off in his drunken frenzy to get at his wife. Failing to gain entrance by the door, he went to the window of the room occupied by his wife and was prevented from climbing into the house by the Misses Lane. Mrs. Kelly's landladies, who beat him off with poker and broom.

Chief Weiss was summoned and Kelly and he had a lively scrap before the officer could put the "nippers" on him. Mark Lee, of Harmony street, a passer-by at the time, was one of the witnesses at last night. Kelly was warned to keep out of the borough at his last arrest several months ago.

Successful Leap-Year Dance.

A most successful leap-year dance was given at Truell Hall, last night, in which about seventy-five young people from the city and borough took part. The young women performed all the honors, providing the music, dance orders, the refreshments and even serving them during the intermission. All that the young men were expected to do was dance and this they did gracefully. The program of dances included the popular waltz and two-step, while several barn dances, introducing some new figures were enjoyed very much. The committee in charge of the affair comprised the Misses Maud and Myray Emmons and Miss Berkhan.

Alfred Korff Surprised.

Alfred Korff was pleasantly surprised at his home on Watchung avenue, last night, when twenty-five of his schoolmates and friends unexpectedly called on him and spent the evening. The young people passed the time with dancing, music and games, and refreshments were served at midnight. The affair was arranged by Preston Dunning and Wilton Smith.

Dinner in Governor's Honor.

State Senator and Mrs. Joseph S. Frelinghuysen gave a dinner at their New York home last night in honor of Governor and Mrs. Fort and other distinguished friends. Covers were laid for twenty-eight.

BURY BELOVED PHYSICIAN

Great Concourse of Friends at the Obsequies of Dr. J. B. Probasco.

NUMBER OF SOCIETIES ATTEND.

Medical Men, Educational Board, Teachers, Hospital Directors and Church People Prominent at Services.

Prominent business and professional men, life-long friends, teachers and school children, attended the funeral service of Dr. John Buck Probasco at the First Baptist church, yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock. It was an impressive evidence of the high regard in which the well-known physician was held by people in all walks of life. In the large assemblage were a great many to whom Dr. Probasco had been a physician, while not a few had been helped and assisted by his counsel and in a more substantial way.

His years of service as a member of the Board of Education and as its president, brought together his colleagues in the Board, as well as every teacher in the public schools of the city. One entire side of the edifice was reserved and occupied by members of the Board and the teachers, while a space in the center was occupied by the Plainfield Medical Society and the Plainfield Clinic, including practically every physician of the city and borough, while there were present representatives of the Union County Medical Society and the State Medical Society, as well as the Masonic and other organizations with which the physician was identified.

The large display of floral tributes was beautifully impressive. They occupied every available space in front of and about the pulpit platform and included massive set pieces, wreaths, pillows and smaller bunches of cut flowers. The tributes were contributed by all of the societies of which Dr. Probasco was a member; the societies of the First Baptist church, as well as the board of deacons, of which he was the senior member, while the public school teachers and children offered loving tribute throught beautiful flowers.

The service was in charge of Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the church, assisted by Rev. Dr. Anthony Evans, pastor of the West Presbyterian church, New York, a close and personal friend of the family. Beautiful passages of Scripture reflecting the exemplary life of the physician as he was known by many, were read by his pastor, concluding with the reading of the poem, "May He Rest." Dr. Evans followed with an earnest, fervent prayer during which he took occasion to refer to the faithful Christian life of Dr. Probasco and his long association with everything in the community that was for the best.

During the service a quartet, comprising Miss Louella C. Harris, soprano; Mrs. F. M. Ward, contralto; William Holmes, baritone, and George Smith, tenor, sang "Jesus, These Eyes Have Never Seen that Radiant Form of Thine," and "In the Hour of Trial." Howard Case presided at the organ.

Burial was made in Hillside cemetery, the following acting as honorary pall bearers: Dr. Henry M. Maxson and Leander N. Lovell, representing the Board of Education; J. E. Erickson and George H. Goddard, from the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital; Dr. George W. Endicott and Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, representing the Union County Medical Society; E. L. Bonny and Oliver B. Leonard, representing the First Baptist church; Dr. Frank C. Ard, for the Plainfield Clinic and Dr. Halsey, of New York.

Perseverance Lodge Entertains.

The members of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., tendered a "ladies' night" reception at the rooms in the Babcock building last night. The fore part of the evening was devoted to an entertainment given by a minstrel troupe after which dancing was enjoyed in the Camera Club rooms. The affair was arranged by the Good and Welfare Committee of the lodge.

Will Discuss Tenure of Office.

Superintendent H. C. Krebs, of the North Plainfield Public Schools, will open a discussion on tenure of office and rellated subjects at the meeting of the Somerset County Teachers' Association to be held at Somerville on Saturday, March 7. Prof. Alvin Davison, of Lafayette College, will make an address on "The Keystone of An Education."

Salvation Army Meetings.

Ensign James Hirschler, a converted Hebrew, from New York, will conduct the meeting tonight at 8 o'clock in the Salvation Army Hall on East Second street, and also tomorrow at 11 o'clock, 3:30 and 8 o'clock. All are cordially invited.

SWINDLERS GO TO JAIL

All But One of Chapey Family Committed to Elizabeth Without Bail.

BOY GOES TO CATHOLIC HOME.

Quartet Pleaded Not Guilty to Robbery Charge of Westfield Man —$800 Worth of Loot Recovered.

The members of the Chapey family, who have been locked up at police headquarters in this city since their arrest at Summit, were again given a hearing on charges yesterday. This time it was before Justice Toucey, of Westfield, who came to Plainfield for the purpose of hearing their plea on the complaint made by John Willett, of the former place, that they had stolen $300 worth of clothing from his hotel. They all claimed to be not guilty and were remanded without bail.

At the hearing, John Paul Wallenhagen, son-in-law of Mrs. Chapey, was represented by Walter L. Hetfield, Sr., who was retained by the prisoner's father. The others had no counsel but it was said that friends in New York have taken steps to look after their interests. Lawyer Robert Newton Crane was telephoned from the city by a well known legal firm to appear for them yesterday but the proceedings were over with at the time. Mr. Crane consulted with the prisoners and forwarded a complete statement of affairs to the New York firm.

The four members of the family, Mrs. Chapey, her thirteen-year-old son, Lucian, and her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Wallenhagen, were removed from headquarters this morning. They were taken by automobile to the county jail at Elizabeth by County Detective Galatian and Probation Officer Captain Irwin. The mother and Wallenhagens were locked up after which the machine continued on to Arlington with Lucian. Arrangements had previously been made to put him in the Catholic Home at that place.

As a result of the trip to New York made by Detective-Sergeant John Flynn and Detective Galatian yesterday, approximately $800 worth of silverware, hotel linen and clothing stolen by the family was recovered. The officers were accompanied by Gertrude Wallenhagen who took them to Cook's warehouse on East 125th street. The loot had been placed in storage there and after the young woman had given the order for its release Flynn and Galatian made an inspection of the entire lot. Through marks on the silverware and linen it was established that most of it had been taken from Nassau Inn at Princeton and the Trenton House at Trenton. It will be returned to the owners as soon as the articles can be sorted out.

Chief Kiely has been busy since the arrest of the Chapeys trying to learn the extent of their check transactions. From information already received he has ascertained that they secured at least $2,500, either through forgeries or by giving checks with no account to back them up. Among the articles found in the warehouse yesterday were two pairs of women's shoes bought by Mrs. Chapey at Princeton and paid for with a worthless piece of paper.

After the prisoners had been taken from headquarters this morning Patrolman Saffron discovered a wad of checks hidden from sight in a corner of the cell Wallenhagen had been occupying. A number of them were blank and were from banks in this city, New York, Asbury Park and Ocean Grove. There were others that had been made out and signed by "Pauline Vanoni" and "Eugenia Vanoni," the name the Chapeys frequently used. These were cashed at the City National Bank here. One of them was made out to V. W. Nash and was for $24. The police were greatly surprised at finding the checks as when Wallenhagen was arrested he was made to take off all his clothing for the customary search.

Despite the seriousness of their predicament, the prisoners have taken their arrest in a matter-of-fact way. The only sign of a breakdown came from Wallenhagen after his arraignment yesterday. There were tears in his eyes when he faced Justice Toucey and as he was being led to an ante-room for a further examination by detectives he cried like a child. The women were generally smiling and Lucian chattered in a boyish way almost incessantly. When the quartet was taken to the automobile this morning they bade a pleasant good by to everyone at headquarters and took their places in the machine as though they were going on an excursion instead of to jail.

It was said by the police today that relatives of Wallenhagen had denied that he and Gertrude Chapey were married. They have maintained that they were.

First Ward Councilman Slated to Succeed Hetfield, Jr. on County Election Board.

BACKED BY LOCAL POLITICIANS.

Referring to another great meeting conducted by Dr. Munhall at St. Joseph, Mo., Bishop Vincent says: "So much of the evangelistic work that has been done in these days is superficial and unscriptural, that I think the man who makes the record he did at St. Joseph deserves the warm 'God bless you' of every true believer in wise, evangelical work."

A cordial invitation is extended to the community to hear this devoted and able minister.

MISS HELEN GALE A BRIDE.

Westfield Society Out in Numbers When S. Chase Coale Makes Her His Wife.

The most notable society wedding of recent years at Westfield was that of Miss Helen E. Gale, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William Gale, and S. Chase Coale, of New York, held at the Presbyterian church, Westfield, Thursday afternoon. Over six hundred invitations were issued, and the church was filled with society people of this town, New York and Brooklyn. The church was decorated with palms.

Mrs. Elizabeth Hummer, of New York, sister of the groom, was matron of honor, and Harold Burr, of New York, was best man. The bridesmaids were Miss Sarah Coale, of New York; Miss Catherine Schanze, of Camden; Miss Marie Sjostrum, of New York; Miss Martha Crow, of Philadelphia; Miss Jane Sherman, of New Bedford, Mass., and Miss Helen Barker, of Somerville, Mass. Miss Dorothy Stultz, of South Orange, was flower girl. The ushers were William Gale, brother of the bride; Waldo Hoffman, of Mt. Vernon, N. Y.; Douglass Arnold and Robert Thompson, of Westfield; Herbert Knight, of Fanwood, and Robert Morris, of Passaic.

The ceremony was performed by the bride's pastor, Rev. W. I. Stearns. The bride's gifts to the bridesmaids were collar pins of a golden bell. The groom's gifts to the ushers were topaz stickpins. The only jewelry worn by the bride was a sunburst of pearls and diamonds, the gift of the groom.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents in Elm street. Mr. and Mrs. Coale sailed today for Europe. Upon their return they will reside in New York city.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Over four years continued success in the best vaudeville theatres of the United States and Europe, making thousands happy with hearty laughter, is the story of the Four Huntings, who appear at the New Plainfield theatre next Monday night, in Harry Dull and Lew Hunting's version of their topsy turvy musical comedy, "The Fool House." All the distinctive features of acrobatic comedy, artistic interpretation and earnest endeavor have landed this famous family at the very top round of the ladder of success. Lew Hunting is undoubtedly the best tumbling acrobatic comedian on the American or European stage today. Miss Mollie Hunting, besides being a "beauty" (she is called the Langtry of the Vaudevilles) as a dancer has no equal. Tony Hunting excels in eccentric comedy. Last but not least, John Hunting, the oldest of the family, plays characters of the William H. Crane order. His part in "The Fool House" is very funny, as he tries to hypnotize all within reach. A great part, and he plays it to perfection. The Four Huntings are assisted in their three-act comedy by a company of forty people, including Master Bob, the great six-year-old actor and comedian; a funny Dutchman, and an unlucky Jew, a designing old maid, and a bunch of singing and dancing girls who wear stylish gowns and look pretty.

At first it seems incongruous that a stage German named Fritz should sing a ballad entitled "Nora My Darling." But wait until you hear Joe Hertiz carol that Irish lilt and you will realize that nationality doesn't count in an affair of that kind. Joe's play is "Our Friend Fritz." It is in four acts and has an interesting plot. Besides the before mentioned "Nora," Hertiz will sing new songs of his own. In the list are "I'm So Sleepy Sleepy Now," and "The River of Life." Hertiz will present the play at the New Plainfield theatre next Friday afternoon and night and should be well received.

A local manager who has growled at the proprietor of the Big City Minstrels exacting a very large percentage for his enormous entertainment when he realized the investment extravagantly expended in the outfit and confessed it when he said: "My stars, Vogel, it is no wonder that you demand almost the whole loaf for your receipts. Private palace cars, $10,000 first part, a superbly equipped street parade, and the support, transportation and salaries for fifty people, certainly does tie up a power of money and requires a lot of coin to keep the fabric going, and with all your rivals tell me that you are walking on velvet," adding the truism, "the people demand a good deal now-a-days." Vogel added an assent as he remarked, "It was not always thus; it is a matter of fact that in 1868 a popular Ethiopean comedian sold his horse and buggy and put a troupe of fourteen people on the road with the proceeds and fairly astonished the natives." John W. Vogel's Big City Minstrels will appear at the New Plainfield theatre next Saturday afternoon as a benefit to Plainfield Aerie, No. 866, F. O. E.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

BASEBALL.

At the second session of the regular spring meeting of the National League of Baseball Clubs at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York, Thursday, the playing schedule for the coming season was formally adopted as recommended by the schedule committee.

The season will be opened in conjunction with the American League on April 14 and run to October 7. The opening games will be played in Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Cincinnati and St. Louis. As told yesterday, when the American League schedule was announced, there are only fifteen conflicting dates, and none of these will occur in New York.

The Giants will open the season at Philadelphia, playing a four-game series, and from there will come back to Brooklyn, where the fans can see the home team in action for the first time. This means a sort of double opening, as the flags will fly over the Polo Grounds for the first time on April 22, when the Giants will take the field against the Superbas. That ceremony over, McGraw's men will journey to Boston for a four-game series, and will not settle down for a regular run at the Polo Grounds until May 1. It will be a short one, however, as the team will leave there for the first Western trip on May 10, opening with the Pirates at Pittsburg on the next day. Series with Cincinnati, St. Louis and Chicago will follow in order, and the team will get back to the Polo Grounds on June 4 for four games with St. Louis. The Chicago world's champions will play in New York for the first time on June 18. The only holiday date for the Giants at home is July 4, when a double header will be played with Philadelphia. New York will be in Brooklyn, however, for two games on Memorial Day, while Labor Day will find the team in Philadelphia.

There will be a double attraction in the greater city on April 14, as the Yankees will open at American League Park and the Superbas at Washington Park, Brooklyn, against Boston. The Superbas will be at home until April 22, when they cross the bridge to meet the Giants at the Polo Grounds. They will start on their first western trip on May 10, going to St. Louis for a four game series and following at Chicago, Pittsburg and Cincinnati. The Brooklyn team is well fixed in holiday dates, as it will be at home for double headers on Memorial Day and Labor Day. Boston will be its opponent on the latter date. On July 4 the Superbas will play two games at Boston. Brooklyn and New York both have thirteen Saturdays at home and twelve abroad, while Brooklyn has six Sunday games abroad to New York's five.

A resolution was passed approving the action taken by the American League and the national commission on the question of the invasion of territory.

President Herrmann of the Cincinnati club offered a new section to the constitution to take the place of section 45. The new section reads as follows:

"Each club shall play twenty-two or more championship games with every other club in the league. A tie or drawn game, or game prevented by rain or any other cause, shall be played off on the same grounds on which scheduled, during the same series or any subsequent series, the date to be optional with the home club. If, however, all of the series of games scheduled have been ended and any such game remains unplayed, then such game shall, if possible, be played off on the grounds of the opposing club, on a date to be determined by the said club."

GOLF.

The officials of the Glen Ridge Golf Club have decided that a first class nine-hole links is preferable to an ordinary eighteen-hole course. At the annual meeting of the organization, held a month ago, it was announced that the land would be secured for eighteen holes. A committee which was appointed to consider the question has recommended however, the lengthening and improvement of the present nine-hole circuit. This will be done, and when everything is completed the club will have a course covering a playing length of more than 3,200 yards.

The competitive program at the Palmetto Golf Club, Aiken, S. C., will begin on March 23 with an eighteen-hole medal play qualifying round for the Southern Cross Cup. The first sixteen will continue on at match play for the trophy, which has been won four times by Harold Sands. The Palmetto Cup will be competed for on March 26 at eighteen holes medal play handicap. The green committee consists of C. Bohlen, William H. Sands and H. A. Sands.

The annual meeting of the East Jersey Golf League will be held in New York today. Considerable importance is attached to this session for the reason that an effort is to be made to abandon the home-and-home championship team matches, which have been a feature ever since the league was organized. It seems to be generally agreed that the members have become tired of adhering to a hard and fast schedule. The chances are that the delegates will vote in favor of discontinuing the team matches. In that case medal play tournaments will undoubtedly be substituted.

It has been decided to hold the annual inter-'varsity golf match in England at the Sunningdale Club, March 25 has been named as the probable date. During the last eleven years Oxford and Cambridge have met only twice in the London district, namely, at Woking in 1904 and at Sunningdale in 1905.

AMUSEMENTS.

Proctor's Theatre, Newark, for week of March 2—It would be hard to select the headline feature so out of courtesy we mention England's representative, first comedian and mimic, Albert Whelan. Since Mr. Whelan's initial appearance in America about five weeks ago, he has met with unbounded success, his mimicry, jests and rapid changes bringing forth nothing but unstinted praise. Another sure fire hit will be Frank Westerman and Company's first appearance here in a wonderfully realistic sketch of frontier life entitled "In the Far West." Who is there that having once heard Walter S. Kelly in his inimitable way the doings of "The Virginia Judge," will not be glad of the opportunity to renew acquaintance with this peerless story teller? Spissell Brothers and Mack get all the fun there can be got out of the acrobatic end of the bill. Jack Wilson Company will appear in a blackface singing and dancing turn. Finlay and Burke, two comedians, will win favor with their Celtic witticisms. "The Village Choir," a quartette of trained voices, helped to make W. A. Brady's production of "Way Down East" the success it was. Adamini and Taylor, a duo of accomplished musicians, will lend variety to this great program and new animated pictures will bring it to a fitting close.

Want Mayor on Commission.

Not desiring to meet with opposition from Mayor W. E. Florance as they did from Mayor Drury W. Cooper last year, the Board of Water Commissioners of New Brunswick is endeavoring to have the Mayor associated with them in the building of a $100,000 filtration plant. To this end they will have the bill introduced by Assemblyman Voorhees amended so that the Mayor and Dr. Fred B. Kilmer, president of the Board of Health, will be included with the members of the Water Board on the Filtration Commission.

The Herald's Fashion Pages are the timeliest and most authoritative in America. They contain the very latest creations secured direct from Paris through the Herald's Paris Edition. And because they do not have to be prepared from three to six months in advance, as in the case of fashion journals, the styles shown in the Herald are actually right up to the minute.

It is the same with the Herald's articles on aids to beauty and health, on household matters, and on all the subjects pertaining to a woman's life and work.

Every feature that it is possible for the best of women's journals to have, the Herald's Sunday Magazine has—and more—with the addition of a timeliness no monthly can possibly possess.

Yet the price of the entire New York Sunday Herald is but five cents—only one-fifth to one-third the price of a monthly.

Place your order now for next Sunday's Herald.

DENIES SHOWING $400 ROLL TO MRS. VOORHEES

Robert Markley, of Summit and formerly of Plainfield, was not much concerned over the story told about him by Mrs. Marie Voorhees, who is in the Monmouth county jail with Noble Gilbert, both of whom are facing similar charges. As already told, Mrs. Voorhees started a story which set forth that Gilbert had confessed to her the murder of Mrs. Morris Naftal at Asbury Park on December 13, 1905, when the slain woman was robbed of valuable diamonds and considerable money. Mrs. Voorhees has since admitted that her story of the confession was false and was uttered to make Carrie Wright, of Asbury Park, discard Gilbert, whom she (the Voorhees woman) wanted for herself.

Gilbert, in denying any connection with the Naftal murder, explained that Mrs. Voorhees had told him that Markley soon after the Naftal murder had given her a diamond ring and had displayed a roll of bills amounting to $400. Gilbert represented Mrs. Voorhees as saying that she returned the ring and other presents to Markley and that later, repenting of her action, wrote to his mother in Summit and received a reply signed "Abbot," setting forth that Markley wanted nothing more to do with her and had gone to Baltimore.

When Markley read Mrs. Voorhees' references to himself he admitted the truth of all of them, except that relating to the $400 display. That, he said, was emphatically not true, because the most money he ever had at one time while with Mrs. Voorhees was $12, as nearly as he could remember. Markley said that while working as a salesman for a New York firm he became acquainted with the woman in Asbury Park and had called on her until she told him that she was married, but was not living with her husband, who was then residing in Asbury Park.

Markley admitted having written her the letter signed Abbot. Markley has lived at Summit about three years and has been married one year.

He is a brother to Physical Director Frank Markley, of the Summit Y. M. C. A., who until recently resided in Plainfield.

Butler, Lewis G. Timpson and John A. Lawrence, of this city; M. L. Shannon and Joseph Stricker, of Perth Amboy.

BORN FEBRUARY 29, 1894. CELEBRATE 2ND BIRTHDAY

Having waited four years for a birthday, Miss Mamie Moffett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Moffett, of West Front street, and Franklin Lowe, of Fairview avenue, are among many Plainfielders celebrating the anniversary today with just four times the fun that any other girl or boy would have one a birthday. Both young people are twelve years of age today, and were born on the same day, February 29, 1894.

Today is the second birthday of each of the young people, for in 1900, their birth month only had twenty-eight days, and their last birthday was celebrated in 1904. Both are receiving gifts and birthday greetings from their friends today and Miss Moffett will have a birthday party tonight. Franklin Lowe has been especially lucky as the recipient of lots of presents, and this afternoon took a party of his "chums" to the theatre. Tonight they will be entertained at a birthday party dinner at his home in the borough.

Though few people can celebrate their birthday today, every one who is employed is "happy," because leap year this year means five pay days in February. This particular calender stunt will not occur again for twenty-eight years, and is considered a sign of returning financial confidence.

It was Pope Gregory XIII who introduced February 29, the leap year day, into each year divisible by four He wanted to keep the Equinox on the same day from year to year, and introduced the extra day into the calendar as arranged by Julius Caesar, 45 B. C. The exact length of the year is 365 days, 5 hours, 49 minutes and 12 seconds. The Georgian calendar was introduced into England and her colonies in 1752 and is still in use for all civil purposes. Russia and the Greek Church still employ the Julian calendar. The difference between the two calendars now is a trifle more than thirteen days since the Pope's method was adapted.

DR. MRAVLAG FOR MAYOR.

Former Alderman Now in Field for Republican Nomination in Elizabeth.

Elizabeth, Feb. 29.—The Elizabeth Republicans will not go begging this year for a Mayoralty candidate, as they did four years ago. Dr. Victor Mravlag, who then, despite all efforts of the party leaders who implored him to become the party's local standard bearer, absolutely refused to enter the race, is now in a more receptive mood, and, in fact, is an outspoken candidate for the nomination. He informed a reporter that he is in the field to stay until the Republican city convention selects the nominee.

What has caused the physician's change of heart in this matter is not known. As Dr. Mravlag has had a long service as a member of Elizabeth's Board of Aldermen and has a thorough knowledge of city affairs, it is felt even by the Democrats that he will prove as formidable a fighter as the Republican could name for Mayor. It is thought he will have no opposition worth speaking of in the Republican city convention. It is no secret that the Elizabeth Republicans are going to make a determined effort next November to regain control of the city government, and their nomination of former Alderman Mravlag for Mayor will be regarded as the initial move in that direction.

EIGHT TO BE GRADUATED.

Theological Seminary Class of Reformed Church Held Reception In New Brunswick.

New Brunswick, Feb. 29.—A class of eight will be graduated from the New Brunswick Theological Seminary of the Dutche Reformed Church in America on May 21. The annual reception of the class was held last night. The three honor men who will speak at the commencement exercises are Simon Blocker, of Chicago; J. Howard Brinckerhoff, Jersey City, and Jacob G. Pelgrim, Holland, Mich.

The other members of the class are John A. de Hollender, Rochester, N. Y.; Eugene H. Keator, New Brunswick; Henry C. Morehouse, Selkirk, N. Y.; Daniel G. Verwey, Rochester, N. Y.; and Rev. Thomas Brock, pastor of St. James' Methodist Church, of New Brunswick, who has been taking a special course at the seminary.

ENTERS BANK IN NIGHTROBE.

Young Woman Escapes Nurse and Flees Through Atlantic City Streets.

Atlantic City, Feb. 29.—Strenuous efforts are being made to conceal the identity of a young woman, said to be from New York, who escaped from the charge of her nurse in a Pennsylvania avenue hotel Thursday and, after fleeing through the streets in her nightgown and bare feet, startled attaches of the Atlantic City National Bank by demanding $5,000 in gold.

The sudden appearance of the thinly-clad young woman created a commotion in the bank, which was thronged just before the closing hour. Realizing that the woman was mentally irresponsible, officials carried her to an office, where she was attended by physicians. Later the young woman was conveyed to a sanitarium.

NEGRO CONVICTED OF ATTACKING WHITE GIRL.

Takes Trenton Jury Only Five Minutes to Decide that Princeton Man Is Guilty.

In the Mercer County Court at Trenton yesterday Samuel Ennis, a Princeton negro, was convicted in five minutes by a jury on a charge of attempting to assault Miss Nellie Duncan, a white girl, of Mt. Lucas. He was accused of accosting the girl on a lonely road. She screamed and the negro fled.

He was captured later in Princeton and was brought to Trenton immediately because it was feared he would be lynched by Princeton students. Ennis denied the charge yesterday. He has already been convicted three times for similar offenses and has served in the New Jersey State prison.

George L. Van Emburgh, of East Second street, after a vacation of two months, will resume his position at the white goods counter at the Woodhull & Martin store on Monday.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The women took the leap-year initiative at a novel social affair held at Jr. O. U. A. M. Hall last night, when the younger set of the borough got together for a leap-year dance. In charge of a committee of five young women of Dunellen, the affair proved a decided success. Dance cards were arranged for the men by their partners, so that every dance was "ladies' choice." In some cases, the men were called for at their homes and escorted to the dance by their partners, who tendered the invitations for the dance. A feature of the dancing was a leap-year cotillion, led by the women. Dancing was continued until a late hour, and refreshments were served in the course of the evening. The committee in charge of the affair included the Misses Irene Dunham, Alice Fenner, Susan L. Lowrie Ethel R. Clum and Eleanor Dodwell.

"Multitudes in the Valley of Decision" will be the topic of Rev. George H. Gardner's sermon at the evening service at the First Baptist church tomorrow.

Regular rehearsals of the First Baptist choir were resumed last night, when the choir met for practise at the home of Mrs. Charles S. Day.

There will be an administration of the Holy Communion at the morning service of the Presbyterian church tomorrow morning.

The March meeting of the "Doubtful Dunellen" Common Council will be held in the borough building Monday night.

Miss Elva Faga, of Mauch Chunk, is the guest of Miss Eleanor Dodwell.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Services tomorrow at the Baptist church will be held at the usual hours: Morning preaching, 10:45; at close of the sermon the monthly communion will be held; B. Y. P. U. meeting, 7:15; followed at 8 o'clock by the evening sermon.

Only the regular order of township business was transacted at the meeting of the Township Committee held last night.

Willie Stanbery, who is a student at one of West Point's Military Schools, is spending two weeks at his home.

Rev. Mr. Dieterick will lead the weekly prayer meeting at the Methodist church tonight.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Stoefel, of Brooklyn, have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Buckley, of Front street.

Several from here attended a leap year dance held last night in Apgar's Hall, Dunellen.

Miss Barbara Miller continues to improve from a serious attack of pneumonia.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

The musicale and literary entertainment given last evening in the Baptist church was a pronounced success. The soprano solos of Mrs. T. Linabury and the contralto solos of Mrs. Charles Jackson were very fine. The South Plainfield Male Quartet and the Lehigh Valley Trio rendered several beautiful selections. Miss Emma Tappen's piano solos called forth many enconiums. A dialogue by the Misses F. and M. Johnson was very funny. Readings by Mrs. Bigley, Mrs. W. H. Manning and Mrs. Jackson were especially good and the cornet solos by Roy Conyne were much applauded. Vocalists were accompanied by Miss Nellie Manning and Miss Emma Faulks.

The pulpit of the Baptist church will be occupied tomorrow by Rev. C. W. T. Attlee, who will take for his theme in the morning "The Burden of the Word of the Lord," and in the evening "A Psalm."

Miss M. Nevius will lead the consecration meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society tomorrow, taking for her subject, "How God Leads Men."

Miss Emma Manning has returned from a pleasant visit to her sister, Mrs. Voorhees, at Asbury Park.

Herbert Richards, of Brooklyn, is spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. David Bigley.

EXONERATE POLICEMAN FOR SLAYING CONVICT

After listening to nearly a dozen witnesses, the Essex county Grand Jury, sitting in Newark, yesterday decided not to indict Policeman John F. Weber, of Newark, who shot and killed Frank Ides, an escaped convict, early last Saturday morning. It is said that several members of the Grand Jury first urged the drawing of an indictment against the policeman in order to leave to a trial jury the question of whether he was justified in shooting Ides. The majority, however, favored the complete exoneration of Weber.

Policeman Weber, who was suspended from duty as a formal matter, will be reinstated by the Police Board at once.

While Weber, with Policemen Appel and Collins, was making a tour of the neighborhood in which the shooting occurred, in an effort to find a bundle which a companion of Ides dropped, they saw three young men seated in the rear of Engine House No. 19. As Weber and Appel approached, the trio ran toward Elizabeth.

Three shots were fired by Appel and Collins during the chase. Although Weber did not use his pistol, he captured one of the men. A second one was caught by Policeman Collins. The two prisoners were taken to the First precinct police station and recorded on a technical charge of suspicion. They said they were John Roder, nineteen years old, and William Beyer, seventeen years old, both of New Brunswick.

NEWARK POLICE AGAIN OUTDONE BY SHERIFF

Sheriff Frank H. Sommer had a squad of men busy again last night in Newark, and the result was a quick raid early in the evening on two Chinese gambling and opium dens in Lafayette street without notice to the police. Ah Ye Wong, Sam Fong and three other Chinese, all supposed to have proprietory interest in the establishments, and seven white men were made prisoners and taken to the county jail. Two big boxes filled with opium and smoking paraphernalia and gambling outfits also were taken.

The raids came within three hours of a conference in police headquarters between the police commissioners, Chief and Captains to talk over the descent on a dozen saloons last Sunday by the Sheriff and the raid on three handbooks in places adjoining police headquarters on Thursday.

WEDDING FOLLOWS A TELEPHONE COURTSHIP.

Announcement has been made of the wedding of Miss Emily Rowe, of Chestnut street, Roselle, and George L. Wodey, of Franklin street, Elizabeth. The marriage, which was performed quietly at Jersey City, Wednesday, is the outcome of a wire romance. Miss Rowe had been employed as an operator in the Elizabeth office of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company. The courtship began over the telephone and was carried on in that way.

The Rev. M. Craig, pastor of the Summit Avenue Baptist church, of Jersey City, performed the ceremony. Miss Florence Rowe, a sister of the bride, was the bridesmaid, and B. F. Davis, a well known druggist of the lower section of the city, was best man.

For many years Mr. Wodey served in the Third New Jersey Regiment. He was first lieutenant in Company C, Phil Kearny Guards, the foremost company of the regiment. Mr. Wodey has for a long time been employed as a draughtsman in the Samuel L. Moore & Sons Corporation plant at Elizabethport.

MANAGER ACCUSED OF THEFT.

Charged with embezzling $335 belonging to Mrs. Rose Gulick, of Washington, N. J., Charles H. Dewey, of East Orange, State manager of the Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance Company, of Hartford, was locked up in Newark last night.

Mrs. Gulick asserts that Dewey received a check made out in her name by the company for $485, the amount of a policy on the life of her husband, who died last month. He represented to her that is was a "draft," she declares, and that she would have to indorse it so that he could get the money foreher. This she did, she avers, when he gave her $150 and later sent her his personal check for the balance. The check was protested by the Federal Trust Company, on which it had been drawn, and she then had a warrant issued for Dewey's arrest.

Dewey declares that he deposited the money to meet the check, but that a note got in ahead of it.

AMUSEMENTS.

Without question the most artistic and delightful production now running in New York theatres is "The Warrens of Virginia" at the Belasco theatre, declares the Record," of Meriden, Conn. As Gen. Warren, Frank Keenan has a part where he does even better work than in the sheriff that he acted with such marked ability with Blanche Bates in "The Girl of the Golden West." And in Charlotte Walker, Mr. Belasco has another star of which he may justifiedly be proud. She is another 'Belasco discovery.'"

Mlle. Genee at the New York theatre in many respects is the most wonderful dancer the world has ever known. She is the only living representative of the classic ballet as it formerly existed, the ballet of the days of Taglioni, of Cavliazzi, of Crispi and the other famous artists who made the dance a vital and vivifying feature of the stage. She is the idol of Europe and now she has come to this country to make conquest of American hearts.

Victor Moore has really a sensational hit in "The Talk of New York" at the Knickerbocker theatre, and if a packed house at every performance is any criterion of appreciation, the newly arisen star of George M. Cohan's latest musical comedy is certainly receiving a most emphatic public endorsement. Mr. Moore will undoubtedly remain at the Knickerbocker theatre for many weeks to come.

Opt of town theatregoers may see the gayest musical production in New York this season, "A Knight for a Day," at Wallack's theatre at half the regular box office prices if they patronize the special Wednesday Excursion Matinees. The management of the company has arranged also for a special party rate railroad excursion ticket for the use of patrons of the special matinees. Particulars regarding prices and selection of seats, dates of the special matiness, railroad rates, time tables and any other desired information may be had by writing to W. M. Hale, "A Knight for a Day" Excursion Manager, Wallack's theatre, New York.

POINTS FOR THE BUYERS

Edison's phonographs and the Victor talking-machine can be purchased at H. K. Lister's on North avenue at prices to suit. A full supply of records for both machines always in stock.

A. M. Griffen, the hardware merchant, carries a full line of housefurnishing goods; also builders' materials at low prices. Contracts are also made for the installation of heating systems and sanitary plumbing work.

The Woodhull & Martin Company are offering exceptional bargains these days in every department, and the women will find many things to interest them, especially in the dress goods department. The housefurnishing goods department is just filled with useful articles which are offered at very low prices. A special sale of rugs and framed pictures is also attracting the attention of shoppers.

What Fashion Says as to Colors.

"In the choice of colors for the spring of 1908, fashion seems less capricious and more utilitarian than for many a long time," says Grace Margaret Gould in her fashion talk in the March number of the woman's Home Companion. "It was blue last fall, and it's to be blue again this spring—blue, however, in many fascinating shades, such as canard blue, which is duck blue, a very lovely, delicate shade. Copenhagen blue continues in fashionable favor, and navy blue and royal blue for everyday year are looked upon as reliable, good-style colors. Next to the blues come the browns. A beaver shade of brown is very fashionable, and so are the russets and a citron shade. Chamois color will be used more than ever, and the bread and biscuit tints. Tan is a good color to choose for a gown from the fashion standpoint, and cream is also the mode. A number of shades of geen will be worn, and a few grays on the mole order."

Dainty Bedroom Sets of Linen.

Daintiness is what suggests itself to one when the new bedroom linen sets are seen. The sheets and pillow cases are of fine double-width linen, finished with two-inch hems and rather compact bunches of small white embroidery designs. The dresser scarf and washstand cover and splasher are of exactly the same pattern. Te embroidery work is machine-made, yet very dainty and not so expensive as the handmade. One very pretty set for a girl's room was made with pale blue embroidery designs on all of the pieces.

Parasol Conceits.

Parsols, which are now being shown for Southern trips, are altogether lovely. Chiffon, gauze silk and linen are all represented and in the most fascinating developments. One of the loveliest is a while liberty satin, embroidered with a design of a flight of swallows in shades ranging from a rich cream to golden brown. This is mounted on ivory ribs and has a stick to match. The white linen sunshades show open embroideries in pale pastel colorings quite as often as the all-white needlework.

Lewis Saums, of this city, has been visiting his brother, John Saums, of Three Bridges.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

March 1: "Persistence in prayer." "Ask and it shall be given you, seek and ye shall find, knock and it shall be opened unto you."

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, D. D.

Passages for reference—Luke xi, 5-13; Mark xi, 22; Luke xviii, 1-8; I Kings xviii, 41-46.

It is quite common to find the basis of all religion in the feeling of dependence. Then, of course, prayer is a recognition of need and a petitioning for things necessary or at least for things desired.

The texts for study this week seem to place emphasis on this feature of prayer and of religion. There is much of truth in this view even if it is not the whole of the truth. We are dependent, more so than is ordinarily realized. It is worth while to occasionally pause and give a little time to sober thinking as to our indebtedness to others and our absolute dependence on God. It needs but the slightest accident or change in circumstance to plunge the most favored from prosperity into the utmost distress and need. It is rarely our own skill that gives us the advantages we enjoy. No one of us had aught to do with selecting the home, community, nation or conditions into which we were born, yet all these have had a more potent influence on our destiny and disposition than most of us have realized. When in difficulties and distress this matter of our need of help presses on us. Then it is that we are led to cry to God for help.

It is a fortunate thing for most folks that troubles do come to them. If they did not it is doubtful if the consciousness of the presence of God would ever be very vivid with them. We ought to know Him as present with us at all times, and if we forget or neglect to seek Him in our days of busy enjoyment and pleasure it is well for us that a halt in the busy whirl should be at times called and we brought to our senses by calamity. Such calamities are the richest blessings possible if they bring us to God.

But there is another side to prayer which is deeper and richer than this, which is born out of our distresses. Religion is more truly founded on reverence than upon our consciousness of dependence. As truly as the emotion of beauty and sublimity with the sentiment of awe is awakened in us by flowers and landscape and objects in the natural world, so when we come to know the good, the true, the morally excellent and right we feel the emption of the morally beautiful and the morally sublime with the corresponding sentiment of moral awe and reverence. Adoration springs up within us as spontaneously when we come to know God as the righteous and just One as admiration does when we perceive a beautiful face or an exquisite work of art.

Reverence leads to interchange of soul with God. This is a higher level of prayer than mere asking for things to satisfy bodily needs. Adoration and communion is the highest reach of personality. We come to know God, are united with him. We think His thoughts and feel the thrill of His joy and the uplift of His blessedness. We sit with him in heavenly places. In a very true sense we see God. Is it any wonder that some have in these hours of vision and soul rapture been unable to tell whether they were in the body or out of it. This experience is neither fancy nor fanaticism, but the soberest of earthly fact. It is the most real of all experiences that ever come to the soul.

This is the meaning of the opening sentence of the Lord's Prayer. "Our Father who art in heaven, hallowed be Thy name," is adoration.

He who lives the life of faith lives in the atmosphere of adoring love and continual open heartedness. He does persist in prayer, but not in the sense of continual teasing God to give. Rather would we view persistence in prayer as the normal soul breathing of vital, spiritual air, the realization of the abiding presence of the Holy One.

A Songful Life.

Let no one think of happiness as nothing more than a desirable quality, a mere ornamental grace which is winsome, but is not an essential element in a Christian life, something which one may have or may not have, as it chances. Happiness is a duty, quite as much a duty as truthfulness, honesty or good temper. There are many Scripture words which exhort us to rejoice. Jesus was a rejoicing man. Although a "man of sorrows," the deep undertone of His life, never once failing, was gladness. Joy is set down as one of the fruits of the spirit, a fruit which should be found on every branch of the great vine. St. Paul exhorted his friends to rejoice in the Lord. There are almost countless incitements to gladness. We are to live a songful life. There are in the Scriptures many more calls to praise than to prayer.—Forward.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning March 1, 1908.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Songs of the heart.—III. How God leads men.—Ps. xxiii.

Under the general topic, "Songs of the Heart," we have already studied as special subjects (1) "What is true blessedness?" (2) "How God speaks to men." We now come to the third in the series, "How God leads men." The Scripture selected to illustrate God's leading of men is the Twenty-third Psalm. This is one of the shepherd psalms of David. It is undoubtedly one of the most familiar of all the psalms of David, being the first that is usually taught to the youngest child in the home or in the Sabbath school. It is also one of the most comforting psalms. It is not only recited by almost infant voices who do not understand its deep significance, but it is remembered and repeated by the aged saints of God when in declining years they enter "the valley of the shadow of death." Many dying saints of God have pillowed their heads upon these sacred words and in peace have fallen asleep in death. If David had done nothing else than leave the world this brief poetic gem, his life would have been well worth living.

The Twenty-third Psalm emphasizes the fact that God does lead us, and this of itself is no small fact. The pathway of life often seems to us so perplexing and so uncertain and its end so shrouded in mystery that we might well at times give up in despair did we not remember that the eternal God leads us. He who is able to make the crooked path straight, to unravel the most perplexing problems of life, to bring light out of darkness and joy out or sorrow, is our guide and our leader. Well, therefore, may we place our hands in His and follow His leading, daily praying unto Him:

Lead, Kindly Light, amid the encircling gloom,
Lead Thou me on.
The night is dark, and I am far from home;
Lead Thou me on.
Keep Thou my feet; I do not ask to see
The distant scene—one step enough for me.

But, assured that the Lord does lead us, we may ask, How does He lead us?

1. God leads us in the temporal affairs of life. He leads us as a shepherd leads his sheep, and the object of the shepherd's leading was to procure food and drink for his flock. The oriental shepherd had no abiding place for his flocks. He moved them from place to place that he might find green pastures and still waters for them. Thus God, our great shepherd, leads us. "The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures. He leadeth me beside the still waters." The shepherd provided abundantly for his sheep. So does God for us if we will but trust Him and follow Him. We shall not want. Our tables shall be spread and sufficiently supplied with good things. To many life is but a battle for bread. It is a struggle for physical existence. But these things to those who follow God's leadership need cause no worry or overanxiety. "The Lord will provide." He always has, and He always will. Only trust Him, and all worry over present or future provision for temporal wants may be abandoned.

2. God leads us in the spiritual affairs of our lives. "He restoreth my soul. He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake." Every soul is dead in sin. God in Christ restores our spiritual lives. After restoration He perfects them. We no longer walk in the paths of sin, but He leads us in the paths of righteousness and of peace. And when the soul faces its greatest crisis—dissolution from the body—we may still lean upon Him. "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for Thou art with me." And even beyond death, God still keeps us. "I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever." How comprehensive the leadership of God—in life, in death, in eternity! Why should we fear? Why should we worry? Why should we be overanxious? "Commit thy way unto the Lord, trust also in Him, and He shall bring it to pass."

CHAPTER XIV.

The Game is On.

Contrary to expectation, the case of the State of South Dakota against Jesse Black was called soon after the sitting of the court Monday afternoon. No testimony was introduced, however, until the following day. Inch by inch, step by step, Gordon fought for a fair jury through that tense afternoon. Merciless in shrewd examination, keen to detect hesitancy, prejudices sought to be concealed he cleverly and relentlessly unearthed. Chair after chair was vacated—only to be vacated again. It seemed there was not a man in the county who had not heard somewhat of this much-heralded crime—if crime it were. And he who had heard was a prejudiced partisan. How could it be otherwise where feeling ran so high—where honest men mostly felt resentment against the man who dared to probe the wound without extracting the cause of it, and a hatred and fear curiously intermingled with admiration of the outlaw whose next move after obtaining his freedom might be to cut out of the general herd, cows of their own brands—where tainted men, officers or cowmen, awaited developments with a consuming interest that was not above manipulating the lines of justice for their own selfish ends? Yet, despite the obstacles in the way, Gordon was determined to have an unprejudiced jury in so far as it lay in human power to seat such a one in the box. So he worked, and worked hard.

"It Is a Tough Strain, Isn't It?"

Court adjourned that evening with the jury-box filled. The state's friends were feeling pretty good about it. Langford made his way into the bar where Gordon was standing apart. He passed an arm affectionately over his friend's shoulder.

"You were inspired, Dick," he said. "Keep on the same as you have begun and we shall have everything our own way."

But the fire had died down in the young lawyer's bearing.

"I'm tired, Paul, dead tired," he said, wearily. "I wish it were over."

"Come to supper—then you'll feel better. You're tired out. It is a tough strain, isn't it?" he said, cheerily. He was not afraid. He knew the fire would burn the brighter again when there was need of it—in the morning.

They passed out of the bar together. At the hotel Mary and Louise were already seated at the table in the dining-room where the little party usually sat together when it was possible to do so. Judge Dale had not yet arrived. The landlady was in a worried dispute with Red Sanderson and a companion. The men were evidently cronies. They had their eyes on two of the three vacant places at the table.

"But I tell you these places are taken," persisted the landlady, who served as head-waitress, when such services were necessary, which was not often. Her patrons usually took and held possession of things at their own sweet will.

"You bet they are," chimed in Red, deliberately pulling out a chair next to Louise, who shivered in recognition.

"Please—" she began, in a small voice, but got no farther. Something in his bold, admiring stare choked her into silence.

"You're a mighty pretty girl, if you are a trottin' round with the Three Bars," he grinned. "Plenty time to change your live——"

"Just move, will you," said Gordon, curtly, coming up at that moment with Langford and shoving him aside with unceremonious brevity. "This is my place." He sat down quietly.

"You damned upstart," blustered Sanderson. "Want a little pistol play, do you?"

"Gentlemen! gentlemen!" implored the landlady.

"I'm not ob[illegible]" said Gordon, coolly. "Just shoot—why don't you? You have the drop on me."

For a moment it looked as if Sanderson would take him at his word and meet this taunt with instant death for the sender of it, so black was his anger. But encountering Langford's level gaze, he read something therein, shrugged his shoulders, replaced his pistol and sauntered off with his companion just as Judge Dale came upon the scene. Langford glanced quickly across the table at Mary. Her eyes were wide with startled horror. She, too, had seen. Just above Red Sanderson's temple and extending from the forehead up into the hair was an ugly scar—not like that left by a cut, but as if the flesh might have been deeply bruised by some blunt weapon.

"Mary! How pale you are!" cried Louise, in alarm.

"I'm haunted by that man," she continued, biting her lip to keep from crying out against the terrors of this country. "He's always showing up in unexpected places. I shall die if I ever meet him alone."

"You need not be afraid," said Gordon, speaking quietly from his place at her side. Louise flashed him a swift, bewildering smile of gratitude.

Under this cover the young ranchman comforted Mary, whom the others had temporarily forgotten, with a long, caressing look from his handsome eyes that was a pledge of tireless vigilance and an unforgetting watchfulness of future protection.

CHAPTER XV.

The Trial.

The next morning every available seat was filled early. People had blocked the rough plank walks leading to the courthouse long before the doors were unlocked. The day promised to be fine, and the many teams coming and going between Kemah and the river to pick up the Velpen people who had crossed the ice on foot gave to the little town somewhat of the gala appearance of fair time. The stately and blanketed Sioux from their temporary camps on the flat were standing around, uncommunicative, waiting for proceedings to begin. Long before the judicial party had arrived from the hotel the cramped room was crowded to its limits. There was loud talking, laughing and joking. Local wits amused themselves and others by throwing quips at different members of the county bar or their brethren from across the river as they walked to their places inside the railings with the little mannerisms that were peculiar to each.

The door in the rear of the bar opened and Judge Dale entered. A comparative quiet fell upon the people. He mounted to his high bench. The clerk came in, then the court reporter. She tossed her note books on the table, leisurely pulled off her gloves and took her place, examining the end of her pencils with a critical eye. It would be a busy day for the "gal reporter." Then Langford came shoving his way down the crowded aisle with a sad-faced, brown-eyed, young woman in his wake, who yet held herself erect with a proud little tilt to her chin. There was not an empty seat outside the bar. Louise motioned, and he escorted Mary to a place within and sat down beside her. The jurymen were all in their chairs. Presently came in Gordon with his quiet, self-reliant manner. Langford had been right. The county attorney was not tired to-day.

Shortly after Gordon came Small—Small, the dynamic, whose explosives had so often laid waste the weak and abortive independent reasoning powers of "Old Necessity" and his sort, and were the subject of much satire and some admiration when the legal fraternity talked "shop." As he strode to his place, he radiated bombs of just and telling wrath. He scintillated with aggressiveness. With him came Jesse Black, easy and disdainful as of old. After them, a small man came gliding in with as little commotion as if he were sliding over the floor of a waxed dancing hall in patent leather pumps. He was an unassuming little man with quick, cat-like movements which one lost if one were not on the alert. When he had slipped into a chair next his associate, Small, the inflammable Small, towered above him head and shoulders.

"Every inch the criminal," audibly observed a stranger, an Englishman over to invest in lands for stocking a horse ranch. "Strange how they always wear the imprint on their faces. No escaping it. I fancy that is what the Scriptures meant by the mark of Cain."

The remark was addressed to no in particular, but it reached the ears of Jim Munson, who was standing near.

"Good Lord, man!" he said, with a grin, "that's the plumb smartest criminal lawyer in the hull county. That's a fac'. Lord, Lord! Him Jesse Black?"

His risibilities continued to thus get the better of his gravity at frequent intervals during the day. He never failed to snort aloud in pure delight whenever he thought of it. What a tale for the boys when he could get to them!

"These cattle men!" This time the tenderfoot communicated with himself—he had a square chin and a direct eye; there were possibilities in him. "Their perverted sense of the ridiculous is diabolical."

There were others who did not know the little man. He hailed from the southern part of the state. But Gordon knew him. He knew he was pitted against one of the sharpest, shrewdest men of his day.

"Gentlemen, I think we are ready," said the judge, and the game was on again.

The state called Paul Langford, its principal witness in default of Williston.

"Your name, place of residence and business?" asked the counsel for the state.

"Paul Langford. I reside in Kemah county and I own and operate a cattle ranch."

After Langford had clearly described and identified the animal in question, Gordon continued:

"Mr. Langford, when did you first miss this steer?"

"On the 15th day of July last."

"How did you happen to miss this steer?"

"My attention was called to the fact that an animal answering this description and bearing my brand had been seen under suspicious detention."

"Prior to information thus received, you were not aware this creature had either strayed away or been stolen?"

"I was not?"

"Who gave you this information, Mr. Langford?"

"George Williston of the Lazy S."

"Now you may tell the jury in what words Williston told you about the steer he saw."

This, of course, was objected to and the objection was sustained by the court, as Gordon knew it would be. He only wanted the jury to remember that Williston could have told a damaging story had he been here, and also to remember how mysteriously this same Williston had disappeared. He could not have Williston or Williston's story, but he might keep an impression ever before these 12 men that there was a story—he knew it and they knew it—a story of which some crotchet of the law forbade the telling.

"What did you do after your attention had been called to the suspicious circumstances of the steer's detention?"

"I informed my boys of what I had heard and sent them out to look for the steer."

"That same day?"

"Yes."

"Were they successful?"

"No."

"Did this steer have a particular stamping ground?"

"He did."

"Where was that?"

"He always ranged with a bunch on what we call the home range."

"Near the ranch house?"

"Within half a mile."

"Did you look for him yourself?"

"I did."

"He was not on this home grazing ground?"

"He was not."

"Did you look elsewhere for him?"

"We did."

"Where?"

"We rode the free ranges for several days—wherever any of my cattle held out."

"How many days did you say you rode?"

"Why, we continued to look sharp until my boy, Munson, found him the day before the preliminary at the Velpen stock yards, on the point of being shipped to Sioux City."

"You went to Velpen to identify this steer?"

"I did."

"It was your steer?"

"Yes."

"The same for which you had been searching so long?"

"The very same."

"It was wearing your brand?"

"It was not."

"What brand was it wearing?"

"J R."

"Where was it?"

"On the right hip."

"Where do you usually put your brand, Mr. Langford?"

"On the right hip."

"Always?"

"Always."

"Do you know any J. R outfit?"

"I do not."

Gordon nodded to Small. His examination had been straightforward and to the point. He had drawn alert and confident answers from his witness. Involuntarily, he glanced at Louise, who had not seemed to be working at all during this clean-cut dialogue. She flashed a fleeting smile at him. He knew he was out of sympathy with the great majority of the people down there in front. He did not seem to care so much now. A great medicine is a womanly and an understanding smile. It flushed his face a bit, too.

The Game Was On.

Langford was most unsatisfactory under cross-examination. He never contradicted himself, and was a trifle contemptuous of any effort to tangle him up in threads of his own weaving. The little man touched Small on the arm and whispered to him.

"Mr. Langford," said Small, in a weighty voice, "you travel a great deal, I believe."

"I do."

"For pleasure, maybe?" with a mysterious inflection.

"Partly."

"Business as well?"

"Business as well."

"Just prior to the arrest of the defendant," insinuatingly, "you were away."

"How long prior do you mean?"

"Say a week."

"No."

"Two weeks?"

"Yes."

"You had been away some time?"

"The better part of a year," confessed Langford, with engaging candor.

"Yes. Now, Mr. Langford, I should like you to tell me about how many cattle you range—in round numbers?"

"About 5,000 head."

"Yes. Now, Mr. Langford, you who count your cattle by the thousands, on your own sworn word you have been out of the country a year. Don't you think you are asking this jury to swallow a pretty big mouthful when you ask them to believe that you could so unmistakably distinguish this one poor ornery steer, who has so little to distinguish him from thousands of others?"

"I have owned that spotted steer for years," said Langford, composedly. "I have never sold him because he was rather an odd creature and so cantankerous that we dubbed him the Three Bars' mascot."

Gordon called Jim Munson.

"What is your name?"

"Gosh!"

The question was unexpected. Was there any one in the county who did not know Jim Munson? And Dick Gordon of all people! Then he remembered that the boss had been asked the same question, so it must be all right. But the ways of the court were surely mysterious and ofttimes foolish.

"Jim Munson. Jim Munson's my name—yep."

Gordon smiled.

"You needn't insist on it, Mr. Munson," he advised. "We know it now. Where do you live?"

"Hellity damn! I live at the Three Bars' ranch."

"In Kemah county?"

"It sure is."

"What is your business, Mr. Munson?"

"Jim's shorter, Dick. Well, I work for the boss, Mr. Paul Langford."

"In what capacity?"

"If you mean what do I do, why, I ride the range, I punch cows, I always go on the round-up, I'm a fair bronco-breaker and I make up bunks and clean lamp chimbles between times," he recited, glibly, bound to be terse yet explicit, by advice of the boss.

There was a gale of laughter in the bar. Even the court smiled.

"Oh, Jim! Jim! You have perjured yourself already!" murmured the boss. "Clean lamp chimneys—ye gods!"

"Well, grin away!" exploded Jim, his quick ire rising. He had forgotten that Judge Dale's court was not like Justice McAllister's. His fingers fairly itched to draw a pistol and make the scoffers laugh and dance to a little music of his own. But something in Gordon's steady though seemingly careless gaze brought him back to the seriousness of the scene they were playing—without guns.

CONFIRMED PROOF.

Residents of Plainfield Cannot Doubt What Has Been Twice Proved.

In gratitude for complete relief from aches and pains of bad backs—from distressing kidney ills—thousands have publicly recommended Doan's Kidney Pills. Residents of Plainfield, who so testified years ago, now say their cures were permanent. This testimony doubly proves the worht of Doan's Kidney Pills to Plainfield kidney sufferers.

Rhoda A. Martin, of 24 Jackson avenue, Plainfield, N. J., says: "I had pain in my back and loins for about a year or more, no doubt caused by my kidneys being out of order. I felt it more in the morning, just after getting up or if I did any stooping or lifting. Notwithstanding the fact that I took all kinds of medicines I never found anything which helped me until I got Doan's Kidney Pills at L. W. Randolph's drug store. They not only removed the pain, but they strengthened me in other ways." (Statement made in January, 1901.)

Statement Confirmed.

Recently Mrs. Martin's daughter said: "The testimonial given for publication some years ago was true in regard to the benefit my mother derived from Doan's Kidney Pills, and today she is as ready and willing to repeat what she therein said as she was after using the remedy."

A Marvelous Record of Beneficent Work Accomplished by this Institution during Its Brief Career of Thirty-two Years

The attention of renters of Safe Deposit Boxes in New York is called to the fact that New York State levies a tax on the contents of the Safe Deposit box of a non-resident at his or her death, which tax may, of course, be avoided by keeping one's valuables in the same state in which one resides. It is, therefore, greatly to the advantage of a resident of New Jersey to keep personal property in a Safe Deposit vault within the state.

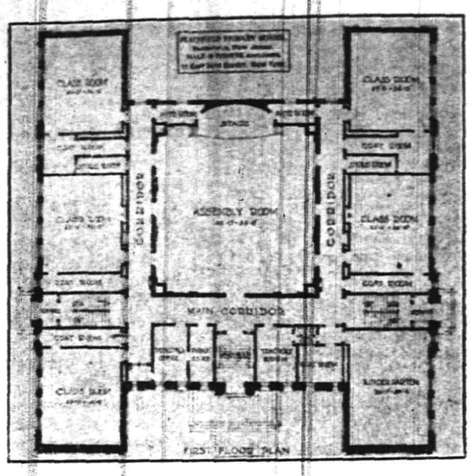
NEED FOR THE PROPOSED PRIMARY SCHOOL BUILDING



Floor Plan of Accepted New School.

(Dr. Maxson, continued.)

"There are now seven classes in the Washington school (two on half time) and one in the Whittier building that belongs to the Washington. In the Irving, there are five classes that have no class room. This makes thirteen classes to be provided for in the Darrow avenue school. If the proposed building were cut down to eight rooms, it would barely accommodate the Washington classes and provide no room for growth in the whole district covered by the Irving and Washington schools, and it would cost twice as much to build the four omitted three years hence as it will to build them now.

"If twelve rooms are built at Darrow avenue now, and six rooms north of the railroad, either now or next year, when the classes have been readjusted, there will be only one or two spare rooms in each of the new buildings and in the Irving, to provide for the growth in the whole western half of the city. This is little enough when one considers that in all the schools of the city there is only one vacant room and the city will soon face the question of additional room for the Bryant school and the High school.

"Some critics have expressed astonishment that a primary building should cost "nearly as much as the high school," but it should not be forgotten that we got the High school at a remarkably low cost. Many architects and school men who have inspected the building have expressed surprise that we got so much at so small a cost. In addition to this, it is necessary to add 25 per cent to cover increased cost of labor and material now and to make the new building of fireproof construction. Also, the High school seats only 350 pupils, while the Darrow avenue seats over 500. When the High school bids came in, it was found necessary to cut off four class rooms from the proposed plan, in order not to go to the Council for more money. Those rooms could then have been built for ten thousand dollars. They will have to be built very soon, since every class room is now full, but it will cost two or three times ten thousand to put them on. Omitting the rooms from the High school was a very expensive policy and in the end it will be very expensive to cut down the size of the Darrow avenue school.

"Those who compare the cost of the proposed building with that of our older buildings should know that the State law now prescribes rules for heating, ventilating, lighting, size of rooms, stairs, ceilings, etc., that add much to the cost of a school. For instance, the heating and ventilation in the new building will cost $11,000; in the Irving school it cost less than $4,000. These requirements are all desirable, since they all add to the healthfulness or safety of the school, but they make larger appropriations necessary for building. Yet when we consider that a school building will stand fifty years or more, a credit or a discredit to the city, according to its building, and that it will be used by thousands of children, there are very few of us that will not say the appropriation should be large enough to make the building ample and complete, with an exterior that, while not ornate, shall be something to be proud of. In twenty years, Plainfield has built only two school buildings. It has now reached the point where more extensive measures must be adopted to give relief and provide for natural growth.

"It is the judgment of the Board, after a long and careful study of the conditions, that if the money can be provided, two buildings instead of one should be erected, but if only one can now be provided, it will be most economical and will best meet present needs to erect a twelve room building at Darrow avenue."

most desirable for our needs. After the Board had voted to adopt these plans, the envelopes were opened and the architects were found to be Hall and Rogers.

"Their work on the High school was highly satisfactory, and we may confidently expect that it will be the same on the Darrow avenue school.

"When Mr. Cook was preparing matters for the competition, the Board asked him to estimate the cost of the building. He estimated the number of cubic feet that the building would contain, then found how much per cubic foot it cost to build the High school and by multiplying them found what the new building would have cost four or five years ago. To this he added 25 per cent. to cover increase in cost of labor and material and the extra expense for fire proof construction. This showed the cost of the building as about $90,000, which is the sum asked for by the Board. But the accepted plans figure out about 10 per cent. more cubic feet than was assumed by Mr. Cook as the probable size of the building, so that using the same figures of cost per cubic foot which he used, the building should really cost about $100,000, which is the amount we should have asked for if we could have known beforehand the exact size of the building.

"As a matter of fact, when the bids for the building were opened, it was found that combining the bids of the lowest bidders on each of the contracts, the building would cost about $104,000 or with the regular architects fee for plans and supervision of construction, a total of $109,000.

"It seems impossible to reduce the size of the rooms, since they are now regulation size, and the halls are in some cases narrower than those in the Irving school, while the number of rooms cannot be reduced without making the building too small to meet present needs. The Board hopes, however, by omitting most of the terra cotta, substituting brick for stone below the water-table, and otherwise cheapening the construction, they may bring the cost down to $100,000.

"From the first inception of the plans, the Board has given much consideration to the question of lowering the cost by using some of the new forms of cement construction. We have consulted various people and have had engineers before the Board to discuss the matter. We also asked various companies who do that work to bid on the building, but were not able to secure a definite, complete bid from any of them. I understand that the Mayor, himself, in his desire to serve the city fully, has submitted the plans to a cement construction company, and after studying them, they assured him that the cost could not be materially lowered by that method of construction in a building of that character.

"The Board has, therefore, felt unwilling to do any experimenting in that line and has been compelled to adhere to brick, the form that has stood the test of years.

"We wish to put up the building at the lowest possible cost, but we are building for fifty or seventy-five years and we cannot afford to skimp the building in any way that will diminish its usefulness or its healthfulness. It should be simple in construction but it must be complete and up-to-date in its features and equipment. A school building is always a conspicuous building in a city, and the public spirit, enlightened and civic spirit is shown by the character of these buildings; we cannot, therefore, afford to build so cheaply that the school will be a bad advertisement of the city to those that see it. Keeping these points in mind, the Board will again go over the plans and strive to reduce the cost all it can wisely."

JUDGE BOOREAM TALKS WITH ROBINSON'S ACCUSERS

Judge Booraem yesterday morning had the five little boys of Dunellen who accused Charles Robinson, colored, of heinous practices with them, brought to his office at New Brunswick for a talk with them. The boys are Harold and Raymond Rockafellow, Edwin Huson, James Greenholtz and William Marienschenck. It was on their evidence that Robinson was found guilty and is now in jail awaiting sentence. The Judge has deferred sentence so that he could get further information about Robinson and his offense.

At the trial W. S. Angleman, Robinson's attorney, asserted that the boys' story had been framed up by the father of the Rockafellow boys. The case was complicated by a remarkable array of Dunellen's best people who came over and testified that Robinson bore a good character and seemed to them utterly devoid of degenerate characteristics. Constable Blaine brought the boys from Dunellen and each was questioned by the judge.

It was thought that Robinson would be sentenced yesterday morning, but Prosecutor Berdine did not move for such sentence. Robinson is in jail. His actions have been closely observed there.

WESTFIELD MAN NAMED FOR HIGH POSITION

An honor was conferred upon a Westfield man this week, when John D. Gluck, of South avenue, was appointed treasurer of the National Commercial and Industrial League of Chicago and New York. Mr. Gluck is vice-president and general manager of the Pacific Coal and Transportation Company of New York.

The National Commercial and Industrial League has a membership of more than 200,000 commercial travelers and business men and took a conspicuous part in the first nomination and election of President McKinley and in the campaigns of 1900 and 1904. The league recently issued an address through its president, George J. Corey, and other officers, strongly endorsing Secretary Taft and pledging the co-operation of the league for his nomination and election as the successor of President Roosevelt.

The league will take a hand in the coming campaign on new lines and with a new organization composed of men uncontrolled by old leaders. The far-reaching character of the coming campaign necessitates an early start upon the part of the league, which intends to educate the rank and file. Reform in corporate control and the revision of the tariff along Republican lines are issues that vitally affect the whole people, and the league considers it proper and legtimate business for the commercial travelers to inaugurate the campaign of education.

Mr. Gluck is to speak in several of the cities from Chicago to New York, taking in Philadelphia, Camden, Trenton, Newark, Plainfield, Elizabeth and other cities in the State.

The borough of Glen Ridge is feeling capital, thank you, because the postal authorities at Washington have decided that hereafter the last section of its name shall be started with a big "R." Heretofore it has been officially spelled "Glenridge," and the people didn't like to have their ridge in small caps. The new postmaster of the town, William R. Poe, appealed to have the capital "R" officially recognized at the capital. The good fortune of the Glen Ridge people is now expected to inspire the residents of Bloomfield to spell the hinder part of that town with a capital "F."
